PART I. AUTHORITY FOR THE CLAIM

The Commission on State Mandates has the authority pursuant to Government Code Section 17551(a) to "..hear and decide upon a claim by a local agency or school district that the local agency or school district is entitled to be reimbursed by the state for costs mandated by the state as required by Section 6 of Article XIII B of the California Constitution." Clovis Unified School District is a "school district" as defined in Government Code Section 17519.[1]

PART II. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF THE CLAIM

This test claim alleges mandated costs subject to reimbursement by the state for school districts, county offices of education, and community college districts to comply with laws pertaining to "public works".

[1]Government Code Section 17519, as added by Chapter 1459, Statutes of 1984, Section 1:

> " 'School District' means any school district, community college district, or county superintendent of schools."

SECTION 1. LEGAL REQUIREMENTS PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1975

A. Definition of Public Works (Prior to 1975)

Labor Code Section 1720[2] subdivision (a) defined "public work" as "construction, alteration, demolition, or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority" and other defined works. Subdivision (b) included work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improvement of districts. Subdivision (c) included certain street, sewer, and other improvement works. Subdivisions (d) and (e) included laying of carpet in a leased building and laying of carpet in public buildings.

---

> "As used in this chapter 'public works' means:
> (a) Construction, alteration, demolition or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority.
> (b) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. 'Public work' shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, except as used in Section 1778 relating to retaining wages.
> (c) Street, sewer or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the state, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether such political subdivision or district operates under a freeholder's charter or not.
> (d) The laying of carpet done under a building lease-maintenance contract and paid for out of public funds.
> (e) The laying of carpet in a public building done under contract and paid for in whole or part out of public funds."

Labor Code Section 1720.2[3] added to the definition of "public works" any construction work done under private contract, when the parties to the contract are private, the property is privately owned, but more than half of the property will be leased to a state or political subdivision, when the lease agreement between the private person and state or political subdivision was entered into before the construction contract.

Labor Code Section 1721[4] defined "political subdivision" to include any county, city, district, township public housing authority, or public agency of the state.

[3]Labor Code Section 1720.2, added by Chapter 1027, Statutes of 1974, Section 1:

"For the limited purposes of Article 2 (commencing with Section 1770) of this chapter, 'public works' also means any construction work done under private contract when all of the following conditions exist:

(a) The construction contract is between private persons.

(b) The property subject to the construction contract is privately owned, but, upon completion of the construction work, more than 50 percent of the assignable square feet of the property is leased to the state or political subdivision for its use.

(c) The lease agreement between the lessor and the state or political subdivision, as lessee, was entered into prior to the construction contract.

Notwithstanding Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, there shall be no reimbursement pursuant to this section nor shall there be an appropriation made by this act because the duties, obligations, or responsibilities imposed on local government by this act are minor in nature and will not cause any financial burden on local government.

> " 'Political subdivision' includes any county, city, district, township public housing authority, or public agency of the state, and assessment or improvement districts."

Labor Code Section 1722[5] defined "awarding body" to include department, board, authority, officer, or agent awarding the contract for public work.

B. Withholding Penalties and Forfeitures; Defending Litigation, Settlements (Prior to 1975)

Labor Code Section 1726[6] required the body awarding a contract for public work to take cognizance of violations by contractors when performing public works contracts.

Labor Code Section 1727[7] required the awarding body to withhold and retain amounts from payments due contractors for any amounts forfeited because of stipulations in the public works contract. Except for final payments, no amount could be

[5]Labor Code Section 1722, as added by Chapter 90, Statutes of 1937, Section 1722:

" 'Awarding body' or 'body awarding the contract' means department, board authority, officer or agent awarding a contract for public work."

[6]Labor Code Section 1726, as added by Chapter 90, Statutes of 1937, Section 1726:

"The body awarding the contract for public work shall take cognizance of violations of the provisions of this chapter committed in the course of the execution of the contract."

[7]Labor Code Section 1727, added by Chapter 90, Statutes of 1937, Section 1727, as amended by Chapter 1431, Statutes of 1945, Section 50:

"Before making payments to the contractor of money due under a contract for public work, the awarding body shall withhold and retain therefrom all amounts which have been forfeited pursuant to any stipulation in a contract for public work, and the terms of this chapter. But no sum shall be withheld, retained or forfeited, except from the final payment, without a full investigation by either the Division of Labor Law Enforcement or by the awarding body."

withheld, retained, or forfeited without a full investigation by the Division of Labor Law Enforcement (later Division of Labor Standards Enforcement) or the awarding body.

Labor Code Section 1730[8] required awarding bodies which withheld any penalty or forfeiture to transfer those penalties and forfeitures to the State Treasurer after the expiration of 90 days after completion of the contract and formal acceptance of the job.

Labor Code Section 1731[9] required awarding bodies to continue to retain those penalties and forfeitures if suit is brought against the awarding body within the 90 day period, and shall be retained pending the outcome of the suit.

[8]Labor Code Section 1730, as added by Chapter 90, Statutes of 1937, Section 1730:

"Every awarding body that withholds any penalty or forfeiture from any contract payment, for failure of a contractor or subcontractor to comply with any provision of this chapter or any of the labor laws on public works, or with any provision of a contract based on such labor laws, shall at the expiration of 90 days after the completion of the contract and the formal acceptance of the job, transfer all penalties and forfeitures, whether withheld from a progress payment or final payment, to the State Treasurer to become part of the general fund."

"If suit is brought against the awarding body within the 90-day period and formal notice thereof is given to the awarding body within the 90-day period either by service of summons or by registered mail which is received within the 90-day period, the penalties and forfeitures shall be retained by the awarding body pending the outcome of the suit, and be forwarded to the State Treasurer only in the event of a final court judgment against the contractor or his assignee. Otherwise the penalties and forfeitures are subject to any final judgment which is obtained by the contractor or his assignee."

Labor Code Section 1732[10] limited the time for an action by a contractor to recover wages or penalties to the 90 day period after completion of the contract and formal acceptance of the job.

Labor Code Section 1733[11] allowed a contractor to bring suit against the awarding body to recover sums withheld without permission from the state, limited the scope of recovery, and allowed the awarding body to request assistance from the Division of Labor Law Enforcement (later Division of Labor Standards Enforcement) in the defense of such a suit.

[10]Labor Code Section 1732, as added by Chapter 90, Statutes of 1937, Section 1732:

"The time for action by the contractor or his assignee for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures is limited to the 90-day period and such suit on the contract for alleged breach thereof in not making the payment is the exclusive remedy of the contractor or his assignees with reference to such penalties or forfeitures."

"Suit may be brought by the contractor or his assignee without permission from the state or other authority and is limited to the recovery of the penalties or forfeitures without prejudice to the contractor's or assignee's rights in regard to other matters affecting the contract. No other issues shall be presented to the court in the case and the burden shall be on the plaintiff to establish his right to the penalties or forfeitures withheld. In case the action is not commenced and actual notice thereof received by the awarding body within the 90-day period, the action shall be dismissed on motion of the awarding body.

The Division of Labor Law Enforcement may, upon written request of any awarding body, assist in the defense of the action."

Labor Code Section 1735[12] imposed penalties on a contractor for public works who discriminates on the basis of race, color, national origin, ancestry, or religion.

Labor Code Section 1740[13] allowed any state body receiving federal loans or grants to include in its call for bids that all bid specifications and contracts shall be subject to modification to comply with revisions in federal minimum wage schedules.

C. Wages - Prevailing Wage Rates (Prior to 1975)

Labor Code Section 1770[14] required awarding bodies authorizing public works

[12]Labor Code Section 1735, as added by Chapter 643, Statutes of 1939, Section 1, and amended by Chapter 283, Statutes of 1965, Section 7:

"No discrimination shall be made in the employment of persons upon public works because of the race, color, national origin, ancestry, or religion of such persons, and every contractor for public works violating this section is subject to all the penalties imposed for a violation of this chapter."

"Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter or any other law of this State, except limitations imposed by the Constitution, the legislative body of a political subdivision which has received or is to receive a loan or grant of funds from the Federal Government or a federal department or agency for public works of that political subdivision, may provide in its call for bids in connection with such public works that all bid specifications and contracts and other procedures in connection with bids or contracts shall be subject to modification to comply with revisions in federal minimum wage schedules without the necessity of republication or duplication of other formal statutory requirements."

"The body awarding the contract or authorizing the public work shall determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in accordance with the standards set forth in Section 1773, and its determination in the matter shall be final except as provided in contracts to determine the prevailing rate of per diem wages in accordance with Labor Code Section 1773 (infra), with exceptions provided in Labor Code Section 1773.4 and 1773.6 (infra). Nothing in the Act prohibited the payment of more than the general prevailing per diem wage rate. Overtime working violations of Article 3 were not permitted.

Labor Code Section 1771[15] required all workers employed on public works be paid not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holidays and overtime work. Public agencies were exempt from this requirement if work was not done under contract and with its own forces.

Section 1773.4 and 1773.6. Nothing in this article, however, shall prohibit the payment of more than the general prevailing rate of wages to any workman employed on public work. Nothing in this act shall permit any overtime work in violation of Article 3 of this chapter."

"The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality in which the public work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract. The holidays upon which such rates shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body, but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workman employed on the project.

In determining such rates, the awarding body shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and such rates as may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Where such rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the awarding body shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in such craft, classification or type of work.

If the awarding body determines that the rate of prevailing wage for any craft, classification or type of workman is the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, the awarding body may adopt such rate by reference as provided for in such prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality of the work done for the awarding body. The awarding body was not required to specify which holidays where to be recognized, but recognize holidays agreed upon in the collective bargaining agreement, if any. In determining the wage rates, the awarding body was required to ascertain and consider wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and rates predetermined for federal public works. If such data was inaccurate, further data from labor organizations, employers, and associations was to be obtained. If the awarding body determined that the prevailing wage rate was the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, the awarding body may adopt that rate by reference, until the awarding body determined that another rate should be adopted.

Labor Code Section 1773.2[19] required the awarding body to specify what the general per diem wage rate for each craft, classification, or worker was needed in the call for bids, the bid specifications, and in the contract itself. If the awarding body did not place the general wage rates in the call for bids, in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body was required to keep a copy of the general prevailing wage rates at its principal office, as well as publish the prevailing wage rates at least one time in a newspaper of general circulation during each year, and cause a copy to be posted at each jobsite.

"Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly indentured apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is indentured.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area of the site of the public work. Contractors or subcontractors shall be not required to submit individual application for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, shall, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall, employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each eight journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards shall grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to prime contracts involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of subcontractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, involving less than two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

'Apprenticeable' craft or trade, as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When such exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contract stipulations to implement Labor Code Section 1777.5, which sets the ratio of apprentices to journeymen, and other apprentice matters.

In the event a contractor willfully fails to comply with this section, such contractor shall be denied the right to bid on a public works contract for a period of six months from the date the determination is made.

The interpretation and enforcement of this section shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council.

"Except for public works projects of five hundred dollars ($500) or less, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed as provided in this chapter, shall be paid to all workers employed on public works.

This section is applicable only to work performed under contract, and is not applicable to work carried out by a public agency with its own forces. This section is applicable to contracts let for maintenance work."

"Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly ~~indentured~~ registered apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is ~~indentured~~ registered.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area ~~of the site of the public work.~~ or industry affected: provided, however, that the approval as established by the joint apprenticeship committee or committees shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The joint apprenticeship committee or committees, subsequent to approving the subject contractor or subcontractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor or subcontractor in order to comply with this section. There shall be an affirmative duty upon the joint apprenticeship committee or committees administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work to ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each ~~eight~~ five journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to ~~prime~~ contracts of general contractors involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of ~~subcontractors~~ specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, involving less than two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the

Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When such exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contributions in computing his bid for the contract. The Division of Labor ~~Law~~ Standards Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of such contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

" (a) The contractor and any subcontractor under him or her shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing wage rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or, except as provided in subdivision (b), by any subcontractor under him or her. The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner and shall be based on consideration of the mistake, inadvertence, or neglect of the contractor or subcontractor in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages, or the previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations, or the willful failure by the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rates of prevailing wages. A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor or subcontractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor or subcontractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

(b) If a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the general prevailing per diem wages by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a) unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor to pay the specified prevailing rate of wages to those workers or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with all of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor for the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5,

(2) The contractor shall monitor the payment of the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages by the subcontractor to the employees, by periodic review of the certified payroll records of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of the failure of the subcontractor to pay his or her workers the specified prevailing rate of wages, the contractor shall diligently take corrective action to halt or rectify the failure, including, but not limited to, retaining sufficient funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project.

(4) Prior to making final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has paid the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages to his or her employees on the public works project and any amounts due pursuant to Section 1813.

(c) The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall notify the contractor on a public works project within 15 days of the receipt by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of a complaint of the failure of a subcontractor on that public works project to pay workers the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. If the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement determines that employees of a subcontractor were not paid the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and if the body awarding the contract under which the employees performed work did not retain sufficient money under the contract to pay those employees the balance of wages owed under the general prevailing rate of per diem wages, the contractor shall withhold an amount of moneys due the subcontractor sufficient to pay those employees the general prevailing rate of per diem wages if requested by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The contractor shall pay any money retained from and owed to a subcontractor upon receipt of notification by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement that the wage complaint has been resolved. If notice of the resolution of the wage complaint has not been received by the contractor within 180 days of the filing of a valid notice of completion or acceptance of the public works project, whichever occurs later, the contractor shall pay all moneys retained from the subcontractor to the awarding body. The moneys shall be retained by the awarding body pending the final decision of an enforcement action, and be forwarded to the Labor Commissioner for disbursement pursuant to subdivision (d) if the subcontractor does not prevail in the action. Wages for workers who cannot be located after a diligent search by the Labor Commissioner shall be deposited in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund pursuant to subdivision (c) of Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund.

If the subcontractor prevails in the enforcement action, the awarding body shall release any funds retained pursuant to this subdivision to the contractor within 10 working days from the date of the final decision of the court.

(d) To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties and amounts due in accordance with this section or Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the division, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section. This action shall be commenced not later than 180 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 180 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor and subcontractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor and subcontractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due. The contractor and subcontractor shall be jointly and severally liable in an enforcement action for any wages due. Following entry of a judgement for joint and several liability, the division shall first exhaust all reasonable remedies to collect the amount due from the subcontractor before pursuing the claim for wages against the contractor. From the amount collected from the subcontractor, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties.

Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker, and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

(e) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date."

subcontractor has not been received by the contractor within 180 days of the filing of a valid notice of completion or acceptance of the public works project, the contractor shall pay all monies retained from the subcontractor to the awarding body pending final decision of the enforcement action. In the event the subcontractor does not prevail in the action, all monies withheld shall be forwarded to the Labor Commissioner. In the event the subcontractor prevails, the awarding body shall release the funds to the contractor. In cases where insufficient funds are withheld, the awarding party shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement who may, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, maintain an action to recover penalties and amounts due. Therefore, for the first time, awarding bodies are required to insert required stipulations in public works contracts, to receive from contractors funds withheld from subcontractors, to retain those funds pending a final decision of an enforcement action, and to assist, when required, in actions brought by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to recover penalties and amounts due.

However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(g) The contractor or subcontractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of a written notice requesting the records enumerated in subdivision (a). In the event that the contractor or subcontractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due. A contractor is not subject to a penalty assessment pursuant to this section due to the failure of a subcontractor to comply with this section.

The rate fixed for each craft, classification, or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in the craft, classification, or type of work.

" (a) Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

(b) Every apprentice employed upon public works shall be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

(c) Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards that have been approved by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and who are parties to written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed at the apprentice wage rate on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with either (1) the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training or (2) the rules and regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(d) When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor shall employ apprentices in at least the ratio set forth in this section and may apply to any apprenticeship program in the craft or trade that can provide apprentices to the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, ~~approval or denial~~ the decision of the apprenticeship program to approve or deny a certificate shall be subject to review by the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The apprenticeship program or programs, upon approving the contractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor. A contractor covered by an apprenticeship program's standards shall not be required to submit any additional application in order to include additional public works contracts under that program. "Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. As used in this section, "contractor" includes any subcontractor under a contractor who performs any public works not excluded by subdivision (o).

(e) Prior to commencing work on a contract for public works, every contractor shall submit contract award information to an applicable apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public work. The information submitted shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices proposed to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices would be employed. A copy of this information shall also be submitted to the awarding body if requested by the awarding body. Within 60 days after concluding work on the contract, each contractor and subcontractor shall submit to the awarding body, if requested, and to the apprenticeship program a verified statement of the journeyman and apprentice hours performed on the contract. The information under this subdivision shall be public. The apprenticeship programs shall retain this information for 12 months.

(f) The apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the area of the site of the public work shall ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities.

(g) The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen employed in a particular craft or trade on the public work may be no higher than the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the apprenticeship program operates where the contractor agrees to be bound by those standards, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of journeyman work.

(h) This ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman is employed at the jobsite and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the ratio. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract or, in the case of a subcontractor, before the end of the subcontract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the jobsite. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of an apprenticeship program, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

(i) A contractor covered by this section that has agreed to be covered by an apprenticeship program's standards upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or that has been previously approved for an apprenticeship program in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the applicable apprenticeship standards, but in no event less than the 1-to-5 ratio required by subdivision (g).

(j) Upon proper showing by a contractor that he or she employs apprentices in a particular craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio, as set forth in this section for that craft or trade.

(k) An apprenticeship program has the discretion to grant to a participating contractor or contractor association a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(1) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(2) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(3) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(4) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large, or the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

(i) When an exemption is granted pursuant to subdivision (k) to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

(m)(1) A contractor to whom a contract is awarded, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade shall contribute to the California Apprenticeship Council the same amount that the director determines is the prevailing amount of apprenticeship training contributions in the area of the public works site. A contractor may take as a credit for payments to the council any amounts paid by the contractor to an approved apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public works project. The contractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. At the end of each fiscal year the California Apprenticeship Council shall make grants to each apprenticeship program in proportion to the number of hours of ~~training provided by the program for which the program did not receive contributions, weighted by the regular rate of contribution for the program. These grants shall be made from funds collected by the California Apprenticeship Council during the fiscal year pursuant to this subdivision from contractors that employed registered apprentices but did not contribute to an approved apprenticeship program. All these funds received during the fiscal year shall be distributed as grants.~~

(2) At the conclusion of each fiscal year, the California Apprenticeship Council shall distribute training contributions received by the council under this subdivision, less the expenses of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards for administering this subdivision, by making grants to approved apprenticeship program for the purpose of training apprentices. The funds shall be distributed as follows:

(A) If there is an approved multiemployer apprenticeship program serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, a grant to that program shall be made.

(B) If there are two or more approved multiemployer apprenticeship programs serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, the grant shall be divided among those programs based on the number of apprentices registered in each program.

(C) All training contributions not distributed under subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall be used to defray the future expenses of administering this subdivision.

(3) All training contributions received pursuant to this subdivision shall be deposited in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund, which fund is hereby created in the State Treasury. Notwithstanding Section 13340 of the Government Code, all money in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund is hereby continuously appropriated for the purpose of carrying out this subdivision and to pay the expenses of the division in administering this subdivision.

(n) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

(o) This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) ~~or 20 working days~~.

(p) All decisions of an apprenticeship program under this section are subject to Section 3081."

" (a)(1) A contractor or subcontractor that is determined by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards to have knowingly violated Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. The amount of this penalty ~~shall be based on consideration whether the violation was a good faith mistake due to inadvertence~~ may be reduced by the Chief if the amount of the penalty would be disproportionate to the severity of the violation. A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly commits a second or subsequent violation of Section 1777.5 within a three-year period, where the noncompliance results in apprenticeship training not being provided as required by this chapter, shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of not more than three hundred dollars ($300) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed by the Chief, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(2) In lieu of the penalty provided for in this subdivision ~~(a) or (b)~~, the Chief may, for a first-time violation and with the concurrence of an apprenticeship program described in subdivision (d), order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

~~(2)~~(c)(1) An affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer may obtain a review of the determination of the Chief imposing the debarment or civil penalty by transmitting a written request to the office of the Administrator within 30 days after service of the determination of debarment or civil penalty. A copy of this report shall also be served on the Chief. If the Administrator ~~receives no~~ does not receive a timely request for review of the determination of debarment or civil penalty made by the Chief, the order shall become the final ~~for the period authorized~~ order of the Administrator.

The Chief shall also promptly disclose to the ~~contractor or subcontractor~~ any nonprivileged documents obtained after the 20-day time limit at a time set forth for exchange of evidence by the Administrator.

(3) Within 90 days of the timely receipt of ~~the~~ a request for review, a hearing shall be commenced before the Administrator or an impartial hearing officer designated by the Administrator and possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 11502 of the Government Code. The affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer shall have the burden of ~~showing~~ providing evidence of compliance with Section 1777.5. ~~The decision to debar shall be reviewed by a hearing officer or court only for abuse of discretion.~~

The decision of the Administrator shall be affirmed unless the petitioner shows that the Administrator abused his or her discretion. If the petitioner claims that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the entire record.

(6) The ~~Administrator~~ Chief may certify a copy of the final order of the Administrator and file it with the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business. The clerk, immediately upon the filing, shall enter judgment for the state against the person assessed in the amount shown on the certified order. A judgment entered

The clerk shall not charge for the service performed by him or her pursuant to this section. An awarding body that has withheld funds in response to a determination by the Chief imposing a penalty under this section shall, upon receipt of a certified copy of a final order of the Administrator, promptly transmit the withheld funds, up to the amount of the certified order, to the Administrator.

(d) If a subcontractor is found to have violated Section 1777.5, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a), unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5 or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with any of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor or the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall continually monitor a subcontractor's use of apprentices required to be employed on the public works project pursuant to subdivision (d) of Section 1777.5, including, but not limited to, periodic review of the certified payroll of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of a failure of the subcontractor to employ the required number of apprentices, the contractor shall take corrective action, including, but not limited to, retaining funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project until the failure is corrected.

(4) Prior to making the final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain ~~an affidavit~~ a declaration signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has employed the required number of apprentices on the public works project.

(e) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(f) The Chief shall consider, in setting the amount of a monetary penalty, in determining whether a violation is serious, and in determining whether and for how long a party should be debarred for violating this section, all of the following circumstances:

(1) Whether the violation was intentional.

(2) Whether the party has committed other violations of Section 1777.5.

(5) Whether, and to what extent, the violation otherwise harmed apprentices or apprenticeship programs.

If a party seeks review of a decision by the Chief to impose a monetary penalty or period of debarment, the Administrator shall decide de novo the appropriate penalty, by considering the same factors set forth above.

(g) The interpretation ~~and enforcement~~ of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the ~~rules and procedures~~ regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council. The Administrator may adopt regulations to establish guidelines for the imposition of monetary penalties and periods of debarment and may designate precedential decisions under Section 11425.60 of the Government Code."

" (a) Any awarding body that enforces this chapter in accordance with Section 1726 or 1771.5 shall provide notice of the withholding of contract payments to the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable. The notice shall be in writing and shall describe the nature of the violation and the amount of wages, penalties, and forfeitures withheld. Service of the notice shall be completed pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class and certified mail to the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable. The notice shall advise the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable, of the procedure for obtaining review of the withholding of contract payments.

requires an awarding body to provide written notice of the withholding of contract payments to a contractor and subcontractor which describes the nature of the violation and the amount of wages, penalties, and forfeitures withheld. The notice must also be served on any bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of wages covered by the notice and to any surety on the bond. Subdivision (c) prohibits the awarding body from disbursing payment on the contract before a final order, or the expiration of the time for review of the notice. The notice of withholding of contract payments is reviewable under Labor Code Section 1742 in the same manner as if the notice was for a civil wage and penalty assessment. Therefore, for the first time, awarding bodies are required to provide notice of withholding contract payments to contractors and subcontractors which describes the nature of the violation, the amount of notice and to any surety on a bond, if their identities are known to the awarding body.

(b) The withholding of contract payments in accordance with Section 1726 or 1771.5 shall be reviewable under Section 1742 in the same manner as if the notice of the withholding was a civil penalty order of the Labor Commissioner under this chapter. If review is requested, the Labor Commissioner may intervene to represent the awarding body.

(c) Pending a final order, or the expiration of the time period for seeking review of the notice of the withholding, the awarding body shall not disburse any contract payments withheld.

(d) From the amount recovered, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties. If insufficient money is recovered to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

(e) Wages for workers who cannot be located shall be placed in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund and held in trust for the workers pursuant to Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund of the awarding body that has enforced this chapter pursuant to Section 1771.5."

Therefore, also for the first time, awarding bodies are required to appear and defend petitions for writ of mandate filed by contractors and subcontractors from whom they have withheld contract payments and served notices of withholding contract payments.

" (a) Per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel, subsistence, and apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by Section 3093, so long as the cost of training is reasonably related to the amount of the contributions, and similar purposes, when the term "per diem wages" is used in this chapter or in any other statute applicable to public works.

(b) Employer payments include all of the following:

(1) The rate of contribution irrevocably made by the employer to a trustee or third person pursuant to a plan, fund, or program.

(2) The rate of actual costs to the employer reasonably anticipated in providing benefits to workers pursuant to an enforceable commitment to carry out a financially responsible plan or program communicated in writing to the workers affected.

(3) Payments to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(c) Employer payments are a credit against the obligation to pay the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. However, no credit shall be granted for benefits required to be provided by other state or federal law. Credits for employer payments also shall not reduce the obligation to pay the hourly straight time or overtime wages found to be prevailing.

(d) The credit for employer payments shall be computed on an annualized basis where the employer seeks credit for employer payments that are higher for public works projects than for private construction performed by the same employer, except where one or more of the following occur:

to further define "employer payments".

(1) The employer has an enforceable obligation to make the higher rate of payments on future private construction performed by the employer.

(2) The higher rate of payments is required by a project labor agreement.

(3) The payments are made to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(4) The director determines that annualization would not serve the purposes of this chapter.

(e) For the purpose of determining those per diem wages for contracts, ~~entered into with the state,~~ the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute contracts ~~entered into with the state~~ shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of the ~~collectively bargained wage rates~~ collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. ~~The statement of rates shall be filed within 10 days after the rates have been negotiated and thereafter may be~~ The collective bargaining agreements shall be filed after their execution and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids. If the collective bargaining agreement has not been formalized, a typescript of the final draft may be filed temporarily, accompanied by a statement under penalty of perjury as to its effective date. Where a copy of the collective bargaining agreement has previously been filed, fully executed copies of all modifications and extensions of the agreement that affect per diem wages or holidays shall be filed.

The failure to comply with filing requirements of this subdivision shall not be grounds for setting aside a prevailing wage determination if the information taken into consideration is correct."

" (a) The contractor and any subcontractor under him or her shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing wage rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or, except as provided in subdivision (b), by any subcontractor under him or her. The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner ~~and shall be~~ based on consideration of ~~the mistake, inadvertence, or neglect of the contractor or subcontractor in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages, or the previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations, or the willful failure by the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rates of prevailing wages. A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor or subcontractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part~~ both of the following:

(1) Whether the failure of the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rate of per diem wages was a good faith mistake and, if so, the error was promptly and voluntarily corrected upon being brought to the attention of the contractor or subcontractor.

(2) Whether the contractor or subcontractor has a prior record of failing to meet its prevailing wage obligations.

The determination of the Labor Commissioner as to the amount of the penalty shall be reviewable only for abuse of discretion. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor or subcontractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

(b) If a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the general prevailing per diem wages by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a) unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor to pay the specified prevailing rate of wages to those workers or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with all of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor for the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776,

(2) The contractor shall monitor the payment of the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages by the subcontractor to the employees, by periodic review of the certified payroll records of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of the failure of the subcontractor to pay his or her workers the specified prevailing rate of wages, the contractor shall diligently take corrective action to halt or rectify the failure, including, but not limited to, retaining sufficient funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project.

(4) Prior to making final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has paid the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages to his or her employees on the public works project and any amounts due pursuant to Section 1813.

(c) The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall notify the contractor on a public works project within 15 days of the receipt by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of a complaint of the failure of a subcontractor on that public works project to pay workers the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. ~~If the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement determines that employees of a subcontractor were not paid the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and if the body awarding the contract under which the employees performed work did not retain sufficient money under the contract to pay those employees the balance of wages owed under the general prevailing rate of per diem wages, the contract shall withhold an amount of moneys due the subcontractor sufficient to pay those employees the general prevailing rate of per diem wages if requested by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The contractor shall pay any money retained from and owed to a subcontractor upon receipt of notification by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement that the wage complaint has been resolved. If notice of the resolution of the wage complaint has not been received by the contractor within 180 days of the filing of a valid notice of completion or acceptance of the public works project, whichever occurs later, the contractor shall pay all moneys retained from the subcontractor to the awarding body. The moneys shall be retained by the awarding body pending the final decision of an enforcement action, and be forwarded to the Labor Commissioner for disbursement pursuant to subdivision (d) if the subcontractor does not prevail in the action. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund. If the subcontractor prevails in the enforcement action, the awarding body shall release any funds retained pursuant to this subdivision to the contractor within 10 working days from the date of the final decision of the court.~~

~~(d) To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties and amounts due in accordance with this section or Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the division, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section. This action shall be commenced not later than 180 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 180 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor and subcontractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor and subcontractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due. The contractor and subcontractor shall be jointly and severally liable in an enforcement action for any wages due. Following entry of a judgement for joint and several liability, the division shall first exhaust all reasonable remedies to collect the amount due from the subcontractor before pursuing the claim for wages against the contractor. From the amount collected from the subcontractor, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties.~~
~~Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker, and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.~~

"(a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep accurate payroll records, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work. Each payroll record shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under penalty of perjury, stating both of the following:

(1) The information contained in the payroll record is true and correct.

(2) The employer has complied with the requirements of Sections 1771, 1811, and 1815 for any work performed by his or her employees on the public works project.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) A contractor or subcontractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days

A joint labor management committee may maintain an action in a court of competent jurisdiction against an employer who fails to comply with Section 1774. The court may award restitution to an employee for unpaid wages and may award the joint labor management committee reasonable attorney's fee and costs incurred in maintaining the action. An action under this subdivision may not be based on the employer's misclassification of the craft of a worker on its certified payroll records. Nothing in this subdivision limits any other available remedies for a violation of this chapter.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

Also, any copies of records made available by, or furnished to, a joint labor-management committee shall be marked or obliterated only to prevent disclosure of an individual's name and social security number.

Labor Code Section 1813[99] operative only until January 1, 2003, to require the contractor to forfeit the sum of $25 for any worker permitted to work more than 8 hours in a day or 40 hours in a week. New Labor Code Section 1813 requires an awarding body to cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation regarding the penalties, to take cognizance of all violations, and to report them to the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. Therefore, for the first time, awarding bodies are required to place penalty stipulations in their contract regarding maximum working hours, to take cognizance of all violations and to report those violations to the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.

SECTION 3. DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS REGULATIONS

Regulations restating code requirements, expanding duties and creating new duties are found in Title 8, California Code of Regulations. Copies of those regulations are found in Exhibit 4 which is attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference.

A. Definition of Public Works

Subchapter 3, "Payment of Prevailing Wages upon Public Works", is set forth in four articles. The first two articles pertain to the definition of Public Works.

"The contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each workman employed in the execution of the contract by the contractor or by any subcontractor for each calendar day during which the workman is required or permitted to work more than 8 hours in any one calendar day and 40 hours in any one calendar week in violation of the provisions of this article. In awarding any contract for public work, the awarding body shall cause to be inserted therein a stipulation to this effect. The awarding body shall take cognizance of all violations of this article committed in the course of the execution of the contract, and shall report them to the officer of the state or political subdivision who is authorized to pay the contractor money due him or her under the contract.

This section shall become operative January 1, 2003."

Article 1 (Section 16000) contains definitions. Section 16000 defines words and phrases used in Public Works law, including the term "Awarding Body" to mean any state or local government agency, department, board, commission, bureau, district, office, authority, political subdivision, regional district officer, employee, or agent awarding/letting a contract or purchase order for public works. "Maintenance work" is defined to include (1) routine, recurring, and usual work for preservation, protection, and keeping of any publicly owned or publicly operated facility in a safe and continually usable condition, (2) carpentry, electrical, plumbing, glazing, and other craft works designed to preserve a facility in a safe, efficient, continuously usable condition[101], and (3) landscape maintenance. "Landscape maintenance work" includes works as defined in Public Contract Code 22002[102], subdivision (d)(4), which is defined as mowing, [101] "Maintenance work" does not include janitorial or custodial services or protection by guards, watchmen, or other security services.

[102] Public Contract Code Section 22002, former Section 21002, added by Chapter 1054, Statutes of 1983, Section 1, as amended by Chapter 733, Statutes of 1989, Section 1:

> " (a) "Public agency," for purposes of this chapter, means a city, county, city and county, including chartered cities and chartered counties, any special district, and any other agency of the state for the local performance of governmental or proprietary functions within limited boundaries. "Public agency" also includes a nonprofit transit corporation wholly owned by a public agency and formed to carry out the purposes of the public agency.
>
> (b) "Representatives of the construction industry" for purposes of this chapter, means a general contractor, subcontractor, or labor representative with experience in the field of public works construction.
> (c) "Public project" means any of the following:

watering, trimming, pruning, planting, replacement of plants, and servicing of irrigation and sprinkler systems.

Article 2 (Sections 16001 through 16003) pertains to what work is subject to prevailing wages.

Section 16001 allows the awarding body, and other interested parties, to request from the Director of Industrial Relations a "coverage determination" regarding a specific

(1) Construction, reconstruction, erection, alteration, renovation, improvement, demolition, and repair work involving any publicly owned, leased, or operated facility.

(2) Painting or repainting of any publicly owned, leased, or operated facility.

(3) In the case of a publicly owned utility system, "public project" shall include only the construction, erection, improvement, or repair of dams, reservoirs, powerplants, and electrical transmission lines of 230,000 volts and higher.

(d) "Public project" does not include maintenance work. For purposes of this section, "maintenance work" includes all of the following:

(1) Routine, recurring, and usual work for the preservation or protection of any publicly owned or publicly operated facility for its intended purposes.

(2) Minor repainting.

(3) Resurfacing of streets and highways at less than one inch.

(4) Landscape maintenance, including mowing, watering, trimming, pruning, planting, replacement of plants, and servicing of irrigation and sprinkler systems.

(5) Work performed to keep, operate, and maintain publicly owned water, power, or waste disposal systems, including, but not limited to, dams, reservoirs, powerplants, and electrical transmission lines of 230,000 volts and higher.

project or type of work to be performed. Upon receipt of a copy of a request by an interested party, the awarding body must then forward to the Director, within 15 days, any documents, arguments, or authorities it wishes to have considered in the coverage determination process. Section 16001, subdivision (c) extends state prevailing wage law to field surveying work traditionally covered by collective bargaining agreements, when the work is integral to the specific public works project in the design, preconstruction, or construction phases. Subdivision (d) also applies prevailing wage law to residential projects consisting of single family homes and apartments up to and including four stories, which can include school dormitories. Subdivision (e) applies prevailing wage laws to commercial projects, including residential projects over four stories (which can also include school dormitories), and subdivision (f) applies prevailing laws to maintenance work.

Section 16002.5 allows an interested party, including awarding bodies, to appeal a coverage determination decision by the Director of Industrial Relations. The party appealing the determination, if other than an awarding body, must, in writing, notify the awarding body and other identifiable parties.

Section 16003 requires an awarding body wishing to use volunteer labor on what would otherwise be a public works project to serve a written request for approval on the Director which shall fully set forth its grounds for belief that the requirements of Labor Code Section 1720.4(a),(b), and (c) are satisfied and shall list all the crafts and classifications of workers that typically perform the types of work needed for the project. The request shall also identify the unions which represent workers in the crafts or classifications listed within the locality in which the public work is performed.

B. Withholding Penalties and Forfeitures; Defending Litigation, Settlements

Article 7 (Sections 16410 through 16414) pertains to the withholding of funds from a contractor and due process hearing procedures.

Section 16410 defines "awarding body" to mean the same as in Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code - "Public Works and Public Agencies".

Section 16411 requires the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to give written notice to the awarding body of any decision to withhold, retain, or forfeit any sum due to a contractor or subcontractor. The notice shall contain the following information:

(1) The amount to be withheld, retained or forfeited.

(2) A short statement of the factual basis upon which said amount is to be withheld, retained or forfeited, including, but not limited to, the computation of any wages found to be due, and the computation of any penalties assessed under Labor Code section 1775.

(3) Notice of the right to request a hearing under these regulations, and of the manner in which, and the time within which, a hearing must be requested.

Section 16412 requires the awarding body to withhold, retain, or forfeit amounts from a contractor or subcontractor when notice has been received from the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, subject to the right of a contractor or subcontractor to request a hearing, and further subject to the right of a contractor or contractor's assignee to bring suit against the awarding body.

Section 16413 allows a contractor or subcontractor to request a hearing before the Department of Industrial Relations regarding the withholding, retaining, or forfeiture of any amount and sets forth the required contents of such a request.

Section 16414 requires the Labor Commissioner to provide a hearing within 30 days of a timely request and to issue a decision within 15 days after the conclusion of the hearing. The decision shall consist of a notice of findings, findings and an order which shall be served on the awarding body. The awarding body is required to promptly abide by the decision and order.

Article 6 (Sections 16400 through 16403) pertains to certified payroll records, requests for copies, contents and costs.

Section 16400, subdivision (a)(1), allows any person to request from an awarding body certified copies of payroll records. If a request is made, the awarding body is required to acknowledge the receipt of the request, and indicate the cost of providing the payroll records based upon an estimate provided by the contractor or subcontractor.

Section 16401 requires the awarding body to supply a report of payroll records on forms provided by the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement which shall be certified under penalty of perjury.

Section 16402 establishes the maximum costs for providing copies of payroll records and requires the awarding body to obtain payment from the requesting party prior to the release of the documents. To the extent that copy cost revenues are received, those amounts would be accounted for as a reduction in the mandated costs incurred by the awarding body for receiving and processing those requests and the costs charged by the contractor for producing those records.

Section 16403 subdivision (a), requires the awarding body to keep records received from a contractor on file for at least six months following completion and acceptance of the project. Thereafter, the records may be destroyed unless administrative, judicial, or other pending litigation, including arbitration, mediation, or other methods of dispute resolution are in process. Subdivision (b) requires that copies provided to the public shall be marked or obliterated in such a manner that the name, address and social security number and other private information pertaining to each employee cannot be identified.

Subchapter 6 pertains to hearings to review Assessments and Notices of Withholding of Contract Payments. Article 1 (sections 17201 through 17212) sets forth the general requirements for those hearings.

Section 17201 defines the scope of proceedings for review of civil wage and penalty assessments ("Assessments") and Notices of Withholding of Contract Payments under Article 1 and 2 of Division 2, Part 7, Chapter 1, of the Labor Code, and limits its applicability to assessments and notices served on a contractor or subcontractor on or after July 1, 2001.

Section 17202 defines terms relevant to those hearings. Subdivision (c) defines "awarding body" to include an awarding body or body awarding a contract, (as defined in Labor Code Section 1722) and that exercises enforcement authority under Labor Code Section 1726 or 1771.5. Subdivision (f) defines "Enforcing Agency" to include the entity which has issued an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments and with which a request for review has been filed. Subdivision (j) defines "Party" to include the enforcing agency that issued the Assessment or the Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments from which review is sought.

Sections 17203 through 17212 define hearing procedures and rules relevant to those hearings.

Article 2 (Sections 17220 through 17229) pertains to Penalty and Wage Assessments and Notices of Withholding of Contract Payments, and requests for review.

Section 17220, subdivision (a), requires the enforcing agency to serve an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments on the contractor and/or subcontractor, with a copy being served on any bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of wages and to any Surety on the bond. Subdivision (b) requires that the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments be in writing and shall include the following information:

1. A description of the nature of the violation and basis for the notice.

2. The amount of wages, penalties and forfeitures due, including a specification of amounts that have been or will be withheld from available contract payments, as well as all additional amounts that the enforcing agency has determined are due, including the amount of any liquidated damages that potentially may be awarded under Labor Code section 1742.1.

3. The name and address of the office to whom a Request for Review may be sent.

4. Information on the procedures for obtaining review of an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

5. Notice of Opportunity to request a settlement meeting under Section 17221.

6. A statement appearing in bold or another type of face, that makes it stand out from other text, to the effect that failure to submit a timely request for review will result in a final order binding on the contractor and subcontractor, and on the bonding company.

Section 17221 allows the affected contractor or subcontractor to request a meeting with the awarding body or Labor Commissioner within 30 days following service of an Assessment of penalties or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments for the purposes of attempting to settling the dispute regarding the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

Section 17222 sets forth the procedures for requesting a review of an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

Section 17223 requires the awarding body or Labor Commissioner to transmit to the Office of the Director the request for review, along with copies of the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, any audit summary that accompanied the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, and a copy of the proof of service showing the name and address of any bonding company or surety.

Section 17224 requires the awarding body or Labor Commissioner to notify the affected contractor and subcontractor, within 10 days following its receipt of a request for review, of its opportunity and procedures for reviewing evidence to be utilized by the enforcing agency at the hearing. Subdivision (d) requires the awarding body or Labor Commissioner to make evidence available for review as specified within 20 days of its receipt of the request for review.

Section 17225, subdivision (a), allows an affected contractor and subcontractor to withdraw a request for review. Subdivision (b) allows a dismissed request for review to be reinstated for good cause.

Section 17226 allows an awarding body or Labor Commissioner to dismiss or amend an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

Section 17227, subdivision (a), allows a hearing officer to issue an Order to Show Cause why an Assessment, Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, or request for review should not be dismissed as untimely under the relevant statutes. Subdivision (b) allows any party at least 10 days to respond in writing to the Order to Show Cause and an additional 5 days, following the service of a response, to reply to the response of any other party.

Section 17228, subdivision (a), provides that an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments shall become a final order upon the failure of an affected contractor or subcontractor to file an timely request for review. Subdivision (b) provides that, when an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments has become final as to at least one, but not as to every affected contractor or subcontractor, the awarding body shall continue to withhold and retain the amounts required to satisfy any wages and penalties at stake in a review proceeding until there is a final order as to all that is no longer subject to judicial review.

Section 17229 provides that where a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments seeks to recover wages, penalties or damages in excess of the amounts withheld from available contract payments, the awarding body may recover any excess amounts that become or remain due when the Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments has become final. To recover the excess amounts, the awarding body shall transmit to the Labor Commissioner the Notice together with any decision of the Director or court that has become final. The Labor Commissioner shall, in turn, certify and file the final order with the superior court in accordance with Labor Code section 1742(d). Once filed, the awarding body would be required to pursue judgment debtor collection proceedings as any other judgment creditor.

Article 3 (Sections 17230 through 17237) pertains to prehearing procedures, including the scheduling of hearings (Section 17230), prehearing conferences (Section 17231), consolidations and severances (Section 17232), prehearing motions (Section 17233), the proffer of evidence by affidavit or declaration (Section 17234), authority and use of subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum (Section 17235), written notice to parties in lieu of subpoena (Section 17236) and depositions and other discovery procedures (Section 17237).

Sections 17240 through 17253 sets forth the required hearing procedures, such as notice of appointment of hearing officers, including the filing of motions, affidavits and declarations objecting to the appointment of a particular hearing officer (Section 17240), the time and place of hearings which could be outside of the county of the awarding body (Section 17241), open hearings and the right of a party to move to exclude witnesses (Section 17242), the conduct of the hearing, including a party's right to call and examine witnesses, to introduce exhibits, to cross-examine witnesses, the right to impeach any witness and to rebut any opposing evidence (Section 17243), rules of evidence (Section 17244), official notice and the opportunity to show why and to the extent to which official notice should or not be taken (Section 17245), the filing of motions supported by affidavits or declarations requesting relief from default upon a showing of good cause (Section 17246), the request for and opposition to contempt and monetary sanctions (Section 17247), the request for, use and cost of interpreters (Section 17248), the hearing record, including the right to use a certified court reporter, videotape or other appropriate means to record and preserve testimony and the cost thereof (Section 17249), burdens of proof (Section 17250), the placing on the awarding body the burden of coming forward with evidence relative to liquidated damages (Section 17251), the submission of prehearing briefs, presenting closing oral argument, written post-hearing briefs and the preparation of findings (Section 17252), and the conclusion and time for decision (Section 17253).

Article 6 (Sections 17260 through 17264) pertain to the decision of the Director.

Section 17260 requires the hearing officer to prepare a recommended decision for the Director of Industrial Relations' review and approval.

Section 17261 allows any party to apply for reconsideration or modification of a decision. Section 17262 provides for the final decision and time in which to seek review. Section 17263 requires the Department, upon request, to prepare a hearing record consisting of all exhibits, other papers and a transcript of all testimony. The moving party who requested the record shall bear the cost of its preparation. Section 17264 allows any party to a judicial review of the decision to request the Director to file a written response.

Article 8 of Subchapter 4 (Sections 16800 through 16802) pertains to Debarment of contractors and subcontractors.

Section 16800 defines terms relevant to debarment proceedings. "Person" is defined to include awarding bodies.

Section 16801 allows the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to investigate any alleged violations of relevant labor laws and to conduct hearings to determine facts.

When requested or required, an awarding body shall assist and cooperate with the investigation. Subdivision (b) requires an awarding body to inform contractors of the requirements of Labor Code Section 1776, and any other requirements imposed by law, in order to assist the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement with an investigation pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.1.

C. Wages - Prevailing Wage Rates

Article 4 of Subchapter 3 (Sections 16200 through 16206) pertains to Prevailing Wage Determinations.

Section 16202, subdivision (a), requires the awarding body to request from the Director of Industrial Relations a determination of prevailing wage rates for a particular craft, classification or type of worker not covered by a general determination at least 45 days prior to the bid advertisement date.

Section 16204, subdivision (a)(5), requires the awarding body to ensure that the correct determination of prevailing wage rates is used by the Director of Industrial Relations.

Section 16205 allows an awarding body to request to be put on a mailing list for all area wage determinations for a specific county or counties, or request that a special or general prevailing wage determination be furnished when needed. The request must be confirmed in writing and must specify the location where the public work is to be performed, including the county and the particular crafts, classifications, or types of workers needed to make a determination.

Article 5 (Sections 16300 through 16304) pertains to petitions to review prevailing wage determinations.

Section 16302, subdivisions (a) and (c)(5), allows an interested party, including an awarding body, to file a petition to review a determination of any rate or rates, and specifies the required procedures for filing such a petition; and would require an awarding body to file a petition if the Director of Industrial Relations uses an incorrect determination of prevailing wages.

Section 16303, subdivision (a), declares that the authority of the Director of Industrial Relations to establish the prevailing wage rate for any craft, classification, or type of worker to be quasi-legislative and, therefore, subject to review pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1085.

Section 16304 specifies the procedures for prevailing wage law determination hearings, including petitions for review. Subdivision (a)(4) grants interested parties the opportunity to present evidence and oral or written arguments in support of their positions and, with the consent of the hearing officer, to cross-examine witnesses.

Subchapter 4 pertains to Labor Compliance Programs of an awarding body. Article 1 (Section 16425) pertains to the applicable dates for enforcement of a labor compliance program. ("LCP") Subdivisions (a) and (e), allows an awarding body to voluntarily terminate a LCP providing the awarding body notifies the Director of its intention and effective date of termination, notifies the contractor and the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement of the identity of the agent who will carry out the compliance obligations, and specify the general fund into which penalties or forfeitures withheld from any contract payment shall be deposited.

Article 2 (Sections 16426 through 16428) pertains to the approval and revocation of approval of a labor compliance program ("LCP") by the Director.

Section 16426, requires the awarding body seeking approval of a Labor Compliance Program to submit evidence of its ability to operate a LCP, which includes information relating to the following factors:

(1) The experience and training of the awarding body's personnel on public works labor compliance issues.

(2) The average number of public works contracts the awarding body annually administers.

(3) Whether the LCP is a joint or cooperative venture among awarding bodies, and how the resources and expanded responsibilities of the LCP compare to the awarding bodies involved.

(4) The awarding body's record of taking cognizance of Labor Code violations and of withholding in the preceding five years.

(5) The availability of legal support for the LCP.

(6) The availability and quality of a manual outlining the responsibilities and procedures of the LCP and the awarding body.

(7) The method by which the awarding body will transmit notice to the Labor Commissioner of willful violations as defined in Labor Code section 1777.1(d).

Section 16427 allows an awarding body which has operated a Labor Compliance Program for eleven continuous months to apply to the Director of Industrial Relations for final approval. The awarding body bears the burden of producing evidence that it has demonstrated ability to monitor compliance with the requirements of the Labor Code and these regulations, and has filed timely, complete, and accurate reports as required by these regulations.

Section 16428 allows the Director of Industrial Relations to revoke a final approval of a Labor Compliance Program only after giving due notice to the awarding body, conducting a hearing, and finding cause for revocation. Cause for revocation may include the failure of awarding body to monitor compliance with the Labor Code, its failure to take enforcement actions, or its failure to file timely, complete, and accurate reports to the Director.

Article 3 (Sections 16429 through 16432) pertains to notice and components of an LCP.

Section 16429, requires an awarding body to give notice of the initial or final approval of its Labor Compliance Program in the call for bids, in the contract or purchase order, and the notice shall also be posted at the jobsite.

Section 16430, requires a Labor Compliance Program to include, but not be limited to, the following requirements:

(1) The call of bids and the contract or purchase order shall contain appropriate language concerning the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

(2) A prejob conference shall be conducted before commencement of the work with the contractors and subcontractors listed in the bid, at which time federal and state labor law requirements applicable to the contract shall be discussed, and copies of suggested reporting forms furnished. A checklist, showing which federal and state labor law requirements were discussed shall be kept for each conference. An appendix "A" follows which presumptively meets these requirements.

(3) A requirement that certified payroll records be kept by the contractor in accordance with Labor Code Section 1776 and furnished to the awarding body at times designated in the contract or within 10 days of request by the awarding body. The awarding body may create a form meeting the minimum requirements of a "Certified Weekly Payroll." Use of the current version of DIRECTOR OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS's "Public Works Payroll Reporting Form" (A-1-131) (New 2-80) constitutes full compliance with this requirement by the awarding body. A copy of the suggested form follows Section 16500.

(4) A program for orderly review of payroll records and, if necessary, for audits to verify compliance with the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

(5) A prescribed routine for withholding penalties, forfeitures and underpayment of wages for violations of the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

(6) All contracts to which prevailing wage requirements apply shall include a provision that contract payments shall not be made when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate.

Section 16431 requires an awarding body to submit to the Director of Industrial Relations an annual report on the operation of its Labor Compliance Program within 60 days after the close of the fiscal year.

Section 16432 permits the awarding body to conduct an audit when it deems necessary, and requires an audit when requested by the Labor Commissioner. Any such audit consists of a comparison of payroll records to the best available information as to the actual hours worked and classifications of workers employed on the contract; and is sufficiently detailed when it enables the LCP and the Labor Commissioner to draw reasonable conclusions as to compliance with the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code, and when it enables accurate computation of underpayments of wages to workers and of applicable penalties and forfeitures. An audit form is attached as Appendix "B" to the section, which presumptively demonstrates sufficiency.

Section 16433 permits an awarding body having a Labor Compliance Program approved by the Director of Industrial Relations, in accordance with Labor Code Section 1771.5, to not require payments of general prevailing wage rates when construction is for $25,000, or less, or $15,000, or less, when the work is for alteration, demolition, repair, or maintenance work.

Article 5 (Sections 16434 through 16439) pertains to enforcement of public wage laws where there is a LCP.

Section 16434 requires an awarding body approved for a Labor Compliance Program to enforce the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

Section 16435 defines terms relating to withholding contract payments when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate.

Section 16435.5 sets forth requirements on how to calculate "underpayments". Section 16436 defines "forfeitures" and "failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages". The latter must be approved by the Labor Commissioner before they are recoverable by a LCP.

Section 16437 requires the LCP of the awarding body to file a request with the Labor Commissioner for the determination of the amount of a forfeiture. The request shall include a file or a report which contains at least the following information:

1. The deadline by which contract acceptance or filing a notice of completion, under Labor Code Section 1775, plus 90 days, will occur.

2. Any other deadline which, if missed, would impede collection.

3. Evidence of violation in narrative form.

4. Evidence that an "audit" or "investigation," as defined in Section 16432 of these regulations, occurred.

5. Evidence that the contractor was given the opportunity to explain why there was no violation, or that any violation was caused by mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, before the forfeiture was sent to the Labor Commissioner; and the contractor either did not attempt, or failed to, convince the awarding body of its position.

6. Where the LCP of the awarding body seeks not only amounts of wages but also a penalty as part of the forfeiture, and the contractor has unsuccessfully contended that the cause of the violation was mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, a short statement should accompany the proposal for a forfeiture, with a recommended penalty amount pursuant to Labor Code Section 1775.

7. Where the LCP of the awarding body seeks only wages or a penalty less than $50 per day as part of the forfeiture, and the contractor has successfully contended that the cause of the violation was mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, then the file should include evidence as to the contractor's knowledge of his or her obligation, including the program's communication to the contractor of the obligation in the bid invitations, at the prejob conference agenda and records, and any other notice given as part of the contracting process. With the file should be a statement, similar to that prescribed in paragraph 6 above, and recommended penalty amounts, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1775.

8. The previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations.

9. Whether the LCP has been granted initial, extended initial or final approval.

Section 16438, subdivision (a) , provides that where the involvement of the Labor Commissioner has been limited to a determination of the actual amount of the penalty, forfeiture or underpayment of wages, and the matter has been resolved without litigation by or against the Labor Commissioner, an awarding body having a LCP shall deposit penalties and forfeitures in its general fund. Subdivision (b) provides that where collection of fines, penalties or forfeitures results from court action to which the Labor Commissioner and awarding body are both parties, the fines, penalties or forfeitures shall be divided between the general fund of the state and the awarding body, as the court may determine. Subdivision (c) provides that all amounts recovered by the Labor Commissioner and to which the awarding body is not a party, shall be deposited in the general fund of the state. To the extent that fines, penalties or forfeitures are deposited into the general fund of the awarding body, those amounts would be accounted for as a reduction in the mandated costs incurred by the awarding body in implementing its LCP.

Section 16439, subdivision (a), allows a contractor to appeal the result of a LCP enforcement action by serving a notice of appeal on the Director of Industrial Relations, with copies being served on the awarding body and the LCP. Subdivision (c) requires the awarding body, within 30 days, to forward to the Director a full copy of the record of the enforcement proceedings and any further documents, arguments, or authorities it wishes to have considered in the appeal process, along with a declaration of service on the contractor. Subdivision (d) requires the awarding body to supply the Director with a supplemental report on the activities of the LCP, when requested.

PART III. STATEMENT OF THE CLAIM

SECTION 1. COSTS MANDATED BY THE STATE

The Statutes, Labor and Public Contract Code Sections, and California Code of Regulations referenced in this test claim result in school districts incurring costs mandated by the state, as defined in Government Code Section 17514[103], by creating new state-mandated duties related to the uniquely governmental function of providing for public works.

> " 'Costs mandated by the state' means any increased costs which a local agency or school district is required to incur after July 1, 1980, as a result of any statute enacted on or after January 1, 1975, or any executive order implementing any statute enacted on or after January 1, 1975, which mandates a new program or higher level of service of an existing program within the meaning of Section 6 of Article XIIIB of the California Constitution."

The new duties mandated by the state upon school districts, county offices of education and community college districts require state reimbursement of the direct and indirect costs of labor, materials and supplies, data processing services and software, contracted services and consultants, equipment and capital assets, staff and student training and travel to implement the following activities:

When contracting with third parties for "public works" as an awarding body for projects pursuant to Labor Code sections 1720, 1720.2 and 1720.3 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations Sections 16000 and 16001,school districts, county offices of education and community colleges are required to:

1) To obtain the applicable general prevailing rate of per diem wages from the Director of Industrial Relations before awarding a contract for public works, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16202.

2) To ensure that the correct prevailing wage rates have been determined by the Director of Industrial Relations, pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16204.

3) To request from the Director of Industrial Relations a coverage determination regarding a specific project or type of work to be performed, pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001.

Relations of any rate or rates, pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16302.

5) To appeal an incorrect determination made by the Director of Industrial Relations, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.4 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16002.5.

6) To include a statement of prevailing rates of per diem wages in all calls and advertisements for bids, in the public works contract itself, and to post the statement at all job sites. In lieu of those requirements, the district may include a statement in the call for bids and contract a statement to the effect that copies of the prevailing rate of wages are on file in its principal office, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.2.

7) To maintain records of ineligible contractors and subcontractors and to refuse to grant them public works projects of the district, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.1 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16800 through 16802.

8) To send copies of all awards to the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and notify the Division of any discrepancies, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.3

9) To inspect and audit payroll records of contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects, when necessary or requested by the Director of Industrial Relations, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776.

10) To obtain and provide copies of the payroll records of the contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects, when requested by appropriate parties. The records provided are required to be marked or obliterated to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address and social security number, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16402.

11) To comply with all of the requirements of a Labor Compliance Program, when initiated and enforced by the district, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16425 through 16439. These requirements include:

4) The district shall review, and, if appropriate, audit payroll records to verify compliance with prevailing wage laws;

5) The district shall withhold contract payments when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate; and

6) The district shall withhold contract payments equal to the amount of underpayments and applicable penalties when, after investigation, it is established that underpayment has occurred.

12) To provide contractors and subcontractors, bonding companies and sureties with Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments when minimum wage law violations are discovered by the district, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.6 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 17220. 4) Information on the procedures for obtaining review of an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

5) Notice of Opportunity to request a settlement meeting under Section 17221.

6) A statement appearing in bold or another type of face, that makes it stand out from other text, to the effect that failure to submit a timely request for review will result in a final order binding on the contractor and subcontractor, and on the bonding company.

13) Report any suspected violations of the prevailing wage laws to the Labor Commissioner, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726.

14) Withhold contract payments for underpaid wages and for penalties when, through the district's own investigation, the district determines a violation of prevailing wages has occurred, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726.

20) A joint labor-management committee may bring an action against an employer who fails to pay prevailing wages, pursuant to Labor Code Section

[104] Prior to July 1, 2001, different procedures and legal remedies were available to contractors and subcontractors. See: former Labor Code Section 1730, 1731, 1732 and 1733.

1771.2. As a necessary party, the school district would be required to appear and participate in these legal proceedings.

21) To furnish copies of payroll records of a contractor or subcontractor to a joint labor management committee, when requested, obliterated only to prevent disclosure of social security numbers, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776.

SECTION 2. EXCEPTIONS TO MANDATE REIMBURSEMENT

None of the Government Code Section 17556[105] statutory exceptions to a finding of [105]Government Code Section 17556, added by Chapter 1459, Statutes of 1984, Section 1, as amended by Chapter 589, Statutes of 1989, Section 1:

"The commission shall not find costs mandated by the state, as defined in Section 17514, in any claim submitted by a local agency or school district, if, after a hearing, the commission finds that:

(a) The claim is submitted by a local agency or school district which requested legislative authority for that local agency or school district to implement the program specified in the statute, and that statute imposes costs upon that local agency or school district requesting the legislative authority. A resolution from the governing body or a letter from a delegated representative of the governing body of a local agency or school district which requests authorization for that local agency or school district to implement a given program shall constitute a request within the meaning of this paragraph.

(b) The statute or executive order affirmed for the state that which had been declared existing law or regulation by action of the courts.

(c) The statute or executive order implemented a federal law or regulation and resulted in costs mandated by the federal government, unless the statute or executive order mandates costs which exceed the mandate in that federal law or regulation.

(d) The local agency or school district has the authority to levy service charges, fees, or assessments sufficient to pay for the mandated program or increased level of service.

(e) The statute or executive order provides for offsetting savings to local agencies or school districts which result in no net costs to the local agencies or school districts, or includes additional revenue that was specifically intended to fund the costs of the state mandate in an amount sufficient to fund the cost of the state mandate.

costs mandated by the state apply to this test claim. Note, that to the extent school districts may have previously performed functions similar to those mandated by the referenced code sections, such efforts did not establish a preexisting duty that would relieve the state of its constitutional requirement to later reimburse school districts when these activities became mandated.[106]

SECTION 3. FUNDING PROVIDED FOR THE MANDATED PROGRAM

No funds are appropriated by the state for reimbursement of these costs mandated by the state and there is no other provision of law for recovery of costs from any other source.

PART IV. ADDITIONAL CLAIM REQUIREMENTS

The following elements of this claim are provided pursuant to Section 1183, Title 2, California Code of Regulations:

Exhibit 1: The Declaration of Bill McGuire, Associate Superintendent, Business

[106]Government Code Section 17565, added by Chapter 879, Statutes of 1986, Section 10:

Prevailing Wage Rates

I, Bill McGuire, Associate Superintendent, Business Services, Clovis Unified

School District, make the following declaration and statement.

In my capacity as Associate Superintendent Business Services, I am responsible for the award and implementation of public works contracts. I am familiar with the provisions and requirements of the Labor and Public Contract Code Sections and the Title 8 California Code of Regulations enumerated above.

These code sections and regulations require the Clovis Unified School District to:

1) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16202, to obtain the applicable general prevailing rate of per diem wages from the Director of Industrial Relations before awarding a contract for public works.

2) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16204, to ensure that the correct prevailing wage rates have been determined by the Director of Industrial Relations.

3) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations Section 16001, to request from the Director of Industrial Relations a coverage determination regarding a specific project or type of work to be performed.

4) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16302, to file a petition for review of a determination of the Director of Industrial Relations of any rate or rates.

5) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.4 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations Section 16002.5, to appeal an incorrect determination made by the Director of Industrial Relations.

6) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.2, to include a statement of prevailing rate of per diem wages in all calls and advertisements for bids, in the public works contract itself, and to post the statement at all job sites. In lieu of those requirements, the district may include a statement in the call for bids and contract a statement to the effect that copies of the prevailing rate of wages are on file in its principal office.

7) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.1 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16800 through 16802, to maintain records of ineligible contractors and subcontractors and to refuse to grant them public works projects of the district.

8) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.3, to send copies of all awards to the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and notify the Division of any discrepancies.

9) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776, when necessary or requested by the Director of Industrial Relations, to inspect and audit payroll records of contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects.

10) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16402, when requested by appropriate parties, to obtain and provide copies of the payroll records of the contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects. The records provided are required to be marked or obliterated to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address and social security number.

11) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Sections 16425 through 16439, to comply with all of the requirements of a Labor Compliance Program, when initiated and enforced by the district. These requirements include:

(a) All bid invitations and public works contracts shall contain appropriate language concerning the requirements of the prevailing wage laws;

(b) A prejob conference shall be conducted with the contractor and the subcontractors to discuss federal and state labor requirements applicable to the contract;

(c) Project contractors and subcontractors shall maintain and furnish, at a designated time, a certified copy of each weekly payroll containing a statement of compliance signed under penalty of perjury

(d) The district shall review, and, if appropriate, audit payroll records to verify compliance with prevailing wage laws;

(e) The district shall withhold contract payments when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate; and

(f) The district shall withhold contract payments equal to the amount of underpayments and applicable penalties when, after investigation, it is established that underpayment has occurred.

12) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.6 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 17220, to provide contractors and subcontractors, and bonding companies and sureties with Notices of Withholding of Contract Payments when minimum wage law violations are discovered by the district. The notice shall be in writing and include the following information:

(a) A description of the nature of the violation and basis for the notice.

(b) The amount of wages, penalties and forfeitures due, including a specification of amounts that have been or will be withheld from available contract payments, as well as all additional amounts that the enforcing agency has determined are due, including the amount of any liquidated damages that potentially may be awarded under Labor Code section 1742.1.

(c) The name and address of the office to whom a Request for Review may be sent.

(d) Information on the procedures for obtaining review of an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

(e) Notice of Opportunity to request a settlement meeting under Section 17221.

(f) A statement appearing in bold or another type of face, that makes it stand out from other text, to the effect that failure to submit a timely request for review will result in a final order binding on the contractor and subcontractor, and on the bonding company.

13) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726, to report any suspected violations of the prevailing wage laws to the Labor Commissioner.

14) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726, to withhold contract payments for underpaid wages and for penalties when, through the district's own investigation, the district determines a violation of prevailing wages has occurred.

15) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1727, to withhold amounts necessary to satisfy Civil Wage and Penalty Assessments issued by the Labor Commissioner.

16) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1727, to retain amounts withheld to satisfy a Civil Wage and Penalty Assessment until receiving a final order no longer subject to judicial review.

17) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742, after July 1, 2001[1], and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 17220, to comply with all due process requirements for the benefit of contractors and subcontractors when amounts are withheld pursuant to a Civil Wage and Penalty Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, including the providing of proper and timely notices, allowing them to review evidence relied upon, appearance and participation at hearings and the appeals therefrom.

18) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742, after July 1, 2001, to respond to petitions for writs of mandates filed by contractors and subcontractors seeking review of orders of the Labor Commissioner, including the retention of counsel to file timely responses, participating in pre-trial discovery matters, the trial of the cause, pre-trial and post-trial briefing, and the preparation of findings and judgment.

19) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742.1 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16413, to grant and to participate in settlement meetings requested by contractors or subcontractor in an attempt to settle any disputed issue before formal hearing procedures.

20) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.2, a joint labor-management committee may bring an action against an employer who fails to pay prevailing wages. As a necessary party, the school district would be required to appear and participate in these legal proceedings.

21) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776, to furnish copies of payroll records of a contractor or subcontractor to a joint labor management committee obliterated only to prevent disclosure of social security numbers.

Clovis Unified School District is required to comply with these laws relating to prevailing wage rate laws in all public works projects, as defined when:

(a) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720.2, the construction work is performed according to plans, specifications or criteria furnished by the district and where the district enters into a lease, as lessee, of the completed project during or upon completion of the construction;

(b) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720.3, hauling refuse from a public works site to an outside location;

(c) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720, the work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work;

(d) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for maintenance, including landscape maintenance;

(e) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720, the work is for installation works;

(f) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for field surveying work traditionally covered by collective bargaining agreements when the work is integral to the specific public works project; and

(g) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for residential and commercial projects when the public work is for student or faculty housing.

It is estimated that Clovis Unified School District has incurred, or will incur, in excess of $200 in staffing and other costs in excess of revenues annually, for the period from July 1, 2000 through June, 2002, to implement these new duties mandated by the state for which the district has not been reimbursed by any federal, state, or local government agency, and for which it cannot otherwise obtain reimbursement.

The foregoing facts are known to me personally and, if so required, I could testify to the statements made herein. I hereby declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct except where stated upon information and belief and, where so stated, I declare that I believe them to be true.

§ 1720. Public works; use of public funds

(a) As used in this chapter, "public works" means:

(1) Construction, alteration, demolition, installation, or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority. For purposes of this paragraph, "construction" includes work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work.

(2) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation, and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. "Public work" shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, except as used in Section 1778 relating to retaining wages.

(3) Street, sewer, or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the state, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether the political subdivision or district operates under a freeholder's charter or not.

(4) The laying of carpet done under a building lease-maintenance contract and paid for out of public funds.

(5) The laying of carpet in a public building done under contract and paid for in whole or part out of public funds.

(6) Public transportation demonstration projects authorized pursuant to Section 143 of the Streets and Highways Code.

(b) For purposes of this section, "paid for in whole or in part out of public funds" means the payment of money or the equivalent of money by a state or political subdivision directly to or on behalf of the public works contractor, subcontractor, or developer, performance of construction work by the state or political subdivision in execution of the project, transfer of an asset of value for less than fair market price; fees, costs, rents, insurance or bond premiums, loans, interest rates, or other obligations that would normally be required in the execution of the contract, which are paid, reduced, charged at less than fair market value, waived or forgiven; money to be repaid on a contingent basis; or credits applied against repayment obligations.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b):

(1) Private residential projects built on private property are not subject to the requirements of this chapter if the projects are not built pursuant to an agreement with a state agency, redevelopment agency, or local public housing authority.

(2)(A) If the state or a political subdivision requires a private developer to perform construction, alteration, demolition, installation, or repair work on a public work of improvement as a condition of regulatory approval of an otherwise private development project, and the state or political subdivision contributes no more money, or the equivalent of money, to the overall project than is required to perform this public improvement work, and the state or political subdivision maintains no proprietary interest in the overall project, then only the public improvement work shall thereby become subject to this chapter.

(B) If the state or a political subdivision reimburses a private developer for costs that would normally be borne by the public, or provides directly or indirectly a public subsidy to a private development project that is de minimis in the context of the project, an otherwise private development project shall not thereby become subject to the requirements of this chapter.

(3) The construction or rehabilitation of affordable housing units for low- or moderate-income persons pursuant to paragraph (5) or (7) of subdivision (e) of Section 33334.2 of the Health and Safety Code that are paid for solely with moneys from a Low and Moderate Income Housing Fund established pursuant to Section 33334.3 of the Health and Safety Code or that are paid for by a combination of private funds and funds available pursuant to Section 33334.2 or 33334.3 of the Health and Safety Code does not constitute a project that is paid for in whole or in part out of public funds.

If the prevailing rate is not based on a collectively bargained rate, the holidays upon which the prevailing rate shall be paid shall be as provided in Section 6700 of the Government Code.

In determining the rates, the Director * * * of Industrial Relations shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and the rates that may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Where the rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the director shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification, or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in the craft, classification, or type of work.

(b) Employer payments include all of the following:

(1) The rate of contribution irrevocably made by the employer to a trustee or third person pursuant to a plan, fund, or program.

(3) Payments to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(c) Employer payments are a credit against the obligation to pay the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. However, no credit shall be granted for benefits required to be provided by other state or federal law. Credits for employer payments also shall not reduce the obligation to pay the hourly straight time or overtime wages found to be prevailing.

(d) The credit for employer payments shall be computed on an annualized basis where the employer seeks credit for employer payments that are higher for public works projects than for private construction performed by the same employer, except where one or more of the following occur:

(1) The employer has an enforceable obligation to make the higher rate of payments on future private construction performed by the employer.

(2) The higher rate of payments is required by a project labor agreement.

(3) The payments are made to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(4) The director determines that annualization would not serve the purposes of this chapter.

(e) For the purpose of determining those per diem wages for contracts, * * * the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute contracts * * * shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of the * * * collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. * * * The collective bargaining agreements shall be filed after their execution and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids. If the collective bargaining agreement has not been formalized, a typescript of the final draft may be filed temporarily, accompanied by a statement under penalty of perjury as to its effective date.

Where a copy of the collective bargaining agreement has previously been filed, fully executed copies of all modifications and extensions of the agreement that affect per diem wages or holidays shall be filed.

The failure to comply with filing requirements of this subdivision shall not be grounds for setting aside a prevailing wage determination if the information taken into consideration is correct.

(Amended by Stats.1999, c. 80 (S.B.16), § 2; Stats.2000, c. 954 (A.B.1646), § 18, operative July 1, 2001.)

§ 1773.2. Specification of general wage rate in call for bids, in bid specifications and in contract; posting at job site

The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, what the general rate of per diem wages is for each craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the contract.

In lieu of specifying the rate of wages in the call for bids, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body may, in the call for bids, bid specifications, and contract, include a statement that copies of the prevailing rate of per diem wages are on file at its principal office, which shall be made available to any interested party on request. The awarding body shall also cause a copy of the determination of the director of the prevailing rate of per diem wages to be posted at each job site.

§ 1773.3. Contract awards; copy to division; notice to local committee; discrepancy in ratio

An awarding agency whose public works contract falls within the jurisdiction of Section 1777.5 shall, within five days of the award, send a copy of the award to the Division of Apprenticeship Standards. When specifically requested by a local joint apprenticeship committee, the division shall notify the local joint apprenticeship committee regarding all such awards applicable to the joint apprenticeship committee making the request. Within five days of a finding of any discrepancy regarding the ratio of apprentices to journeymen, pursuant to the certificated fixed number of apprentices to journeymen, the awarding agency shall notify the Division of Apprenticeship Standards.

§ 1773.5. Rules and regulations

The Director of Industrial Relations may establish rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying out * * * this chapter, including, but not limited to, the responsibilities and duties of awarding bodies under this chapter.

(Amended by Stats.1989, c. 1224, § 5.)

§ 1773.6. Determination of change in prevailing wages during quarter; availability to awarding body

If during any quarterly period the Director of Industrial Relations shall determine that there has been a change in any prevailing rate of per diem wages in any locality he shall make such change available to the awarding body and his determination shall be final. Such determination by the Director of Industrial Relations shall not be effective as to any contract for which the notice to bidders has been published.

§ 1775. Penalties for violations

(a) The contractor and any subcontractor under him or her shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing wage rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or, except as provided in subdivision (b), by any subcontractor under him or her. The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner * * * based on consideration of * * * both of the following:

(1) Whether the failure of the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rate of per diem wages was a good faith mistake and, if so, the error was promptly and voluntarily corrected upon being brought to the attention of the contractor or subcontractor.

(2) Whether the contractor or subcontractor has a prior record of failing to meet its prevailing wage obligations.

The determination of the Labor Commissioner as to the amount of the penalty shall be reviewable only for abuse of discretion. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor or subcontractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

(b) If a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the general prevailing per diem wages by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a) unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor to pay the specified prevailing rate of wages to those workers or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with all of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor for the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall monitor the payment of the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages by the subcontractor to the employees, by periodic review of the certified payroll records of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of the failure of the subcontractor to pay his or her workers the specified prevailing rate of wages, the contractor shall diligently take corrective action to halt or rectify the failure, including, but not limited to, retaining sufficient funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project.

(4) Prior to making final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has paid the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages to his or her employees on the public works project and any amounts due pursuant to Section 1813.

(c) The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall notify the contractor on a public works project within 15 days of the receipt by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of a complaint of the failure of a subcontractor on that public works project to pay workers the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. * * *

§ 1776. Payroll records; retention; inspection; noncompliance penalties; rules and regulations

Text of section operative until Jan. 1, 2003.

(a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep accurate payroll records, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work. Each payroll record shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under penalty of perjury, stating both of the following:

(1) The information contained in the payroll record is true and correct.

(2) The employer has complied with the requirements of Sections 1771, 1811, and 1815 for any work performed by his or her employees on the public works project.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) A contractor or subcontractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated * * * to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or the subcontractor performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated. Any copy of records made available for inspection by, or furnished to, a joint labor- management committee established pursuant to the federal Labor Management Cooperation Act of 1978 (Section 175a of Title 29 of the United States Code) shall be marked or obliterated only to prevent disclosure of an individual's name and social security number. A joint labor management committee may maintain an action in a court of competent jurisdiction against an employer who fails to comply with Section 1774. The court may award restitution to an employee for unpaid wages and may award the joint labor management committee reasonable attorney's fee and costs incurred in maintaining the action. An action under this subdivision may not be based on the employer's misclassification of the craft of a worker on its certified payroll records. Nothing in this subdivision limits any other available remedies for a violation of this chapter.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor or subcontractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of a written notice requesting the records enumerated in subdivision (a). In the event that the contractor or subcontractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due. A contractor is not subject to a penalty assessment pursuant to this section due to the failure of a subcontractor to comply with this section.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

(j) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date.

Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. These stipulations shall fix the responsibility for compliance with this section on the prime contractor.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

§ 1777.1. Violations with intent to defraud; willful violations

(a) Whenever a contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in violation of this chapter with intent to defraud, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or a firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has * * * any interest * * * is ineligible for a period of not less than one year or more than three years to do either of the following:

(1) Bid on or be awarded a contract for a public works project.

(2) Perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project.

(b) Whenever a contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in willful violation of this chapter, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or a firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has * * * any interest * * * is ineligible for a period up to three years for each second and subsequent violation occurring within three years of a separate and previous willful violation of this chapter to do either of the following:

(1) Bid on or be awarded a contract for a public works project.

(2) Perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project.

(c) A willful violation occurs when the contractor or subcontractor knew or reasonably should have known of his or her obligations under the public works law and deliberately fails or refuses to comply with its provisions.

(d) Not less than semiannually, the Labor Commissioner shall publish and distribute to awarding bodies a list of contractors who are ineligible to bid on or be awarded a public works contract, or to perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project pursuant to this chapter. The list shall contain the name of the contractor, the Contractor's State License Board license number of the contractor, and the effective period of debarment of the contractor. The commissioner shall also place advertisements in construction industry publications targeted to the contractors and subcontractors, chosen by the commissioner, that state the effective period of the debarment and the reason for debarment. The advertisements shall appear one time for each debarment of a contractor in each publication chosen by the commissioner. The debarred contractor or subcontractor shall be liable to the commissioner for the reasonable cost of the advertisements, not to exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000). The amount paid to the commissioner for the advertisements shall be credited against the contractor's or subcontractor's obligation to pay civil fines or penalties for the same willful violation of this chapter.

(e) For purposes of this section, "contractor or subcontractor" means a firm, corporation, partnership, or association and its responsible managing officer, as well as any supervisors, managers, and officers found by the Labor Commissioner to be personally and substantially responsible for the willful violation of this chapter.

(f) For the purposes of this section, the term "any interest" means an interest in the entity bidding or performing work on the public works project, whether as an owner, partner, officer, manager, employee, agent, consultant, or representative. "Any interest" includes, but is not limited to, all instances where the debarred contractor or subcontractor receives payments, whether cash or any other form of compensation, from any entity bidding or performing work on the public works project, or enters into any contracts or agreements with the entity bidding or performing work on the public works project for services performed or to be performed for contracts that have been or will be assigned or sublet, or for vehicles, tools, equipment, or supplies that have been or will be sold, rented, or leased during the period from the initiation of the debarment proceedings until the end of the term of the debarment period. "Any interest" does not include shares held in a publicly traded corporation if the shares were not received as compensation after the initiation of debarment from an entity bidding or performing work on a public works project.

(g) For the purposes of this section, the term "entity" is defined as a company, limited liability company, association, partnership, sole proprietorship, limited liability partnership, corporation, business trust, or organization.

(h) The Labor Commissioner shall adopt rules and regulations for the administration and enforcement of this section * * *.

Code of Regulations References

Debarment, see 8 Cal. Code of Regs. § 16800 et seq.

§ 1777.5. Employment of registered apprentices; wages; standards; number; apprenticeable craft or trade; exemptions; contributions

(a) Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

(b) Every apprentice employed upon public works shall be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

(c) Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards that have been approved by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and who are parties to written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed at the apprentice wage rate on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with either (1) the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training or (2) the rules and regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(d) When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor shall employ apprentices in at least the ratio set forth in this section and may apply to any apprenticeship program in the craft or trade that can provide apprentices to the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, * * * the decision of the apprenticeship program to approve or deny a certificate shall be subject to review by the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The apprenticeship program or programs, upon approving the contractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor. A contractor covered by an apprenticeship program's standards shall not be required to submit any additional application in order to include additional public works contracts under that program. "Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. As used in this section, "contractor" includes any subcontractor under a contractor who performs any public works not excluded by subdivision (o).

(e) Prior to commencing work on a contract for public works, every contractor shall submit contract award information to an applicable apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public work. The information submitted shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices proposed to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices would be employed. A copy of this information shall also be submitted to the awarding body if requested by the awarding body. Within 60 days after concluding work on the contract, each contractor and subcontractor shall submit to the awarding body, if requested, and to the apprenticeship program a verified statement of the journeyman and apprentice hours performed on the contract. The information under this subdivision shall be public. The apprenticeship programs shall retain this information for 12 months.

(f) The apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the area of the site of the public work shall ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities.

(g) The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen employed in a particular craft or trade on the public work may be no higher than the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the apprenticeship program operates where the contractor agrees to be bound by those standards, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of journeyman work.

(h) This ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman is employed at the jobsite and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the ratio. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract or, in the case of a subcontractor, before the end of the subcontract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the jobsite. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of an apprenticeship program, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

(i) A contractor covered by this section that has agreed to be covered by an apprenticeship program's standards upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or that has been previously approved for an apprenticeship program in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the applicable apprenticeship standards, but in no event less than the 1-to-5 ratio required by subdivision (g).

(j) Upon proper showing by a contractor that he or she employs apprentices in a particular craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by journeymen, the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio, as set forth in this section for that craft or trade.

(k) An apprenticeship program has the discretion to grant to a participating contractor or contractor association a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(1) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(2) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(3) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(4) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large, or the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

(l) When an exemption is granted pursuant to subdivision (k) to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1–to–5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

(m)(1) A contractor to whom a contract is awarded, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade shall contribute to the California Apprenticeship Council the same amount that the director determines is the prevailing amount of apprenticeship training contributions in the area of the public works site. A contractor may take as a credit for payments to the council any amounts paid by the contractor to an approved apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public works project. The contractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. * * *

(2) At the conclusion of each fiscal year, the California Apprenticeship Council shall distribute training contributions received by the council under this subdivision, less the expenses of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards for administering this subdivision, by making grants to approved apprenticeship programs for the purpose of training apprentices. The funds shall be distributed as follows:

(A) If there is an approved multiemployer apprenticeship program serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, a grant to that program shall be made.

(B) If there are two or more approved multiemployer apprenticeship programs serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, the grant shall be divided among those programs based on the number of apprentices registered in each program.

(C) All training contributions not distributed under subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall be used to defray the future expenses of administering this subdivision.

(3) All training contributions received pursuant to this subdivision shall be deposited in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund, which fund is hereby created in the State Treasury. Notwithstanding Section 13340 of the Government Code, all money in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund is hereby continuously appropriated for the purpose of carrying out this subdivision and to pay the expenses of the division in administering this subdivision.

(n) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

(o) This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) * * *.

(p) All decisions of an apprenticeship program under this section are subject to Section 3081.

§ 1777.6. Discrimination against apprentices because of race, religious creed, etc.

It shall be unlawful for an employer or a labor union to refuse to accept otherwise qualified employees as registered apprentices on any public works, on the ground of the race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, sex, or age, except as provided in Section 3077, of such employee.

§ 1777.7. Violations of § 1777.5; civil penalty; denial of right to bid on contracts; procedure; violations by subcontractors

(a)(1) A contractor or subcontractor that is determined by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards to have knowingly violated Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. The amount of this penalty * * * may be reduced by the Chief if the amount of the penalty would be disproportionate to the severity of the violation. A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly commits a second or subsequent violation of Section 1777.5 within a three-year period, where the noncompliance results in apprenticeship training not being provided as required by this chapter, shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of not more than three hundred dollars ($300) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed by the Chief, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(2) In lieu of the penalty provided for in this subdivision * * *, the Chief may, for a first-time violation and with the concurrence of an apprenticeship program described in subdivision (d), order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

(b) * * * In the event a contractor or subcontractor is determined by the * * * Chief to have knowingly * * * committed a serious violation of any provision of Section 1777.5, the * * * Chief may also deny to the contractor or subcontractor, * * * and to its responsible officers, the right to bid on or * * * be awarded or perform work as a subcontractor on any public works contract for a period of up to one year for the first violation and for a period of up to three years for a second or subsequent violation.

Each period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of noncompliance by the Chief becomes a final order of the Administrator of Apprenticeship.

* * * (c)(1) An affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer may obtain a review of the determination of the Chief imposing the debarment or civil penalty by transmitting a written request to the office of the Administrator within 30 days after service of the determination of debarment or civil penalty. A copy of this report shall also be served on the Chief. If the Administrator * * * does not receive a timely request for review * * * of the determination of debarment or civil penalty made by the Chief, the order shall become the final * * * order of the Administrator.

(2) Within 20 days of the timely receipt of a request for review, the Chief shall provide the contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer the opportunity to review any evidence the Chief may offer at the hearing. The Chief shall also promptly disclose * * * any nonprivileged documents obtained after the 20-day time limit at a time set forth for exchange of evidence by the Administrator.

(3) Within 90 days of the timely receipt of * * * a request for review, a hearing shall be commenced before the Administrator or an impartial hearing officer designated by the Administrator and possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 11502 of the Government Code. The affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer shall have the burden of *. * * providing evidence of compliance with Section 1777.5.* *. * .

(4) Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the * * * Administrator shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the determination of debarment or civil penalty. The decision shall contain a * * * statement of the factual and legal basis for the decision and an order. This decision shall be * * * served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party * * * that the party has filed with the Administrator. Within 15 days of issuance of the decision, the * * * Administrator may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(5) An affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer who has timely requested review and obtained a decision under paragraph (4) may obtain review of the * * * decision of the Administrator by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the final decision* * * . If no timely petition for a writ of mandate is filed* * * , the * * * decision * * * shall become the final order of the Administrator. The decision of the Administrator shall be affirmed unless the petitioner shows that the Administrator abused his or her discretion. If the petitioner claims that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the entire record.

(6) The * * * Chief may certify a copy of the final order of the Administrator and file it with the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business. The clerk, immediately upon the filing, shall enter judgment for the state against the person assessed in the amount shown on the certified order. A judgment entered pursuant to this section shall bear the same rate of interest and shall have the same effect as other judgments and be given the same preference allowed by the law on other judgments rendered for claims for taxes. The clerk shall not charge for the service performed by him or her pursuant to this section. An awarding body that has withheld funds in response to a determination by the Chief imposing a penalty under this section shall, upon receipt of a certified copy of a final order of the Administrator, promptly transmit the withheld funds, up to the amount of the certified order, to the Administrator.

(d) If a subcontractor is found to have violated Section 1777.5, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a), unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5 or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with any of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor or the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall continually monitor a subcontractor's use of apprentices required to be employed on the public works project pursuant to subdivision (d) of Section 1777.5, including, but not limited to, periodic review of the certified payroll of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of a failure of the subcontractor to employ the required number of apprentices, the contractor shall take corrective action, including, but not limited to, retaining funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project until the failure is corrected.

(4) Prior to making the final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain * * * a declaration signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has employed the required number of apprentices on the public works project.

(e) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(f) The Chief shall consider, in setting the amount of a monetary penalty, in determining whether a violation is serious, and in determining whether and for how long a party should be debarred for violating this section, all of the following circumstances:

(1) Whether the violation was intentional.

(2) Whether the party has committed other violations of Section 1777.5.

(3) Whether, upon notice of the violation, the party took steps to voluntarily remedy the violation.

(4) Whether, and to what extent, the violation resulted in lost training opportunities for apprentices.

(5) Whether, and to what extent, the violation otherwise harmed apprentices or apprenticeship programs.

If a party seeks review of a decision by the Chief to impose a monetary penalty or period of debarment, the Administrator shall decide de novo the appropriate penalty, by considering the same factors set forth above.

(g) The interpretation * * * of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the * * * regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council. The Administrator may adopt regulations to establish guidelines for the imposition of monetary penalties and periods of debarment and may designate precedential decisions under Section 11425.60 of the Government Code.

Senate Bill No. 975

CHAPTER 938

An act to amend Section 63036 of the Government Code, and to amend Section 1720 of the Labor Code, relating to the California infrastructure and economic development bank.

[Approved by Governor October 14, 2001. Filed with Secretary of State October 14, 2001.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

SB 975, Alarcon. California Infrastructure and Economic Development Bank.

Existing law, the Bergeson-Peace Infrastructure and Economic Development Bank Act, establishes the California Infrastructure and Economic Development Bank in the Trade and Commerce Agency. The act requires public works financed by the bank to comply with certain laws applicable to payment of prevailing wages on public works.

This bill would require any of those public works financed through the use of industrial development bonds under the California Industrial Development Financing Act to comply with those laws relating to payment of prevailing wages.

Existing law generally defines "public works" to include construction, alteration, demolition, or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds.

This bill would redefine "public works" to include installation and provide that "paid for in whole or in part with public funds" means certain payments, transfers, credits, reductions, waivers, and performances of work, but does not include the construction or rehabilitation of affordable housing units for low- or moderate-income persons, as specified.

This bill would provide that certain private residential housing projects and development projects built on private property are not subject to the prevailing wage, hour, and discrimination laws that govern employment on public works projects.

This bill would also make technical, nonsubstantive changes.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 63036 of the Government Code is amended to read:

63036. It is the intent of the Legislature that the activities of the bank be fully coordinated with any future legislative plan involving growth management strategies designed to protect California's land resource, and ensure its preservation and use it in ways which are economically and socially desirable. Further, all public works financed pursuant to this division, including those projects financed through the use of industrial development bonds under Title 10 (commencing with Section 91500), shall comply with Chapter 1 (commencing with Section 1720) of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

SEC. 2. Section 1720 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1720. (a) As used in this chapter, "public works" means:

(1) Construction, alteration, demolition, installation, or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority. For purposes of this paragraph, "construction" includes work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work.

(2) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation, and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. "Public work" shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, except as used in Section 1778 relating to retaining wages.

(3) Street, sewer, or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the state, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether the political subdivision or district operates under a freeholder's charter or not.

(4) The laying of carpet done under a building lease-maintenance contract and paid for out of public funds.

(5) The laying of carpet in a public building done under contract and paid for in whole or part out of public funds.

(6) Public transportation demonstration projects authorized pursuant to Section 143 of the Streets and Highways Code.

(b) For purposes of this section, "paid for in whole or in part out of public funds" means the payment of money or the equivalent of money by a state or political subdivision directly to or on behalf of the public works contractor, subcontractor, or developer, performance of construction work by the state or political subdivision in execution of the project, transfer of an asset of value for less than fair market price; fees, costs, rents, insurance or bond premiums, loans, interest rates, or other obligations that would normally be required in the execution of the contract, which are paid, reduced, charged at less than fair market value, waived or forgiven; money to be repaid on a contingent basis; or credits applied against repayment obligations.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b):

(1) Private residential projects built on private property are not subject to the requirements of this chapter if the projects are not built pursuant to an agreement with a state agency, redevelopment agency, or local public housing authority.

(2) (A) If the state or a political subdivision requires a private developer to perform construction, alteration, demolition, installation, or repair work on a public work of improvement as a condition of regulatory approval of an otherwise private development project, and the state or political subdivision contributes no more money, or the equivalent of money, to the overall project than is required to perform this public improvement work, and the state or political subdivision maintains no proprietary interest in the overall project, then only the public improvement work shall thereby become subject to this chapter.

(B) If the state or a political subdivision reimburses a private developer for costs that would normally be borne by the public, or provides directly or indirectly a public subsidy to a private development project that is de minimis in the context of the project, an otherwise private development project shall not thereby become subject to the requirements of this chapter.

(3) The construction or rehabilitation of affordable housing units for low- or moderate-income persons pursuant to paragraph (5) or (7) of subdivision (e) of Section 33334.2 of the Health and Safety Code that are paid for solely with moneys from a Low and Moderate Income Housing Fund established pursuant to Section 33334.3 of the Health and Safety Code or that are paid for by a combination of private funds and funds available pursuant to Section 33334.2 or 33334.3 of the Health and Safety Code does not constitute a project that is paid for in whole or in part out of public funds.

(4) "Paid for in whole or in part out of public funds" shall not include tax credits provided pursuant to Section 17053.49 or 23649 of the Revenue and Taxation Code.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, the following projects shall not, solely by reason of this section, be subject to the requirements of this chapter:

(1) Qualified residential rental projects, as defined by Section 142 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code, financed in whole or in part through the issuance of bonds that receive allocation of a portion of the state ceiling pursuant to Chapter 11.8 of Division 1 (commencing with Section 8369.80) of the Government Code on or before December 31, 2003.

(2) Single-family residential projects financed in whole or in part through the issuance of qualified mortgage revenue bonds or qualified veterans' mortgage bonds, as defined by Section 143 of the Internal Revenue Code, or with mortgage credit certificates under a Qualified Mortgage Credit Certificate Program, as defined by Section 25 of the Internal Revenue Code, that receive allocation of a portion of the state ceiling pursuant to Chapter 11.8 of Division 1 (commencing with Section 8869.80) of the Government Code on or before December 31, 2003.

(3) Low-income housing projects that are allocated federal or state low-income housing tax credits pursuant to Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code, Chapter 3.6 of Division 31 (commencing with Section 50199.4) of the Health and Safety Code, or Sections 12206, 17058, or 23610.5 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, on or before December 31, 2003.

(e) If a statute, other than this section, or an ordinance or regulation, other than an ordinance or regulation adopted pursuant to this section, applies this chapter to a project, the exclusions set forth in subdivision (d) shall not apply to that project.

(f) For purposes of this section, references to the Internal Revenue Code shall mean the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, and shall include the corresponding predecessor sections of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended.

Senate Bill No. 588

CHAPTER 804

An act to amend Section 1776 of, and to add Section 1771.2 to, the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor October 12, 2001. Filed with Secretary of State October 13, 2001.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

SB 588, Burton. Prevailing wages: payroll records.

Existing law generally requires contractors engaged in public works to pay employees the prevailing wage, as determined by the Director of Industrial Relations, and to comply with requirements relating to recordkeeping and employee work schedules.

This bill would authorize a joint labor-management committee established pursuant to a specified provision of federal law to bring an action against any employer who fails to pay prevailing wages as required by state law.

Existing law requires each contractor and subcontractor on a public works project to keep accurate payroll records containing information about employees, including name, address, social security number, and work history. Existing law requires, if these records are provided to the public or any public agency, that the names, addresses, and social security numbers of the employees be obliterated.

This bill would prohibit the obliteration of any information on employee payroll records except the employee's name and social security number, for any records supplied to a joint labor-management committee established pursuant to federal law.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1771.2 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1771.2. A joint labor-management committee established pursuant to the federal Labor Management Cooperation Act of 1978 (Section 175a of Title 29 of the United States Code) may bring an action in any court of competent jurisdiction against an employer that fails to pay the prevailing wage to its employees, as required by this article. This action shall be commenced not later than 180 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 180 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs.

SEC. 2. Section 1776 of the Labor Code, as added by Section 4 of Chapter 757 of the Statutes of 1997, is amended to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep accurate payroll records, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work. Each payroll record shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under penalty of perjury, stating both of the following:

(1) The information contained in the payroll record is true and correct.

(2) The employer has complied with the requirements of Sections 1771, 1811, and 1815 for any work performed by his or her employees on the public works project.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) A contractor or subcontractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or the subcontractor performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated. Any copy of records made available for inspection by, or furnished to, a joint labor-management committee established pursuant to the federal Labor Management Cooperation Act of 1978 (Section 175a of Title 29 of the United States Code) shall be marked or obliterated only to prevent disclosure of an individual's name and social security number. A joint labor management committee may maintain an action in a court of competent jurisdiction against an employer who fails to comply with Section 1774. The court may award restitution to an employee for unpaid wages and may award the joint labor management committee reasonable attorney's fee and costs incurred in maintaining the action. An action under this subdivision may not be based on the employer's misclassification of the craft of a worker on its certified payroll records. Nothing in this subdivision limits any other available remedies for a violation of this chapter.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor or subcontractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of a written notice requesting the records enumerated in subdivision (a). In the event that the contractor or subcontractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due. A contractor is not subject to a penalty assessment pursuant to this section due to the failure of a subcontractor to comply with this section.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

(j) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 3. Section 1776 of the Labor Code, as amended by Section 3 of Chapter 757 of the Statutes of 1997, is amended to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate payroll record, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, and straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) Each contractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated. Any copy of records made available for inspection by, or furnished to, a joint labor-management committee established pursuant to the federal Labor Management Cooperation Act of 1978 (Section 175a of Title 29 of the United States Code) shall be marked or obliterated only to prevent disclosure of an individual's social security number.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of written notice specifying in what respects the contractor must comply with this section. In the event that the contractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

An act to amend Sections 1723, 1726, 1727, and 1773.1 of, to add Sections 1741 and 1743 to, to add and repeal Sections 1742 and 1742.1 of, to repeal Sections 1730, 1731, 1732, 1733, and 1771.7 of, to repeal and amend Section 1775 of, and to repeal and add Section 1771.6 of, the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor September 29, 2000. Filed with Secretary of State September 30, 2000.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 1646, Steinberg. Public works: payments.

(1) Existing law regulating public works contracts requires the awarding body of a public works contract to withhold and retain from payments to the contractor all wages and penalties that have been forfeited pursuant to the contract or existing law. The awarding body is required to transfer all wages and penalties retained, to the Labor Commissioner for disbursement pursuant to specified provisions whenever a contractor fails to bring a suit against the awarding body for recovery of wages and penalties withheld within 90 days after the completion of the contract and formal acceptance of the job.

This bill would require the awarding body to report promptly any suspected violations of the laws regulating public works contracts to the Labor Commission and to retain all amounts required to satisfy any civil wage and penalty assessment issued by the Labor Commissioner.

(2) Existing law authorizes the contractor to bring suit for the limited purpose of recovery of the penalties or forfeitures withheld. Existing law permits the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to intervene in a contractor's suit for recovery of amounts withheld, provides for the deposit of wages for workers who cannot be located into the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wages Fund, and provides for the deposit of penalties into the General Fund. Existing law, until January 1, 2003, requires a contractor to withhold moneys due a subcontractor in an amount sufficient to pay the wages that are the subject of a claim filed with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, as directed by the division, if the body awarding the public works contract has not withheld sufficient moneys to pay the wage claims. Existing law requires the contractor to pay those moneys to the subcontractor after receipt of notification that the claim has been resolved, or to pay those moneys to the awarding body, under specified circumstances.

This bill would repeal these provisions and instead would require the Labor Commissioner to issue a civil wage and penalty assessment to the contractor or subcontractor or both if the Labor Commissioner determines after investigation that there has been a violation of the laws regulating public works contracts. The bill would permit an affected contractor or subcontractor to obtain review of a civil wage and penalty assessment by transmitting a written request for a hearing to the office of the Labor Commissioner that appears on the assessment within 60 days after service of the assessment and would require an impartial hearing officer, until January 1, 2005, and then an administrative law judge appointed by the Director of Industrial Relations to commence a hearing within 90 days of receipt of the request. The bill would permit an affected contractor or subcontractor to obtain review of the decision of the director, until January 1, 2005, and then an administrative law judge by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the superior court within 45 days after service of the decision. The bill would provide for liquidated damages in an amount equal to the amount of unpaid wages, as specified. The bill would also authorize informal settlement meetings.

The bill would provide that the contractor and subcontractor are jointly and severally liable for all amounts due pursuant to a final order or a judgment on that final order, but would require the Labor Commissioner to collect amounts due from the subcontractor before pursuing the claim against the contractor. The bill would require that the wage claim be satisfied from the amounts collected prior to those amounts being applied to penalties and that the money be prorated among all workers if an insufficient amount is recovered to pay each worker in full. The bill would require wages for workers who cannot be located to be placed in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund, a continuously appropriated fund, and penalties to be paid into the General Fund.

(3) Existing law requires any political subdivision that enforces the laws regulating public works contracts and any court collecting fines or penalties that result from enforcement actions by political subdivisions to deposit penalties or forfeitures withheld from any contract payment in the General Fund of the political subdivision. Existing law authorizes a contractor to appeal an enforcement action by a political subdivision to the Director of Industrial Relations.

The bill would repeal and recast this provision to apply to any awarding body that enforces the laws regulating public works contracts in accordance with specified provisions of existing law. The bill would require such an awarding body to provide written notice of the withholding of contract payments to the contractor and subcontractor, as specified. The withholding of contract payments would be reviewable in the same manner as a civil penalty order of the Labor Commissioner.

(4) Existing law provides that per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel, and subsistence pay, apprenticeship or other training programs, and similar purposes. Existing law requires the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute a public works contract entered into with the state to file with the Department of Industrial Relations, fully executed copies of the collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved for the purposes of determining the per diem wages.

This bill would specify the employer contributions, costs, and payments that employer payments may include and would provide that employer payments not required to be provided by state or federal law are a credit against the obligation to pay the general prevailing rate of wages. However, credits for employer payments would not reduce the obligation to pay the hourly straight time or overtime wages found to be prevailing. This bill would expand the requirement that copies of collective bargaining agreements be filed with the Department of Industrial Relations to apply to representatives of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute a public works contract entered into with a public entity other than the state. The bill would revise the filing requirements to permit, if the collective bargaining agreement has not been formalized, the temporary filing of a typescript of the final draft accompanied by a statement under penalty of perjury as to its effective date. Because this bill would impose additional duties on local agency employers, expand the scope of the existing crime of perjury, and provide that a violation of these provisions is a misdemeanor, this bill would impose a state-mandated local program.

(5) This bill provides that it would become operative on July 1, 2001.

(6) The California Constitution requires the state to reimburse local agencies and school districts for certain costs mandated by the state. Statutory provisions establish procedures for making that reimbursement, including the creation of a State Mandates Claims Fund to pay the costs of mandates that do not exceed $1,000,000 statewide and other procedures for claims whose statewide costs exceed $1,000,000.

This bill would provide that with regard to certain mandates no reimbursement is required by this act for a specified reason.

With regard to any other mandates, this bill would provide that, if the Commission on State Mandates determines that the bill contains costs so mandated by the state, reimbursement for those costs shall be made pursuant to the statutory provisions noted above.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The Legislature declares that its intent in adopting this act is to provide contractors and subcontractors with a prompt administrative hearing in the event that the contractor or subcontractor is alleged by the Labor Commissioner or an awarding body to have violated Labor Code provisions governing the obligations of contractors and subcontractors on public works projects, and to provide that the exclusive method for review of the decision after the administrative hearing is by petition for writ of mandate under Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is not the intent of this act to preclude remedies otherwise authorized by law to remedy violations of this chapter.

SEC. 2. Section 1723 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1723. "Worker" includes laborer, worker, or mechanic.

SEC. 3. Section 1726 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1726. The body awarding the contract for public work shall take cognizance of violations of the provisions of this chapter committed in the course of the execution of the contract, and shall promptly report any suspected violations to the Labor Commissioner.

If the awarding body determines as a result of its own investigation that there has been a violation of this chapter and withholds contract payments, the procedures in Section 1771.6 shall be followed.

SEC. 4. Section 1727 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1727. (a) Before making payments to the contractor of money due under a contract for public work, the awarding body shall withhold and retain therefrom all amounts required to satisfy any civil wage and penalty assessment issued by the Labor Commissioner under this chapter. The amounts required to satisfy a civil wage and penalty assessment shall not be disbursed by the awarding body until receipt of a final order that is no longer subject to judicial review.

(b) If the awarding body has not retained sufficient money under the contract to satisfy a civil wage and penalty assessment based on a subcontractor's violations, the contractor shall, upon the request of the Labor Commissioner, withhold sufficient money due the subcontractor under the contract to satisfy the assessment and transfer the money to the awarding body. These amounts shall not be disbursed by the awarding body until receipt of a final order that is no longer subject to judicial review.

SEC. 5. Section 1730 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 6. Section 1731 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 7. Section 1732 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 8. Section 1733 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 9. Section 1741 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1741. If the Labor Commissioner or his or her designee determines after an investigation that there has been a violation of this chapter, the Labor Commissioner shall with reasonable promptness issue a civil wage and penalty assessment to the contractor or subcontractor or both. The assessment shall be in writing and shall describe the nature of the violation and the amount of wages, penalties, and forfeitures due and shall include the basis for the assessment. The assessment shall be served not later than 180 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 180 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever occurs last. However, if the assessment is served after the expiration of this 180-day period, but before the expiration of an additional 180 days, and the awarding body has not yet made full payment to the contractor, the assessment is valid up to the amount of the funds retained. Service of the assessment shall be completed pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class and certified mail to the contractor, subcontractor, and awarding body. The assessment shall advise the contractor and subcontractor of the procedure for obtaining review of the assessment. The Labor Commissioner shall, to the extent practicable, ascertain the identity of any bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of wages covered by the assessment and any surety on a bond, and shall serve a copy of the assessment by certified mail to the bonding company or surety at the same time service is made to the contractor, subcontractor, and awarding body. However, no bonding company or surety shall be relieved of its responsibilities because it failed to receive notice from the Labor Commissioner.

SEC. 10. Section 1742 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1742. (a) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of a civil wage and penalty assessment under this chapter by transmitting a written request to the office of the Labor Commissioner that appears on the assessment within 60 days after service of the assessment. If no hearing is requested within 60 days after service of the assessment, the assessment shall become final.

(b) Upon receipt of a timely request, a hearing shall be commenced within 90 days before the director, who shall appoint an impartial hearing officer possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 11502 of the Government Code. The appointed hearing officer shall be an employee of the department, but shall not be an employee of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The contractor or subcontractor shall be provided an opportunity to review evidence to be utilized by the Labor Commissioner at the hearing within 20 days of the receipt of the written request for a hearing. Any evidence obtained by the Labor Commissioner subsequent to the 20-day cutoff shall be promptly disclosed to the contractor or subcontractor.

The contractor or subcontractor shall have the burden of proving that the basis for the civil wage and penalty assessment is incorrect.

The assessment shall be sufficiently detailed to provide fair notice to the contractor or subcontractor of the issues at the hearing.

Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the director shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the assessment. The decision of the director shall consist of a notice of findings, findings, and an order. This decision shall be served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party on file with the Labor Commissioner. Within 15 days of the issuance of the decision, the director may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

The director shall adopt regulations setting forth procedures for hearings under this subdivision.

(c) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of the decision of the director by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the decision. If no petition for writ of mandate is filed within 45 days after service of the decision, the order shall become final. If it is claimed in a petition for writ of mandate that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in the light of the whole record.

(d) A certified copy of a final order may be filed by the Labor Commissioner in the office of the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business. The clerk, immediately upon the filing, shall enter judgment for the state against the person assessed in the amount shown on the certified order.

(e) A judgment entered pursuant to this section shall bear the same rate of interest and shall have the same effect as other judgments and shall be given the same preference allowed by law on other judgments rendered for claims for taxes. The clerk shall not charge for the service performed by him or her pursuant to this section.

(f) An awarding body that has withheld funds in response to a civil wage and penalty assessment under this chapter shall, upon receipt of a certified copy of a final order that is no longer subject to judicial review, promptly transmit the withheld funds, up to the amount of the certified order, to the Labor Commissioner.

(g) This section shall provide the exclusive method for review of a civil wage and penalty assessment by the Labor Commissioner under this chapter or the decision of an awarding body to withhold contract payments pursuant to Section 1771.5.

(h) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2005, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2005, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 11. Section 1742 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1742. (a) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of a civil wage and penalty assessment under this chapter by transmitting a written request to the office of the Labor Commissioner that appears on the assessment within 60 days after service of the assessment. If no hearing is requested within 60 days after service of the assessment, the assessment shall become final.

(b) (1) Upon receipt of a timely request, a hearing shall be commenced within 90 days before an administrative law judge appointed by the Director of Industrial Relations. The appointed hearing judge shall be an employee of the department, but shall not be an employee of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The contractor or subcontractor shall be provided an opportunity to review evidence to be utilized by the Labor Commissioner at the hearing within 20 days of the receipt of the written request for a hearing. Any evidence obtained by the Labor Commissioner subsequent to the 20-day cutoff shall be promptly disclosed to the contractor or subcontractor.

(2) The contractor or subcontractor shall have the burden of proving that the basis for the civil wage and penalty assessment is incorrect. The assessment shall be sufficiently detailed to provide fair notice to the contractor or subcontractor of the issues at the hearing.

(3) Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the administrative law judge shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the assessment. The decision of the administrative law judge shall consist of a notice of findings, findings, and an order. This decision shall be served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party on file with the Labor Commissioner. Within 15 days of the issuance of the decision, the administrative law judge may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(4) The Director of Industrial Relations shall adopt regulations setting forth procedures for hearings under this subdivision.

(c) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of the decision of the administrative law judge by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the decision. If no petition for writ of mandate is filed within 45 days after service of the decision, the order shall become final. If it is claimed in a petition for writ of mandate that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in the light of the whole record.

(d) A certified copy of a final order may be filed by the Labor Commissioner in the office of the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business. The clerk, immediately upon the filing, shall enter judgment for the state against the person assessed in the amount shown on the certified order.

(e) A judgment entered pursuant to this section shall bear the same rate of interest and shall have the same effect as other judgments and shall be given the same preference allowed by law on other judgments rendered for claims for taxes. The clerk shall not charge for the service performed by him or her pursuant to this section.

(f) An awarding body that has withheld funds in response to a civil wage and penalty assessment under this chapter shall, upon receipt of a certified copy of a final order that is no longer subject to judicial review, promptly transmit the withheld funds, up to the amount of the certified order, to the Labor Commissioner.

(g) This section shall provide the exclusive method for review of a civil wage and penalty assessment by the Labor Commissioner under this chapter or the decision of an awarding body to withhold contract payments pursuant to Section 1771.5.

(h) This section shall become operative on January 1, 2005.

SEC. 12. Section 1742.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1742.1. (a) After 60 days following the service of a civil wage and penalty assessment under Section 1741 or a notice of withholding under subdivision (a) of Section 1771.6, the affected contractor, subcontractor, and surety on a bond or bonds issued to secure the payment of wages covered by the assessment or notice shall be liable for liquidated damages in an amount equal to the wages, or portion thereof, that still remain unpaid. If the assessment or notice subsequently is overturned or modified after administrative or judicial review, liquidated damages shall be payable only on the wages found to be due and unpaid. If the contractor or subcontractor demonstrates to the satisfaction of the director that he or she had substantial grounds for believing the assessment or notice to be in error, the director shall waive payment of the liquidated damages. Any liquidated damages collected shall be distributed to the employee along with the unpaid wages. Section 203.5 shall not apply to claims for prevailing wages under this chapter.

(b) The Labor Commissioner shall, upon receipt of a request from the affected contractor or subcontractor within 30 days following the service of a civil wage and penalty assessment under Section 1741, afford the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to meet with the Labor Commissioner or his or her designee to attempt to settle a dispute regarding the assessment without the need for formal proceedings. The awarding body shall, upon receipt of a request from the affected contractor or subcontractor within 30 days following the service of a notice of withholding under subdivision (a) of Section 1771.6, afford the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to meet with the designee of the awarding body to attempt to settle a dispute regarding the notice without the need for formal proceedings. The settlement meeting may be held in person or by telephone and shall take place before the expiration of the 60-day period for seeking administrative review. No evidence of anything said or any admission made for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to, the settlement meeting is admissible or subject to discovery in any administrative or civil proceeding. No writing prepared for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to, the settlement meeting, other than a final settlement agreement, is admissible or subject to discovery in any administrative or civil proceeding. The assessment or notice shall advise the contractor or subcontractor of the opportunity to request a settlement meeting.

This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2005, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2005, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 13. Section 1742.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1742.1. (a) After 60 days following the service of a civil wage and penalty assessment under Section 1741 or a notice of withholding under subdivision (a) of Section 1771.6, the affected contractor, subcontractor, and surety on a bond or bonds issued to secure the payment of wages covered by the assessment or notice shall be liable for liquidated damages in an amount equal to the wages, or portion thereof, that still remain unpaid. If the assessment or notice subsequently is overturned or modified after administrative or judicial review, liquidated damages shall be payable only on the wages found to be due and unpaid. If the contractor or subcontractor demonstrates to the satisfaction of the administrative law judge that he or she had substantial grounds for believing the assessment or notice to be in error, the administrative law judge shall waive payment of the liquidated damages. Any liquidated damages collected shall be distributed to the employee along with the unpaid wages. Section 203.5 shall not apply to claims for prevailing wages under this chapter.

(b) The Labor Commissioner shall, upon receipt of a request from the affected contractor or subcontractor within 30 days following the service of a civil wage and penalty assessment under Section 1741, afford the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to meet with the Labor Commissioner or his or her designee to attempt to settle a dispute regarding the assessment without the need for formal proceedings. The awarding body shall, upon receipt of a request from the affected contractor or subcontractor within 30 days following the service of a notice of withholding under subdivision (a) of Section 1771.6, afford the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to meet with the designee of the awarding body to attempt to settle a dispute regarding the notice without the need for formal proceedings. The settlement meeting may be held in person or by telephone and shall take place before the expiration of the 60-day period for seeking administrative review. No evidence of anything said or any admission made for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to, the settlement meeting is admissible or subject to discovery in any administrative or civil proceeding. No writing prepared for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to, the settlement meeting, other than a final settlement agreement, is admissible or subject to discovery in any administrative or civil proceeding. The assessment or notice shall advise the contractor or subcontractor of the opportunity to request a settlement meeting.

This section shall become operative on January 1, 2005.

SEC. 14. Section 1743 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1743. (a) The contractor and subcontractor shall be jointly and severally liable for all amounts due pursuant to a final order under this chapter or a judgment thereon. The Labor Commissioner shall first exhaust all reasonable remedies to collect the amount due from the subcontractor before pursuing the claim against the contractor.

(b) From the amount collected, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties. If insufficient money is recovered to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

(c) Wages for workers who cannot be located shall be placed in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund and held in trust for the workers pursuant to Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund.

(d) A final order under this chapter or a judgment thereon shall be binding, with respect to the amount found to be due, on a bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of wages and a surety on a bond. The limitations period of any action on a payment bond shall be tolled pending a final order that is no longer subject to judicial review.

SEC. 15. Section 1771.6 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 16. Section 1771.6 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1771.6. (a) Any awarding body that enforces this chapter in accordance with Section 1726 or 1771.5 shall provide notice of the withholding of contract payments to the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable. The notice shall be in writing and shall describe the nature of the violation and the amount of wages, penalties, and forfeitures withheld. Service of the notice shall be completed pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class and certified mail to the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable. The notice shall advise the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable, of the procedure for obtaining review of the withholding of contract payments.

The awarding body shall also serve a copy of the notice by certified mail to any bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of wages covered by the notice and to any surety on a bond, if their identities are known to the awarding body.

(b) The withholding of contract payments in accordance with Section 1726 or 1771.5 shall be reviewable under Section 1742 in the same manner as if the notice of the withholding was a civil penalty order of the Labor Commissioner under this chapter. If review is requested, the Labor Commissioner may intervene to represent the awarding body.

(c) Pending a final order, or the expiration of the time period for seeking review of the notice of the withholding, the awarding body shall not disburse any contract payments withheld.

(d) From the amount recovered, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties. If insufficient money is recovered to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

(e) Wages for workers who cannot be located shall be placed in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund and held in trust for the workers pursuant to Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund of the awarding body that has enforced this chapter pursuant to Section 1771.5.

SEC. 17. Section 1771.7 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 18. Section 1773.1 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.1. (a) Per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel, subsistence, and apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by Section 3093, so long as the cost of training is reasonably related to the amount of the contributions, and similar purposes, when the term "per diem wages" is used in this chapter or in any other statute applicable to public works.

(b) Employer payments include all of the following:

(1) The rate of contribution irrevocably made by the employer to a trustee or third person pursuant to a plan, fund, or program.

(2) The rate of actual costs to the employer reasonably anticipated in providing benefits to workers pursuant to an enforceable commitment to carry out a financially responsible plan or program communicated in writing to the workers affected.

(3) Payments to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(c) Employer payments are a credit against the obligation to pay the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. However, no credit shall be granted for benefits required to be provided by other state or federal law. Credits for employer payments also shall not reduce the obligation to pay the hourly straight time or overtime wages found to be prevailing.

(d) The credit for employer payments shall be computed on an annualized basis where the employer seeks credit for employer payments that are higher for public works projects than for private construction performed by the same employer, except where one or more of the following occur:

(1) The employer has an enforceable obligation to make the higher rate of payments on future private construction performed by the employer.

(2) The higher rate of payments is required by a project labor agreement.

(3) The payments are made to the California Apprenticeship Council pursuant to Section 1777.5.

(4) The director determines that annualization would not serve the purposes of this chapter.

(e) For the purpose of determining those per diem wages for contracts, the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute contracts shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of the collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The collective bargaining agreements shall be filed after their execution and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids. If the collective bargaining agreement has not been formalized, a typescript of the final draft may be filed temporarily, accompanied by a statement under penalty of perjury as to its effective date.

Where a copy of the collective bargaining agreement has previously been filed, fully executed copies of all modifications and extensions of the agreement that affect per diem wages or holidays shall be filed.

The failure to comply with filing requirements of this subdivision shall not be grounds for setting aside a prevailing wage determination if the information taken into consideration is correct.

SEC. 19. Section 1775 of the Labor Code, as amended by Section 1 of Chapter 757 of the Statutes of 1997, is repealed.

SEC. 20. Section 1775 of the Labor Code, as added by Section 2 of Chapter 757 of the Statutes of 1997, is amended to read:

1775. (a) The contractor and any subcontractor under him or her shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing wage rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or, except as provided in subdivision (b), by any subcontractor under him or her.

The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner based on consideration of both of the following:

(1) Whether the failure of the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rate of per diem wages was a good faith mistake and, if so, the error was promptly and voluntarily corrected upon being brought to the attention of the contractor or subcontractor.

(2) Whether the contractor or subcontractor has a prior record of failing to meet its prevailing wage obligations.

The determination of the Labor Commissioner as to the amount of the penalty shall be reviewable only for abuse of discretion. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor or subcontractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

(b) If a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the general prevailing per diem wages by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a) unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor to pay the specified prevailing rate of wages to those workers or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with all of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor for the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall monitor the payment of the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages by the subcontractor to the employees, by periodic review of the certified payroll records of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of the failure of the subcontractor to pay his or her workers the specified prevailing rate of wages, the contractor shall diligently take corrective action to halt or rectify the failure, including, but not limited to, retaining sufficient funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project.

(4) Prior to making final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has paid the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages to his or her employees on the public works project and any amounts due pursuant to Section 1813.

(c) The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall notify the contractor on a public works project within 15 days of the receipt by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of a complaint of the failure of a subcontractor on that public works project to pay workers the general prevailing rate of per diem wages.

SEC. 21. This act shall become operative on July 1, 2001.

SEC. 22. No reimbursement is required by this act pursuant to Section 6 of Article XIII B of the California Constitution for certain costs that may be incurred by a local agency or school district because in that regard this act creates a new crime or infraction, eliminates a crime or infraction, or changes the penalty for a crime or infraction, within the meaning of Section 17556 of the Government Code, or changes the definition of a crime within the meaning of Section 6 of Article XIII B of the California Constitution.

However, notwithstanding Section 17610 of the Government Code, if the Commission on State Mandates determines that this act contains other costs mandated by the state, reimbursement to local agencies and school districts for those costs shall be made pursuant to Part 7 (commencing with Section 17500) of Division 4 of Title 2 of the Government Code. If the statewide cost of the claim for reimbursement does not exceed one million dollars ($1,000,000), reimbursement shall be made from the State Mandates Claims Fund.

An act to amend Sections 4850 and 4850.3 of the Labor Code, relating to workers' compensation.

[Approved by Governor September 29, 2000. Filed with Secretary of State September 29, 2000.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 1883, Lowenthal. Workers' compensation: disability benefits for airport law enforcement officers and harbor and port police.

Existing workers' compensation law provides that certain peace officers, firefighters, and other specified state and local public employees are entitled to a leave of absence without loss of salary while disabled by injury or illness arising out of and in the course of employment. This leave of absence is in lieu of temporary disability payments or maintenance allowance payments otherwise payable.

This bill would extend this provision to specified airport law enforcement officers, harbor and port police officers, wardens, and special officers.

This bill would incorporate additional changes in Section 4850 of the Labor Code proposed by AB 1124 and SB 2081, to become operative only if those bills are enacted, as specified, and become operative on or before January 1, 2001, and this bill is enacted last.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

The payments shall be no less than 50 percent of the estimated highest average annual compensation earnable by the local safety officer during the three consecutive years of employment immediately preceding the effective date of his or her disability retirement, unless the local safety officer chooses an optional settlement in the permanent disability retirement application process which would reduce the pension allowance below 50 percent. In the case where the local safety officer's choice lowers the disability pension allowance below 50 percent of average annual compensation as calculated, the advanced pension payments shall be set at an amount equal to the disability pension allowance. If a local agency has an adopted policy of paying for any accumulated sick leave after the safety officer is eligible for a disability allowance, the advanced disability pension payments under this section may only be made when the local safety officer has exhausted all sick leave payments. Advanced disability pension payments shall not be considered a salary under this or any other provision of law. All advanced disability pension payments made by a local agency with

An act to amend Section 1720 of the Labor Code, relating to public contracts.

[Approved by Governor September 28, 2000. Filed with Secretary of State September 29, 2000.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

SB 1999, Burton. Public work.

Existing law defines public works and establishes certain requirements that must be met by persons who enter into contracts for public works. Those requirements include provisions generally known as the prevailing wage laws. The prevailing wage laws require that all workers employed on public works be paid the general prevailing rate of per diem wages, as determined by the Director of Industrial Relations.

This bill would revise the definition of public works by providing that "construction" includes work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work. By requiring local government entities to comply with the provisions affecting public works, including the prevailing wage laws, this bill would impose a state-mandated local program.

The California Constitution requires the state to reimburse local agencies and school districts for certain costs mandated by the state. Statutory provisions establish procedures for making that reimbursement, including the creation of a State Mandates Claims Fund to pay the costs of mandates that do not exceed $1,000,000 statewide and other procedures for claims whose statewide costs exceed $1,000,000.

This bill would provide that, if the Commission on State Mandates determines that the bill contains costs mandated by the state, reimbursement for those costs shall be made pursuant to these statutory provisions.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1720 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1720. As used in this chapter, "public works" means:

(a) Construction, alteration, demolition, or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority.

For purposes of this subdivision, "construction" includes work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work.

(b) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation, and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. "Public work" shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, except as used in Section 1778 relating to retaining wages.

(c) Street, sewer, or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the state, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether the political subdivision or district operates under a freeholder's charter or not.

(d) The laying of carpet done under a building lease-maintenance contract and paid for out of public funds.

(e) The laying of carpet in a public building done under contract and paid for in whole or part out of public funds.

(f) Public transportation demonstration projects authorized pursuant to Section 143 of the Streets and Highways Code.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding Section 17610 of the Government Code, if the Commission on State Mandates determines that this act contains costs mandated by the state, reimbursement to local agencies and school districts for those costs shall be made pursuant to Part 7 (commencing with Section 17500) of Division 4 of Title 2 of the Government Code. If the statewide cost of the claim for reimbursement does not exceed one million dollars ($1,000,000), reimbursement shall be made from the State Mandates Claims Fund.

CHAPTER 875

An act to amend Sections 1777.5, 1777.7, and 3099 of the Labor Code, relating to employment, and making an appropriation therefor.

[Approved by Governor September 28, 2000. Filed with Secretary of State September 29, 2000.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 2481, Romero. Apprentice employment: apprenticeship standards.

(1) Existing law requires contractors on public works who employ journeymen or apprentices to contribute to a fund to administer certain apprenticeship programs, as specified. Existing law also requires the California Apprenticeship Council to make prescribed grants to apprenticeship programs at the end of each fiscal year.

This bill would revise and recast the provisions prescribing grants to apprenticeship programs. The bill would also provide that contributions be deposited into the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund, a continuously appropriated fund, which the bill would create. By providing for the deposit of moneys into a continuously appropriated fund, the bill would make an appropriation.

(2) Under existing law, a contractor or subcontractor that employs apprentices on a public work in a contract for 50 or more working days, must comply with various conditions relating to that employment, including payment of the prevailing wage and employing apprentices only in the craft or trade for which they are registered. Existing law provides penalties for knowing violations of these provisions. If the Administrator of Apprenticeship determines that there has been a knowing violation, the administrator is required to deny the violator the right to bid on any public works contract for specified periods of time.

This bill would delete the reference to days thereby making those provisions applicable regardless of the length of the contract.

This bill would instead impose the above penalties on a contractor or subcontractor that is determined by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards to have knowingly committed a serious violation of the provisions governing employment of apprentices on public works. These penalties may be reduced if the chief determines that they would be disproportionate to the severity of the violation. The bill would also provide that the chief has discretion as to whether to suspend a violator's right to bid on or be awarded or perform work as a subcontractor on any public works contracts. The bill would also make related, technical, and clarifying changes.

(3) Existing law provides for apprenticeship programs within the Division of Apprenticeship Standards in the Department of Industrial Relations. Existing law also requires the division, on or before January 1, 2001, to establish and validate minimum standards for the competency and training of electricians, as defined, through a system of testing and certification; establish fees necessary to implement those requirements; and establish and adopt regulations for enforcement.

This bill instead would require those standards, fees, and regulations to be established on or before July 1, 2001. The bill would also make a clarifying change.

Appropriation: yes.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. (a) Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

(b) Every apprentice employed upon public works shall be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

(c) Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards that have been approved by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and who are parties to written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed at the apprentice wage rate on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with either (1) the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training or (2) the rules and regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(d) When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor shall employ apprentices in at least the ratio set forth in this section and may apply to any apprenticeship program in the craft or trade that can provide apprentices to the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, the decision of the apprenticeship program to approve or deny a certificate shall be subject to review by the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The apprenticeship program or programs, upon approving the contractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor. A contractor covered by an apprenticeship program's standards shall not be required to submit any additional application in order to include additional public works contracts under that program. "Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. As used in this section, "contractor" includes any subcontractor under a contractor who performs any public works not excluded by subdivision (o).

(e) Prior to commencing work on a contract for public works, every contractor shall submit contract award information to an applicable apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public work. The information submitted shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices proposed to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices would be employed. A copy of this information shall also be submitted to the awarding body if requested by the awarding body. Within 60 days after concluding work on the contract, each contractor and subcontractor shall submit to the awarding body, if requested, and to the apprenticeship program a verified statement of the journeyman and apprentice hours performed on the contract. The information under this subdivision shall be public. The apprenticeship programs shall retain this information for 12 months.

(f) The apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the area of the site of the public work shall ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities.

(g) The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen employed in a particular craft or trade on the public work may be no higher than the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the apprenticeship program operates where the contractor agrees to be bound by those standards, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of journeyman work.

(h) This ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman is employed at the jobsite and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the ratio. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract or, in the case of a subcontractor, before the end of the subcontract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the jobsite. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of an apprenticeship program, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

(i) A contractor covered by this section that has agreed to be covered by an apprenticeship program's standards upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or that has been previously approved for an apprenticeship program in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the applicable apprenticeship standards, but in no event less than the 1-to-5 ratio required by subdivision (g).

(j) Upon proper showing by a contractor that he or she employs apprentices in a particular craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by journeymen, the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio, as set forth in this section for that craft or trade.

(k) An apprenticeship program has the discretion to grant to a participating contractor or contractor association a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(1) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(2) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(3) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(4) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large, or the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

(l) When an exemption is granted pursuant to subdivision (k) to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

(m) (1) A contractor to whom a contract is awarded, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade shall contribute to the California Apprenticeship Council the same amount that the director determines is the prevailing amount of apprenticeship training contributions in the area of the public works site. A contractor may take as a credit for payments to the council any amounts paid by the contractor to an approved apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public works project. The contractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract.

(2) At the conclusion of each fiscal year, the California Apprenticeship Council shall distribute training contributions received by the council under this subdivision, less the expenses of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards for administering this subdivision, by making grants to approved apprenticeship programs for the purpose of training apprentices. The funds shall be distributed as follows:

(A) If there is an approved multiemployer apprenticeship program serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, a grant to that program shall be made.

(B) If there are two or more approved multiemployer apprenticeship programs serving the same craft or trade and geographic area for which the training contributions were made to the council, the grant shall be divided among those programs based on the number of apprentices registered in each program.

(C) All training contributions not distributed under subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall be used to defray the future expenses of administering this subdivision.

(3) All training contributions received pursuant to this subdivision shall be deposited in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund, which fund is hereby created in the State Treasury. Notwithstanding Section 13340 of the Government Code, all money in the Apprenticeship Training Contribution Fund is hereby continuously appropriated for the purpose of carrying out this subdivision and to pay the expenses of the division in administering this subdivision.

(n) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

(o) This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000).

(p) All decisions of an apprenticeship program under this section are subject to Section 3081.

SEC. 2. Section 1777.7 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.7. (a) (1) A contractor or subcontractor that is determined by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards to have knowingly violated Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. The amount of this penalty may be reduced by the Chief if the amount of the penalty would be disproportionate to the severity of the violation. A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly commits a second or subsequent violation of Section 1777.5 within a three-year period, where the noncompliance results in apprenticeship training not being provided as required by this chapter, shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of not more than three hundred dollars ($300) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed by the Chief, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(2) In lieu of the penalty provided for in this subdivision, the Chief may, for a first-time violation and with the concurrence of an apprenticeship program described in subdivision (d), order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

(b) In the event a contractor or subcontractor is determined by the Chief to have knowingly committed a serious violation of any provision of Section 1777.5, the Chief may also deny to the contractor or subcontractor, and to its responsible officers, the right to bid on or be awarded or perform work as a subcontractor on any public works contract for a period of up to one year for the first violation and for a period of up to three years for a second or subsequent violation. Each period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of noncompliance by the Chief becomes a final order of the Administrator of Apprenticeship.

(c) (1) An affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer may obtain a review of the determination of the Chief imposing the debarment or civil penalty by transmitting a written request to the office of the Administrator within 30 days after service of the determination of debarment or civil penalty. A copy of this report shall also be served on the Chief. If the Administrator does not receive a timely request for review of the determination of debarment or civil penalty made by the Chief, the order shall become the final order of the Administrator.

(2) Within 20 days of the timely receipt of a request for review, the Chief shall provide the contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer the opportunity to review any evidence the Chief may offer at the hearing. The Chief shall also promptly disclose any nonprivileged documents obtained after the 20-day time limit at a time set forth for exchange of evidence by the Administrator.

(3) Within 90 days of the timely receipt of a request for review, a hearing shall be commenced before the Administrator or an impartial hearing officer designated by the Administrator and possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 11502 of the Government Code. The affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer shall have the burden of providing evidence of compliance with Section 1777.5.

(4) Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the Administrator shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the determination of debarment or civil penalty. The decision shall contain a statement of the factual and legal basis for the decision and an order. This decision shall be served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party that the party has filed with the Administrator. Within 15 days of issuance of the decision, the Administrator may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(5) An affected contractor, subcontractor, or responsible officer who has timely requested review and obtained a decision under paragraph (4) may obtain review of the decision of the Administrator by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the final decision. If no timely petition for a writ of mandate is filed, the decision shall become the final order of the Administrator. The decision of the Administrator shall be affirmed unless the petitioner shows that the Administrator abused his or her discretion. If the petitioner claims that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the entire record.

(6) The Chief may certify a copy of the final order of the Administrator and file it with the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business. The clerk, immediately upon the filing, shall enter judgment for the state against the person assessed in the amount shown on the certified order. A judgment entered pursuant to this section shall bear the same rate of interest and shall have the same effect as other judgments and be given the same preference allowed by the law on other judgments rendered for claims for taxes. The clerk shall not charge for the service performed by him or her pursuant to this section. An awarding body that has withheld funds in response to a determination by the Chief imposing a penalty under this section shall, upon receipt of a certified copy of a final order of the Administrator, promptly transmit the withheld funds, up to the amount of the certified order, to the Administrator.

(d) If a subcontractor is found to have violated Section 1777.5, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a), unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5 or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with any of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor or the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall continually monitor a subcontractor's use of apprentices required to be employed on the public works project pursuant to subdivision (d) of Section 1777.5, including, but not limited to, periodic review of the certified payroll of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of a failure of the subcontractor to employ the required number of apprentices, the contractor shall take corrective action, including, but not limited to, retaining funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project until the failure is corrected.

(4) Prior to making the final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain a declaration signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has employed the required number of apprentices on the public works project.

(e) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(f) The Chief shall consider, in setting the amount of a monetary penalty, in determining whether a violation is serious, and in determining whether and for how long a party should be debarred for violating this section, all of the following circumstances:

(1) Whether the violation was intentional.

(2) Whether the party has committed other violations of Section 1777.5.

(3) Whether, upon notice of the violation, the party took steps to voluntarily remedy the violation.

(4) Whether, and to what extent, the violation resulted in lost training opportunities for apprentices.

(5) Whether, and to what extent, the violation otherwise harmed apprentices or apprenticeship programs.

If a party seeks review of a decision by the Chief to impose a monetary penalty or period of debarment, the Administrator shall decide de novo the appropriate penalty, by considering the same factors set forth above.

(g) The interpretation of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council. The Administrator may adopt regulations to establish guidelines for the imposition of monetary penalties and periods of debarment and may designate precedential decisions under Section 11425.60 of the Government Code.

SEC. 3. Section 3099 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3099. The Division of Apprenticeship Standards shall do all of the following:

(a) On or before July 1, 2001, establish and validate minimum standards for the competency and training of electricians through a system of testing and certification.

(b) On or before March 1, 2000, establish an advisory committee and panels as necessary to carry out the functions under this section. There shall be contractor representation from both joint apprenticeship programs and unilateral nonunion programs in the electrical contracting industry.

(c) On or before July 1, 2001, establish fees necessary to implement this section.

(d) On or before July 1, 2001, establish and adopt regulations to enforce this section.

(e) There shall be no discrimination for or against any person based on membership or nonmembership in a union.

As used in this section, "electricians" include all employees who engage in the connection of electrical devices for electrical contractors licensed pursuant to Section 7058 of the Business and Professions Code, specifically, contractors classified as electrical contractors in the Contractors' State License Board Rules and Regulations. This section does not apply to electrical connections under 100 volt-amperes. This section does not apply to persons performing work to which Section 7042.1 of the Business and Professions Code is applicable, or to electrical work ordinarily and customarily performed by stationary engineers.

(4) The oversight committee shall be composed of qualified individuals with experience in Holocaust claims cases, similar investigations, archival research, and international law. The oversight committee shall also include Holocaust survivors. No member of the oversight committee shall have a potential or actual conflict of interest, or shall be employed by a person who has a potential or actual conflict of interest.

(5) The appointments shall be expedited because of the urgency due to survivors' needs.

(6) The oversight committee shall have the following authority and shall do all of the following:

(A) Review and make recommendations concerning any insurance settlement negotiation or offer relating to a Holocaust era insurance claim in which the department is involved.

(B) Review and make recommendations to the commissioner on the priorities for expenditure of funds and use of resources by the department for Holocaust era insurance claims related activities.

(C) Recommend whether a proposed settlement of a Holocaust era insurance claim submitted to the committee pursuant to paragraph (7) is equitable before the department finalizes the settlement agreement.

(7) The commissioner, in the event of a proposed settlement of any policy or group of policies relating to Holocaust era insurance claims, shall confer with the committee prior to the department finalizing the settlement agreement. The department may not finalize a proposed settlement of a Holocaust era insurance claim unless the committee, pursuant to subparagraph (C) of paragraph (6), recommends that the proposed settlement is equitable.

(e) The department shall report its progress in implementing this section and its participation in the identification and resolution of insurance claims of Holocaust survivors and their beneficiaries and heirs. The report shall also include an overview of current and anticipated expenditures in implementing this section. The department shall make this report biannually to the insurance and budget committees of the Legislature.

SEC. 123. Section 1174.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1174.5. Any person employing labor who willfully fails to maintain the records required by subdivision (c) of Section 1174 or accurate and complete records required by subdivision (d) of Section 1174, or to allow any member of the commission or employees of the division to inspect records pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 1174, shall be subject to a civil penalty of five hundred dollars ($500).

SEC. 124. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. (a) Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

(b) Every apprentice employed upon public works shall be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

(c) Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards that have been approved by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and who are parties to written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed at the apprentice wage rate on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with either (1) the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training or (2) the rules and regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(d) When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor shall employ apprentices in at least the ratio set forth in this section and may apply to any apprenticeship program in the craft or trade that can provide apprentices to the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, approval or denial of the apprenticeship program shall be subject to review by the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The apprenticeship program or programs, upon approving the contractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor. A contractor covered by an apprenticeship program's standards shall not be required to submit any additional application in order to include additional public works contracts under that program. "Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. As used in this section, "contractor" includes any subcontractor under a contractor who performs any public works not excluded by subdivision (o).

(e) Prior to commencing work on a contract for public works, every contractor shall submit contract award information to an applicable apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public work. The information submitted shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices proposed to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices would be employed. A copy of this information shall also be submitted to the awarding body if requested by the awarding body. Within 60 days after concluding work on the contract, each contractor and subcontractor shall submit to the awarding body, if requested, and to the apprenticeship program a verified statement of the journeyman and apprentice hours performed on the contract. The information under this subdivision shall be public. The apprenticeship programs shall retain this information for 12 months.

(f) The apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the area of the site of the public work shall ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities.

(g) The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen employed in a particular craft or trade on the public work may be no higher than the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the apprenticeship program operates where the contractor agrees to be bound by those standards, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of journeyman work.

(h) This ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman is employed at the jobsite and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the ratio. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract or, in the case of a subcontractor, before the end of the subcontract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the jobsite. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of an apprenticeship program, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

(i) A contractor covered by this section that has agreed to be covered by an apprenticeship program's standards upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or that has been previously approved for an apprenticeship program in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the applicable apprenticeship standards, but in no event less than the 1-to-5 ratio required by subdivision (g).

(j) Upon proper showing by a contractor that he or she employs apprentices in a particular craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio, as set forth in this section for that craft or trade.

(k) An apprenticeship program has the discretion to grant to a participating contractor or contractor association a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(1) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(2) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(3) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(4) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large, or the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

(l) When an exemption is granted pursuant to subdivision (k) to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

(m) A contractor to whom a contract is awarded, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade shall contribute to the California Apprenticeship Council the same amount that the director determines is the prevailing amount of apprenticeship training contributions in the area of the public works site. A contractor may take as a credit for payments to the council any amounts paid by the contractor to an approved apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public works project. The contractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. At the end of each fiscal year the California Apprenticeship Council shall make grants to each apprenticeship program in proportion to the number of hours of training provided by the program for which the program did not receive contributions, weighted by the regular rate of contribution for the program. These grants shall be made from funds collected by the California Apprenticeship Council during the fiscal year pursuant to this subdivision from contractors that employed registered apprentices but did not contribute to an approved apprenticeship program. All these funds received during the fiscal year shall be distributed as grants.

(n) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

(o) This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days.

(p) All decisions of an apprenticeship program under this section are subject to Section 3081.

SEC. 125. Section 1777.7 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.7. (a) A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly violates Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. The amount of this penalty shall be based on consideration whether the violation was a good faith mistake due to inadvertence. A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly commits a second or subsequent violation of Section 1777.5 within a three-year period, where the noncompliance results in apprenticeship training not being provided as required by this chapter, shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of not more than three hundred dollars ($300) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(b) (1) In the event a contractor or subcontractor is determined by the Administrator of Apprenticeship to have knowingly violated any provision of Section 1777.5, the Administrator shall deny to the contractor or subcontractor, both individually and in the name of the business entity under which the contractor or subcontractor is doing business, the right to bid on or receive any public works contract for a period of up to one year for the first violation and for a period of up to three years for a second or subsequent violation. Each period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of noncompliance by the Administrator of Apprenticeship.

(2) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain a review of the debarment or civil penalty by transmitting a written request to the office of the Administrator within 30 days after service of the order of debarment or civil penalty. If the Administrator receives no request for review within 30 days after service, the order of debarment or civil penalty shall become final for the period authorized.

(3) Within 20 days of the timely receipt of a request for hearing, the Administrator shall provide the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to review any evidence the Administrator may offer at the hearing. The Administrator shall also promptly disclose to the contractor or subcontractor any nonprivileged documents obtained after the 20-day time limit.

(4) Within 90 days of the timely receipt of the request for hearing, a hearing shall be commenced before an impartial hearing officer designated by the Administrator and possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to Section 11502 of the Government Code. The contractor or subcontractor shall have the burden of showing compliance with Section 1777.5. The decision to debar shall be reviewed by a hearing officer or court only for abuse of discretion.

(5) Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the hearing officer shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the debarment or civil penalty. The decision shall contain a notice of findings, findings, and an order. This decision shall be deemed the final decision of the Administrator and shall be served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party on file with the Administrator. Within 15 days of issuance of the decision, the hearing officer may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(6) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of the final decision of the Administrator by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the final decision to debar or to assess a civil penalty. If no petition for a writ of mandate is filed within 45 days after service of the final decision, the order shall become final. If the petitioner claims that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the entire record.

(7) The Administrator may file a certified copy of a final order with the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business.

(c) If a subcontractor is found to have violated Section 1777.5, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a), unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5 or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with any of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor or the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall continually monitor a subcontractor's use of apprentices required to be employed on the public works project pursuant to subdivision (d) of Section 1777.5, including, but not limited to, periodic review of the certified payroll of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of a failure of the subcontractor to employ the required number of apprentices, the contractor shall take corrective action, including, but not limited to, retaining funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project until the failure is corrected.

(4) Prior to making the final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has employed the required number of apprentices on the public works project.

(d) In lieu of the penalty provided for in subdivision (a) or (b), the director may for a first-time violation and with the concurrence of the apprenticeship program, order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

(e) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(f) The interpretation and enforcement of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures of the California Apprenticeship Council.

SEC. 126. Section 3762 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3762. (a) Except as provided in subdivisions (b) and (c), the insurer shall discuss all elements of the claim file that affect the employer's premium with the employer, and shall supply copies of the documents that affect the premium at the employer's expense during reasonable business hours.

(b) The right provided by this section shall not extend to any document that the insurer is prohibited from disclosing to the employer under the attorney-client privilege, any other applicable privilege, or statutory prohibition upon disclosure, or under Section 1877.4 of the Insurance Code.

(c) An insurer, third-party administrator retained by a self-insured employer pursuant to Section 3702.1 to administer the employer's workers' compensation claims, and those employees and agents specified by a self-insured employer to administer the employer's workers' compensation claims, are prohibited from disclosing or causing to be disclosed to an employer, any medical information, as defined in Section 56.05 of the Civil Code, about an employee who has filed a workers' compensation claim, except as follows:

(1) If the diagnosis of the injury for which workers' compensation is claimed would affect the employer's premium, then an insurer may disclose that diagnosis pursuant to subdivision (a).

in the county, that contributed a positive amount to the county's Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund for the 1998–99 fiscal year. The allocation share for each recipient local agency shall be determined pursuant to the following calculations:

(1) Divide the amount of revenue shifted for the 1998–99 fiscal year from the local agency to the county's Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund by the total amount of revenue shifted for the 1998–99 fiscal year to the county's Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund by all local agencies in the county contributing a positive amount to that fund.

(2) Multiply the ratio determined pursuant to paragraph (1) by the amount of revenues allocated to the county pursuant to paragraph (2) of subdivision (b).

SEC. 176. Any section of any act enacted by the Legislature during the 2000 calendar year that takes effect on or before January 1, 2001, and that amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals a section that is amended, amended and renumbered, added, repealed and added, or repealed by this act, shall prevail over this act, whether that act is enacted prior to, or subsequent to, the enactment of this act. The repeal, or repeal and addition, of any article, chapter, part, title, or division of any code by this act shall not become operative if any section of any other act that is enacted by the Legislature during the 2000 calendar year and takes effect on or before January 1, 2001, amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals any section contained in that article, chapter, part, title, or division.

CHAPTER 903

An act to amend Sections 1777.5, 1777.7, 3070, 3075, and 3080 of, to add Sections 3073.1 and 3098 to, and to add and repeal Section 3073.2 of, the Labor Code, relating to apprenticeship programs.

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 921, Keeley. Apprenticeship programs.

Existing law establishes the California Apprenticeship Council to issue rules and regulations that establish apprenticeship standards, among other things. The council is composed of 14 members appointed by the Governor plus the Director of Industrial Relations or his or her designee, the Superintendent of Public Instruction or his or her designee, and the Chancellor of the California Community Colleges or his or her designee. The Governor's appointees include 6 representatives each from employer and employee organizations, geographically selected, and 2 representatives of the general public. This provision also provides that each member of the council shall receive $50 for each day of actual attendance at council or committee meetings together with actual and necessary traveling expenses.

This bill would provide that the Governor's appointees shall be 6 representatives each from employer organizations that sponsor apprenticeship programs and employee organizations that sponsor apprenticeship programs, geographically selected, and 2 representatives of the general public. This bill would also increase the council members' per diem to $100 for each day of actual attendance at council or committee meetings together with actual and necessary traveling expenses.

Existing law requires the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or his or her representative, among other things, to foster, promote, and develop the welfare of the apprentice and industry, improve the working conditions of apprentices, and advance their opportunities for profitable employment.

This bill would additionally require the division to randomly audit all apprenticeship programs during each 5-year period commencing January 1, 2000, to ensure compliance with specified requirements, including industry-specific training criteria that the bill would authorize the division to adopt, as specified. The authorization to adopt these criteria shall be repealed on January 1, 2003, unless a later enacted provision deletes or extends that date. The bill would require every apprenticeship program sponsor to cooperate with the division in conducting the audit. The audit reports would be presented to the California Apprenticeship Council and made public, except as specified. The chief would recommend remedial action to correct deficiencies and failure to correct them within a reasonable time would be grounds for withdrawing state approval of a program.

Existing law requires contractors on public works who employ journeymen or apprentices to contribute to a fund to administer certain apprenticeship programs, as specified.

This bill would revise those contribution requirements and would provide that, at the end of each fiscal year, the California Apprenticeship Council shall make prescribed grants to apprenticeship programs.

Existing law requires that the ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work performed on public works be not less than one hour of apprentice's work for every 5 hours by a journeyman, except as specified in the case of the land surveyor classification. A violation of this provision is punishable by a civil penalty of $50 per day of noncompliance. In the event of willful noncompliance of this provision, the Director of Industrial Relations would be required to debar the contractor, as specified.

This bill would eliminate the land surveyor exception and increase the civil penalty to $100 for each day of noncompliance. This bill would also impose a civil penalty of $300 for each day of noncompliance in the event of a subsequent violation of this provision within a 3-year period. The bill would provide that where a subcontractor is found to have violated these provisions, the prime contractor shall not be liable, unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply or the prime contractor failed to comply with specified requirements with regard to the subcontract. The bill would also revise the procedure for debarment under these provisions.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The Legislature finds and declares that apprenticeship programs are a vital part of the educational system in California. It is the purpose and goal of this legislation to strengthen the regulation of apprenticeship programs in California, to ensure that all apprenticeship programs approved under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 of the Labor Code meet the high standards necessary to prepare apprentices for the workplaces of the future and to prevent the exploitation of apprentices by employers or apprenticeship programs. It is further the intent of the Legislature that apprenticeship programs should make active efforts to recruit qualified men, women, and minorities and train them in the skills needed for the workplace.

SEC. 2. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. (a) Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

(b) Every apprentice employed upon public works shall be paid the prevailing rate of per diem wages for apprentices in the trade to which he or she is registered and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

(c) Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards that have been approved by the Chief of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and who are parties to written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed at the apprentice wage rate on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with either (1) the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training or (2) the rules and regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(d) When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor shall employ apprentices in at least the ratio set forth in this section and may apply to any apprenticeship program in the craft or trade that can provide apprentices to the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, approval or denial of the apprenticeship program shall be subject to review by the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The apprenticeship program or programs, upon approving the contractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor. A contractor covered by an apprenticeship program's standards shall not be required to submit any additional application in order to include additional public works contracts under that the program. "Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. As used in this section, "contractor" includes any subcontractor under a contractor who performs any public works not excluded by subdivision (o).

(e) Prior to commencing work on a contract for public works, every contractor shall submit contract award information to an applicable apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public work. The information submitted shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices proposed to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices would be employed. A copy of this information shall also be submitted to the awarding body if requested by the awarding body. Within 60 days after concluding work on the contract, each contractor and subcontractor shall submit to the awarding body, if requested, and to the apprenticeship program a verified statement of the journeyman and apprentice hours performed on the contract. The information under this subdivision shall be public. The apprenticeship programs shall retain this information for 12 months.

(f) The apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the area of the site of the public work shall ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities.

(g) The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen employed in a particular craft or trade on the public work may be no higher than the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the apprenticeship program operates where the contractor agrees to be bound by those standards, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of journeyman work.

(h) This ratio of apprentice work to journeyman work shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman is employed at the jobsite and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the ratio. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract or, in the case of a subcontractor, before the end of the subcontract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the jobsite. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of an apprenticeship program, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

(i) A contractor covered by this section that has agreed to be covered by an apprenticeship program's standards upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or that has been previously approved for an apprenticeship program in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the applicable apprenticeship standards, but in no event less than the 1-to-5 ratio required by subdivision (g).

(j) Upon proper showing by a contractor that he or she employs apprentices in a particular craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio, as set forth in this section for that craft or trade.

(k) An apprenticeship program has the discretion to grant to a participating contractor or contractor association a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(1) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(2) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(3) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(4) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large, or the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

(l) When an exemption is granted pursuant to subdivision (k) to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

(m) A contractor to whom a contract is awarded, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade shall contribute to the California Apprenticeship Council the same amount that the director determines is the prevailing amount of apprenticeship training contributions in the area of the public works site. A contractor may take as a credit for payments to the council any amounts paid by the contractor to an approved apprenticeship program that can supply apprentices to the site of the public works project. The contractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. At the end of each fiscal year the California Apprenticeship Council shall make grants to each apprenticeship program in proportion to the number of hours of training provided by the program for which the program did not receive contributions, weighted by the regular rate of contribution for the program. These grants shall be made from funds collected by the California Apprenticeship Council during the fiscal year pursuant to this subdivision from contractors that employed registered apprentices but did not contribute to an approved apprenticeship program. All these funds received during the fiscal year shall be distributed as grants.

(n) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

(o) This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days.

(p) All decisions of an apprenticeship program under this section are subject to Section 3081.

SEC. 3. Section 1777.7 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.7. (a) A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly violates Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. The amount of this penalty shall be based on consideration whether the violation was a good faith mistake due to inadvertence. A contractor or subcontractor that knowingly commits a second or subsequent violation of Section 1777.5 within a three-year period, where the noncompliance results in apprenticeship training not being provided as required by this chapter, shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of not more than three hundred dollars ($300) for each full calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(b) (1) In the event a contractor or subcontractor is determined by the Administrator of Apprenticeship to have knowingly violated any provision of Section 1777.5, the Administrator shall deny to the contractor or subcontractor, both individually and in the name of the business entity under which the contractor or subcontractor is doing business, the right to bid on or receive any public works contract for a period of up to one year for the first violation and for a period of up to three years for a second or subsequent violation. Each period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of noncompliance by the Administrator of Apprenticeship.

(2) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain a review of the debarment or civil penalty by transmitting a written request to the office of the Administrator within 30 days after service of the order of debarment or civil penalty. If the Administrator receives no request for review within 30 days after service, the order of debarment or civil penalty shall become final for the period authorized.

(3) Within 20 days of the timely receipt of a request for hearing, the Administrator shall provide the contractor or subcontractor the opportunity to review any evidence the Administrator may offer at the hearing. The Administrator shall also promptly disclose to the contractor or subcontractor any nonprivileged documents obtained after the 20-day time limit.

(4) Within 90 days of the timely receipt of the a request for hearing, a hearing shall be commenced before an impartial hearing officer designated by the Administrator and possessing the qualifications of an administrative law judge pursuant to Section 11502 of the Government Code. The contractor or subcontractor shall have the burden of showing compliance with Section 1777.5. The decision to debar shall be reviewed by a hearing officer or court only for abuse of discretion.

(5) Within 45 days of the conclusion of the hearing, the hearing officer shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the debarment or civil penalty. The decision shall contain a notice of findings, findings, and an order. This decision shall be deemed the final decision of the Administrator and shall be served on all parties and the awarding body pursuant to Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure by first-class mail at the last known address of the party on file with the Administrator. Within 15 days of issuance of the decision, the hearing officer may reconsider or modify the decision to correct an error, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(6) An affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of the final decision of the Administrator by filing a petition for a writ of mandate to the appropriate superior court pursuant to Section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure within 45 days after service of the final decision to debar or to assess a civil penalty. If no petition for a writ of mandate is filed within 45 days after service of the final decision, the order shall become final. If the petitioner claims that the findings are not supported by the evidence, abuse of discretion is established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the entire record.

(7) The Administrator may file a certified copy of a final order with the clerk of the superior court in any county in which the affected contractor or subcontractor has property or has or had a place of business.

(c) If a subcontractor is found to have violated Section 1777.5, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a), unless the prime contractor had knowledge of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5 or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with any of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor or the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall continually monitor a subcontractor's use of apprentices required to be employed on the public works project pursuant to subdivision (d) of Section 1777.5, including, but not limited to, periodic review of the certified payroll of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of a failure of the subcontractor to employ the required number of apprentices, the contractor shall take corrective action, including, but not limited to, retaining funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project until the failure is corrected.

(4) Prior to making the final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has employed the required number of apprentices on the public works project.

(d) In lieu of the penalty provided for in subdivision (a) or (b), the director may for a first-time violation and with the concurrence of the apprenticeship program, order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

(e) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(f) The interpretation and enforcement of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures of the California Apprenticeship Council.

SEC. 4. Section 3070 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3070. There is in the Division of Apprenticeship Standards the California Apprenticeship Council, which shall be appointed by the Governor, composed of six representatives each from employers or employer organizations and employee organizations, that sponsor apprenticeship programs under this chapter, respectively, geographically selected, and of two representatives of the general public. The Director of Industrial Relations, or his or her permanent and best qualified designee, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, or his or her permanent and best qualified designee, and the Chancellor of the California Community Colleges, or his or her permanent and best qualified designee, shall also be members of the California Apprenticeship Council. The chairperson shall be elected by vote of the California Apprenticeship Council. Beginning with appointments in 1985, three representatives each of employers and employees, and one public representative shall serve until January 15, 1989. In 1987, three representatives each of the employers and employees, and one public representative shall serve until January 15, 1991. Any member whose term expires on January 15, 1986, shall continue to serve until January 15, 1987. Thereafter each member shall serve for a term of four years. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term of his or her predecessor shall be appointed for the remainder of that term. Each member of the council shall receive the sum of one hundred dollars ($100) for each day of actual attendance at meetings of the council, for each day of actual attendance at hearings by the council or a committee thereof pursuant to Section 3082, and for each day of actual attendance at meetings of other committees established by the council and approved by the Director of Industrial Relations, together with his or her actual and necessary traveling expenses incurred in connection therewith.

SEC. 5. Section 3073.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

3073.1. (a) The division shall randomly audit apprenticeship programs approved under this chapter during each five-year period commencing January 1, 2000, to ensure that the program is complying with its standards, that all on-the-job training is performed by journeymen, that all related and supplemental instruction required by the apprenticeship standards is being provided, that all work processes in the apprenticeship standards are being covered, and that graduates have completed the apprenticeship program's requirements. The division shall examine each apprenticeship program to determine whether apprentices are graduating from the program on schedule or dropping out and to determine whether graduates of the program have obtained employment as journeymen. Every apprenticeship program sponsor shall have a duty to cooperate with the division in conducting an audit.

(b) Audit reports shall be presented to the California Apprenticeship Council and shall be made public, except that the division shall not make public information which would infringe on the privacy of individual apprentices. The division shall recommend remedial action to correct deficiencies recognized in the audit report, and the failure to correct deficiencies within a reasonable period of time shall be grounds for withdrawing state approval of a program. Nothing shall prevent the division from conducting more frequent audits of apprenticeship programs where deficiencies have been identified.

(c) The division shall give priority in conducting audits to programs that have been identified as having deficiencies. The division may conduct simplified audits for programs with fewer than five registered apprentices.

SEC. 6. Section 3073.2 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

3073.2. (a) The California Apprenticeship Council may adopt industry-specific training criteria for use by apprenticeship programs subject to the requirements of this chapter. The adoption of these criteria, as established following notice and workshop, under Section 212.01 of Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations shall not be subject to Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 11340) of Division 3 of Title 2 of the Government Code.

(b) The audits conducted by the division pursuant to Section 3073.1 shall ensure that any applicable training criteria are followed.

(c) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 7. Section 3075 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3075. (a) An apprenticeship program may be administered by a joint apprenticeship committee, unilateral management or labor apprenticeship committee, or an individual employer. Programs may be approved by the chief in any trade in the state or in a city or trade area, whenever the apprentice training needs justify the establishment. Where a collective bargaining agreement exists, a program shall be jointly sponsored unless either party to the agreement waives its right to representation in writing. Joint apprenticeship committees shall be composed of an equal number of employer and employee representatives.

(b) For purposes of this section, the apprentice training needs in the building and construction trades shall be deemed to justify the approval of a new apprenticeship program only if any of the following conditions are met:

(1) There is no existing apprenticeship program approved under this chapter serving the same craft or trade and geographic area.

(2) Existing apprenticeship programs approved under this chapter that serve the same craft or trade and geographic area do not have the capacity, or neglect or refuse, to dispatch sufficient apprentices to qualified employers at a public works site who are willing to abide by the applicable apprenticeship standards.

(3) Existing apprenticeship programs approved under this chapter that serve the same trade and geographic area have been identified by the California Apprenticeship Council as deficient in meeting their obligations under this chapter.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), the California Apprenticeship Council may approve a new apprenticeship program if special circumstances, as established by regulation, justify the establishment of the program.

SEC. 8. Section 3080 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3080. (a) For the purpose of providing greater diversity of training or continuity of employment, any apprentice agreement made under this chapter may in the discretion of the California Apprenticeship Council be signed by an association of employers or an organization of employees instead of by an individual employer. In that case, the apprentice agreement shall expressly provide that the association of employers or organization of employees does not assume the obligation of an employer but agrees to use its best endeavors to procure employment and training for an apprentice with one or more employers who will accept full responsibility, as herein provided, for all the terms and conditions of employment and training set forth in the agreement between the apprentice and employer association or employee organization during the period of the apprentice's employment. The apprentice agreement shall also expressly provide for the transfer of the apprentice, subject to the approval of the California Apprenticeship Council, to an employer or employers who shall sign a written agreement with the apprentice, and if the apprentice is a minor, with the apprentice's parent or guardian, as specified in Section 3079, contracting to employ the apprentice for the whole or a definite part of the total period of apprenticeship under the terms and conditions of employment and training set forth in the apprentice agreement.

(b) All apprenticeship programs with more than one employer or an association of employers shall include provisions sufficient to ensure meaningful representation of the interests of apprentices in the management of the program.

SEC. 9. Section 3098 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

3098. An apprentice registered in an approved apprenticeship program in any of the building and construction trades shall be employed only as an apprentice when performing any construction work for an employer that is a party, individually or through an employer association, to any apprenticeship agreement or standards covering that individual.

CHAPTER 220

An act to amend Section 1720.3 of the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor July 28, 1999. Filed with Secretary of State July 28, 1999.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 302, Floyd. Public works: prevailing wages.

(1) Existing law defines the term "public works" for purposes of requirements regarding the payment of prevailing wages, the regulation of working hours, and the securing of workers' compensation for public works projects. Existing law further requires that, except as specified, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages be paid to workers employed on public works and imposes misdemeanor penalties for a violation of this requirement.

Existing law provides that for the purposes of provisions of law relating to the payment of prevailing wages, "public works" means, among other things, the hauling of refuse from a public works site to an outside disposal location with respect to contracts involving any state agency, including the California State University and the University of California.

This bill would revise the definition of "public works" for these purposes to include the hauling of refuse from a public works site to an outside disposal location with respect to contracts involving any political subdivision of the state, thereby requiring the payment of prevailing wages in connection with all such contracts involving any local public entity.

Because the violation of prevailing wage requirements by local public entities when engaged in these public works projects would result in the imposition of misdemeanor penalties, this bill would impose a state-mandated local program.

(2) The California Constitution requires the state to reimburse local agencies and school districts for certain costs mandated by the state. Statutory provisions establish procedures for making that reimbursement.

This bill would provide that no reimbursement is required by this act for a specified reason.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1720.3 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1720.3. For the limited purposes of Article 2 (commencing with Section 1770), "public works" also means the hauling of refuse from a public works site to an outside disposal location, with respect to contracts involving any state agency, including the California State University and the University of California, or any political subdivision of the state.

SEC. 2. No reimbursement is required by this act pursuant to Section 6 of Article XIII B of the California Constitution because the only costs that may be incurred by a local agency or school district will be incurred because this act creates a new crime or infraction, eliminates a crime or infraction, or changes the penalty for a crime or infraction, within the meaning of Section 17556 of the Government Code, or changes the definition of a crime within the meaning of Section 6 of Article XIII B of the California Constitution.

(c) Prescribe reasonable rules and regulations for serving on the employee notice of rejection of any liability for compensation and the remedies available to the employee, and the employee's right to seek information and advice from an information and assistance officer or an attorney.

SEC. 131. Section 201.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

201.5. An employer who lays off an employee engaged in the production of motion pictures, whose unusual or uncertain terms of employment require special computation in order to ascertain the amount due, shall be deemed to have made immediate payment of wages within the meaning of Section 201 if the wages of the employee are paid by the next regular payday, as prescribed by Section 204, following the layoff. For purposes of this section, "layoff" means the termination of employment of an employee where the employee retains eligibility for reemployment with the employer. For purposes of this section, "discharge" means the unconditional termination of employment of an employee. However, if an employee is discharged, payment of wages shall be made within 24 hours after discharge, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. For purposes of this section, a payment required by this section may be mailed and the date of mailing is the date of payment.

The Legislature finds and determines that special provision must be made for the payment of wages on layoff and discharge of persons engaged in the production of motion pictures because their employment at various locations is often far removed from the employer's principal administrative offices and the unusual hours of their employment in this industry is often geared to the completion of a portion of a picture, which time of completion may have no relation to normal working hours.

SEC. 132. Section 1771.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1771.5. (a) Notwithstanding Section 1771, an awarding body shall not require the payment of the general prevailing rate of per diem wages or the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work for any public works project of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) or less when the project is for construction work, or for any public works project of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) or less when the project is for alteration, demolition, repair, or maintenance work, if the awarding body elects to initiate and enforce a labor compliance program pursuant to subdivision (b) for every public works project under the authority of the awarding body.

(b) For the purposes of this section, a labor compliance program shall include, but not be limited to, the following requirements:

(1) All bid invitations and public works contracts shall contain appropriate language concerning the requirements of this chapter.

(2) A prejob conference shall be conducted with the contractor and subcontractors to discuss federal and state labor law requirements applicable to the contract.

(3) Project contractors and subcontractors shall maintain and furnish, at a designated time, a certified copy of each weekly payroll containing a statement of compliance signed under penalty of perjury.

(4) The awarding body shall review, and, if appropriate, audit payroll records to verify compliance with this chapter.

(5) The awarding body shall withhold contract payments when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate.

(6) The awarding body shall withhold contract payments equal to the amount of underpayment and applicable penalties when, after investigation, it is established that underpayment has occurred.

SEC. 133. Section 3716.2 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3716.2. Notwithstanding the precise elements of an award of compensation benefits, and notwithstanding the claim and demand for payment being made therefor to the director, the director, as administrator of the Uninsured Employers Fund, shall pay the claimant only such benefits allowed, recognizing proper liens thereon, that would have accrued against an employer properly insured for workers' compensation liability. The Uninsured Employers Fund shall not be liable for any penalties or for the payment of interest on any awards. However, in civil suits by the director to enforce payment of an award, including procedures pursuant to Section 3717, the total amount of the award, including interest, other penalties, and attorney's fees granted by the award, shall be sought. Recovery by the director, in a civil suit or by other means, of awarded benefits in excess of amounts paid to the claimant by the Uninsured Employers Fund shall be paid over to the injured employee or his representative, as the case may be.

SEC. 134. Section 4707 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

4707. (a) Except as provided in subdivision (b), no benefits, except reasonable expenses of burial not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000), shall be awarded under this division on account of the death of an employee who is an active member of the Public Employees' Retirement System unless it is determined that a special death benefit, as defined in the Public Employees' Retirement Law, or the benefit provided in lieu of the special death benefit in Sections 21547 and 21548 of the Government Code, will not be paid by the Public Employees' Retirement System to the surviving spouse or children under 18 years of age, of the deceased, on account of the death, but if the total death allowance paid to the surviving spouse and children is less than the benefit otherwise payable under this division the surviving spouse and children are entitled, under this division, to the difference.

(c) It is the intent of the Legislature that any research activities undertaken by the State Department of Education pursuant to this section be funded by any federal funds appropriated to the State Department of Education for child care capacity-building efforts pursuant to Item 6110-196-0001 of the Budget Act of 1998.

SEC. 216. Section 11 of Chapter 760 of the Statutes of 1998 is amended to read:

Sec. 11. (a) Section 5 of this act shall become operative only if Section 190 of the Penal Code, as amended by Section 1 of Chapter 413 of the Statutes of 1997, is rejected by the voters at the statewide election held on June 2, 1998, in which case Section 6 of this act shall not become operative and shall not be submitted to the voters.

(b) Section 6 of this act shall become operative if Section 190 of the Penal Code, as amended by Section 1 of Chapter 413 of the Statutes of 1997, is approved by the voters at the statewide election held on June 2, 1998, in which case Section 5 of this act shall not become operative and shall not be submitted to the voters.

SEC. 217. Section 12 of Chapter 760 of the Statutes of 1998 is amended to read:

Sec. 12. Sections 5 and 6 of this act affect an initiative statute and shall become effective only when submitted to, and approved by, the voters pursuant to subdivision (c) of Section 10 of Article II of the California Constitution and in accordance with the provisions of Section 11 of this act.

SEC. 218. Section 10 of Chapter 969 of the Statutes of 1998 is amended to read:

Sec. 10. All funds appropriated and positions created for support of the office of the Inspector General in Item 0550-001-0001 of the Budget Act of 1998 shall be transferred upon approval of the Department of Finance to the office of the Inspector General as established pursuant to Section 2 of this act.

SEC. 219. Any section of any act enacted by the Legislature during the 1999 calendar year that takes effect on or before January 1, 2000, and that amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals a section that is amended, amended and renumbered, repealed and added, or repealed by this act, shall prevail over this act, whether that act is enacted prior to, or subsequent to, the enactment of this act. The repeal, or repeal and addition, of any article, chapter, part, title, or division of any code by this act shall not become operative if any section of any other act that is enacted by the Legislature during the 1999 calendar year and takes effect on or before January 1, 2000, amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals any section contained in that article, chapter, part, title, or division.

An act to amend Sections 1773 and 1773.1 of, to add Section 1773.9 to, and to repeal Section 1773.8 of, the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor June 1, 1999. Filed with Secretary of State June 1, 1999.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

SB 16, Burton. Public works: prevailing wages.

(1) Existing law requires the body awarding any contract for public work to include in the contract specifications a requirement requiring the payment of travel and subsistence payments to each workman needed to execute the work, as those payments are defined in the applicable collective bargaining agreements.

This bill would repeal this provision.

(2) Existing law requires, except for public works projects of $1,000 or less, that workers employed on public works be paid not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality that the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed, as provided in specified provisions. Existing law requires the body awarding a contract for public work to obtain from the Director of Industrial Relations the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality in which the public work is to be performed. Existing law specifies that the holidays upon which the prevailing rate of per diem wages shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement.

This bill would provide that the holidays upon which the prevailing rate of per diem wages shall be paid shall be all holidays recognized by the applicable collective bargaining agreement and that if the prevailing rate is not based on a collectively bargained rate, the holidays upon which the prevailing rate shall be paid shall be as provided by a specified provision of existing law.

This bill would specify the methodology that the Director of Industrial Relations is to use to determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed, including the rate for holiday and overtime work.

(3) Existing law requires that the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute a public works contract entered into with the state to file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved for the purposes of determining the per diem wages.

This bill would require the representative to file with the department an executed statement of the collectively bargained wage rates for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The bill would provide that employer payments for per diem wages are deemed to include apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by an existing provision of law so long as the cost of training is reasonably related to the amount of the contributions.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1773 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall obtain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality in which the public work is to be performed for each craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the contract from the Director of Industrial Relations. The holidays upon which those rates shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body, but shall be all holidays recognized in the applicable collective bargaining agreement. If the prevailing rate is not based on a collectively bargained rate, the holidays upon which the prevailing rate shall be paid shall be as provided in Section 6700 of the Government Code.

In determining the rates, the Director of Industrial Relations shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and the rates that may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Where the rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the director shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification, or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in the craft, classification, or type of work.

If the director determines that the rate of prevailing wage for any craft, classification, or type of worker is the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, the director may adopt that rate by reference as provided for in the collective bargaining agreement and that determination shall be effective for the life of the agreement or until the director determines that another rate should be adopted.

SEC. 2. Section 1773.1 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.1. Per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel, subsistence, and apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by Section 3093 so long as the cost of training is reasonably related to the amount of the contributions, and similar purposes, when the term "per diem wages" is used in this chapter or in any other statute applicable to public works.

For the purpose of determining per diem wages for contracts entered into with the state, the representative of any craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the contracts entered into with the state shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations an executed statement of the collectively bargained wage rates for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The statement of rates shall be filed within 10 days after the rates have been negotiated and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids.

SEC. 3. Section 1773.8 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 4. Section 1773.9 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1773.9. (a) The Director of Industrial Relations shall use the methodology set forth in subdivision (b) to determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed.

(b) The general prevailing rate of per diem wages includes all of the following:

(1) The basic hourly wage rate being paid to a majority of workers engaged in the particular craft, classification, or type of work within the locality and in the nearest labor market area, if a majority of the workers is paid at a single rate. If no single rate is being paid to a majority of the workers, then the single rate being paid to the greatest number of workers, or modal rate, is prevailing. If a modal rate cannot be determined, then the director shall establish an alternative rate, consistent with the methodology for determining the modal rate, by considering the appropriate collective bargaining agreements, federal rates, rates in the nearest labor market area, or other data such as wage survey data.

(2) Other employer payments included in per diem wages pursuant to Section 1773.1 and as included as part of the total hourly wage rate from which the basic hourly wage rate was derived. In the event the total hourly wage rate does not include any employer payments, the director shall establish a prevailing employer payment rate by the same procedure set forth in paragraph (1).

(3) The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be those rates specified in the collective bargaining agreement when the basic hourly rate is based on a collective bargaining agreement rate. In the event the basic hourly rate is not based on a collective bargaining agreement, the rate for holidays and overtime work, if any, included with the prevailing basic hourly rate of pay shall be prevailing.

(c) If the director determines that the general prevailing rate of per diem wages is the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, and that the collective bargaining agreement contains definite and predetermined changes during its term that will affect the rate adopted, the director shall incorporate those changes into the determination. Predetermined changes that are rescinded prior to their effective date shall not be enforced.

SEC. 5. The Legislature declares that the intent of Section 1773.9 of the Labor Code, as added by Section 4 of this act, is to give effect to Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 17 of the 1997–98 Regular Session of the Legislature (Res. Ch. 34, Stats. 1997) by codifying the methodology for calculating the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. In Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 17, the Legislature declared that it "has relied on the long-established definitions of general prevailing rate of per diem wages in amending and extending the prevailing wage law contained in the California Labor Code on numerous occasions, and that it would be contrary to the intent of the Legislature for those definitions to be changed by administrative action, because the definitions have become incorporated by implication into these statutory provision."

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) Each contractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, shall be marked or obliterated in a manner so as to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of written notice specifying in what respects the contractor must comply with this section. In the event that the contractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. These stipulations shall fix the responsibility for compliance with this section on the prime contractor.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

(j) This section shall become operative January 1, 2003.

SEC. 122. Section 1813 of the Labor Code, as amended by Section 5 of Chapter 757 of the Statutes of 1997, is amended to read:

1813. The contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each workman employed in the execution of the contract by the contractor or by any subcontractor for each calendar day during which the workman is required or permitted to work more than 8 hours in any one calendar day and 40 hours in any one calendar week in violation of the provisions of this article. In awarding any contract for public work, the awarding body shall cause to be inserted therein a stipulation to this effect. The awarding body shall take cognizance of all violations of this article committed in the course of the execution of the contract, and shall report them to the officer of the state or political subdivision who is authorized to pay the contractor money due him or her under the contract.

This section shall become operative January 1, 2003.

SEC. 123. Section 3710.3 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3710.3. Whenever a stop order has been issued pursuant to Section 3710.1 to a motor carrier of property subject to the jurisdiction and control of the Department of Motor Vehicles or to a household goods carrier, passenger stage corporation, or charter-party carrier of passengers subject to the jurisdiction and control of the Public Utilities Commission, the director shall transmit effect on or before January 1, 1999, amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals any section contained in that article, chapter, part, title, or division.

CHAPTER 443

An act to amend Section 1777.1 of the Labor Code, and to amend Section 4107 of, and to add Section 6109 to, the Public Contract Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor September 13, 1998. Filed with Secretary of State September 14, 1998.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 1569, Committee on Labor and Employment. Public works: contractor eligibility.

Under existing law, whenever a contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project is found by the Labor Commissioner to be either in violation of certain provisions of law, with intent to defraud, or in willful violation of those provisions of law, the contractor or subcontractor or a firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has a substantial interest is ineligible to bid on or to receive a public works contract for specified periods of time.

This bill would provide that the commissioner may also deny a contractor or subcontractor the ability to bid on or be awarded a contract for a public works contract, or to perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project, if he or she is found to be in violation of those laws under those same circumstances.

The bill also would require, not less than semiannually, the commissioner to publish and distribute to awarding bodies a list of contractors that are ineligible to bid on or be awarded a public works contract, or to perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project, as specified.

This bill would provide that any contract on a public works project entered into between a contractor and a debarred subcontractor is void.

This bill also would provide that a public entity may not permit a contractor or subcontractor who is ineligible to bid or work on, or be awarded, a public works project, as specified, to bid on, be awarded, or perform work as a subcontractor on, a public works project, and would require that every public works project contain a provision regarding this prohibition.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1777.1 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.1. (a) Whenever a contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in violation of this chapter with intent to defraud, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or a firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has a substantial interest shall be ineligible for a period of not less than one year or more than three years to do either of the following:

(1) Bid on or be awarded a contract for a public works project.

(2) Perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project.

(b) Whenever a contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in willful violation of this chapter, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or a firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has a substantial interest shall be ineligible for a period up to three years for each second and subsequent violation occurring within three years of a separate and previous willful violation of this chapter to do either of the following:

(1) Bid on or be awarded a contract for a public works project.

(2) Perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project.

(c) A willful violation occurs when the contractor or subcontractor knew or reasonably should have known of his or her obligations under the public works law and deliberately fails or refuses to comply with its provisions.

Not less than semiannually, the Labor Commissioner shall publish and distribute to awarding bodies a list of contractors who are ineligible to bid on or be awarded a public works contract, or to perform work as a subcontractor on a public works project pursuant to this chapter. The list shall contain the name of the contractor, the Contractor's State License Board license number of the contractor, and the effective period of debarment of the contractor.

(d) The Labor Commissioner shall adopt rules and regulations for the administration and enforcement of this section, the definition of terms, and appropriate penalties.

SEC. 2. Section 4107 of the Public Contract Code is amended to read:

4107. A prime contractor whose bid is accepted may not:

(a) Substitute a person as subcontractor in place of the subcontractor listed in the original bid, except that the awarding authority, or its duly authorized officer, may, except as otherwise provided in Section 4107.5, consent to the substitution of another person as a subcontractor in any of the following situations:

(1) When the subcontractor listed in the bid after having had a reasonable opportunity to do so fails or refuses to execute a written contract, when that written contract, based upon the general terms, conditions, plans and specifications for the project involved or the terms of that subcontractor's written bid, is presented to the subcontractor by the prime contractor.

(2) When the listed subcontractor becomes bankrupt or insolvent.

(3) When the listed subcontractor fails or refuses to perform his or her subcontract.

(4) When the listed subcontractor fails or refuses to meet the bond requirements of the prime contractor as set forth in Section 4108.

(5) When the prime contractor demonstrates to the awarding authority, or its duly authorized officer, subject to the further provisions set forth in Section 4107.5, that the name of the subcontractor was listed as the result of an inadvertent clerical error.

(6) When the listed subcontractor is not licensed pursuant to the Contractors License Law.

(7) When the awarding authority, or its duly authorized officer, determines that the work performed by the listed subcontractor is substantially unsatisfactory and not in substantial accordance with the plans and specifications, or that the subcontractor is substantially delaying or disrupting the progress of the work.

(8) When the listed subcontractor is ineligible to work on a public works project pursuant to Section 1777.1 or 1777.7 of the Labor Code.

Prior to approval of the prime contractor's request for the substitution the awarding authority, or its duly authorized officer, shall give notice in writing to the listed subcontractor of the prime contractor's request to substitute and of the reasons for the request. The notice shall be served by certified or registered mail to the last known address of the subcontractor. The listed subcontractor who has been so notified shall have five working days within which to submit written objections to the substitution to the awarding authority. Failure to file these written objections shall constitute the listed subcontractor's consent to the substitution.

If written objections are filed, the awarding authority shall give notice in writing of at least five working days to the listed subcontractor of a hearing by the awarding authority on the prime contractor's request for substitution.

(b) Permit a subcontract to be voluntarily assigned or transferred or allow it to be performed by anyone other than the original subcontractor listed in the original bid, without the consent of the awarding authority, or its duly authorized officer.

(c) Other than in the performance of "change orders" causing changes or deviations from the original contract, sublet or subcontract any portion of the work in excess of one-half of 1 percent of the prime contractor's total bid as to which his or her original bid did not designate a subcontractor.

SEC. 3. Section 6109 is added to the Public Contract Code, to read:

6109. (a) A public entity, as defined in Section 1100, may not permit a contractor or subcontractor who is ineligible to bid or work on, or be awarded, a public works project pursuant to Section 1777.1 or 1777.7 of the Labor Code to bid on, be awarded, or perform work as a subcontractor on, a public works project. Every public works project shall contain a provision prohibiting a contractor from performing work on a public works project with a subcontractor who is ineligible to perform work on the public works project pursuant to Section 1777.1 or 1777.7 of the Labor Code.

(b) Any contract on a public works project entered into between a contractor and a debarred subcontractor is void as a matter of law. A debarred subcontractor may not receive any public money for performing work as a subcontractor on a public works contract, and any public money that may have been paid to a debarred subcontractor by a contractor on the project shall be returned to the awarding body. The contractor shall be responsible for the payment of wages to workers of a debarred subcontractor who has been allowed to work on the project.

An act to amend, add, and repeal Sections 1775, 1776, and 1813 of the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor October 7, 1997. Filed with Secretary of State October 7, 1997.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

SB 1328, Brulte. Public works: prevailing wages.

Existing law requires, except for public works projects of $1,000 or less, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages to be paid to all workers employed on a public works project. Existing law imposes upon the contractor a penalty of $50 for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than that prevailing rate for work performed for the contractor under the public works contract or for work performed for any subcontractor under the contractor. Existing law also requires the contractor to pay the difference in the amount of the prevailing wage rate that was due each employee of the contractor or a subcontractor and the amount that was actually paid to each employee.

This bill would make subcontractors that violate the above-described prevailing wage requirement liable for the applicable penalty and amounts due workers of the subcontractor who were paid wages less than, and in violation of, prevailing wage requirements. The bill would provide that, if a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the prevailing wage by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any of those penalties or amounts otherwise due under that existing law unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor or unless the prime contractor failed to perform certain duties specified in the bill.

The bill would require a contractor to withhold moneys due a subcontractor in an amount sufficient to pay the wages that are the subject of a claim filed with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, as directed by the division, if the body awarding the public works contract has not withheld sufficient moneys to pay the wage claims. The bill would require the contractor to pay those moneys to the subcontractor after receipt of notification that the claim has been resolved, or to pay those moneys to the awarding body, under certain circumstances. The bill would require unpaid wages determined owed to workers who cannot be located after a diligent search by the Labor Commissioner to be deposited in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund.

Existing law authorizes the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover from a contractor engaged in public works the penalties and other amounts determined by the Labor Commissioner to be due when the contractor has not paid the prevailing wage. Existing law requires the division to commence this action not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion or not later than 90 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs.

This bill would increase the time period for commencing that action from 90 days to 180 days after either of those events, whichever last occurs.

Existing law imposes upon a contractor a penalty of $25 for each worker employed in the execution of a public works contract by the contractor or by any subcontractor for each calendar day during which the worker is required or permitted to work more than 8 hours in any one calendar day and 40 hours in any one calendar week in violation of specified law.

This bill would make that penalty applicable to subcontractors violating those provisions. The bill would impose a state-mandated local program by requiring the body awarding a public works contract to report violations of these working-hours requirements to the division, rather than to the officer authorized to pay the contractor, as is provided by existing law.

The changes made by the bill to existing law would be repealed on January 1, 2003.

The California Constitution requires the state to reimburse local agencies and school districts for certain costs mandated by the state. Statutory provisions establish procedures for making that reimbursement, including the creation of a State Mandates Claims Fund to pay the costs of mandates that do not exceed $1,000,000 statewide and other procedures for claims whose statewide costs exceed $1,000,000.

This bill would provide that, if the Commission on State Mandates determines that the bill contains costs mandated by the state, reimbursement for those costs shall be made pursuant to these statutory provisions.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1775 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1775. The contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or by any subcontractor under him or her. The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner and shall be based on consideration of the contractor's mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages, or the previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations, or a contractor's willful failure to pay the correct rates of prevailing wages. A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties and amounts due in accordance with this section, or in accordance with Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section. This action shall be commenced not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 90 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due.

Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker, and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

This section shall become operative on January 1, 2003.

SEC. 2. Section 1775 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1775. (a) The contractor and any subcontractor under him or her shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing wage rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or, except as provided in subdivision (b), by any subcontractor under him or her.

The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner and shall be based on consideration of the mistake, inadvertence, or neglect of the contractor or subcontractor in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages, or the previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations, or the willful failure by the contractor or subcontractor to pay the correct rates of prevailing wages. A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor or subcontractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor or subcontractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

(b) If a worker employed by a subcontractor on a public works project is not paid the general prevailing per diem wages by the subcontractor, the prime contractor of the project is not liable for any penalties under subdivision (a) unless the prime contractor had knowledge of that failure of the subcontractor to pay the specified prevailing rate of wages to those workers or unless the prime contractor fails to comply with all of the following requirements:

(1) The contract executed between the contractor and the subcontractor for the performance of work on the public works project shall include a copy of the provisions of Sections 1771, 1775, 1776, 1777.5, 1813, and 1815.

(2) The contractor shall monitor the payment of the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages by the subcontractor to the employees, by periodic review of the certified payroll records of the subcontractor.

(3) Upon becoming aware of the failure of the subcontractor to pay his or her workers the specified prevailing rate of wages, the contractor shall diligently take corrective action to halt or rectify the failure, including, but not limited to, retaining sufficient funds due the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project.

(4) Prior to making final payment to the subcontractor for work performed on the public works project, the contractor shall obtain an affidavit signed under penalty of perjury from the subcontractor that the subcontractor has paid the specified general prevailing rate of per diem wages to his or her employees on the public works project and any amounts due pursuant to Section 1813.

(c) The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall notify the contractor on a public works project within 15 days of the receipt by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of a complaint of the failure of a subcontractor on that public works project to pay workers the general prevailing rate of per diem wages. If the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement determines that employees of a subcontractor were not paid the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and if the body awarding the contract under which the employees performed work did not retain sufficient money under the contract to pay those employees the balance of wages owed under the general prevailing rate of per diem wages, the contractor shall withhold an amount of moneys due the subcontractor sufficient to pay those employees the general prevailing rate of per diem wages if requested by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The contractor shall pay any money retained from and owed to a subcontractor upon receipt of notification by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement that the wage complaint has been resolved. If notice of the resolution of the wage complaint has not been received by the contractor within 180 days of the filing of a valid notice of completion or acceptance of the public works project, whichever occurs later, the contractor shall pay all moneys retained from the subcontractor to the awarding body. The moneys shall be retained by the awarding body pending the final decision of an enforcement action, and be forwarded to the Labor Commissioner for disbursement pursuant to subdivision (d) if the subcontractor does not prevail in the action. Wages for workers who cannot be located after a diligent search by the Labor Commissioner shall be deposited in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund pursuant to subdivision (c) of Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund.

If the subcontractor prevails in the enforcement action, the awarding body shall release any funds retained pursuant to this subdivision to the contractor within 10 working days from the date of the final decision of the court.

(d) To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties and amounts due in accordance with this section or Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the division, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section. This action shall be commenced not later than 180 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 180 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor and subcontractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor and subcontractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due. The contractor and subcontractor shall be jointly and severally liable in an enforcement action for any wages due. Following entry of a judgment for joint and several liability, the division shall first exhaust all reasonable remedies to collect the amount due from the subcontractor before pursuing the claim for wages against the contractor. From the amount collected from the subcontractor, the wage claim shall be satisfied prior to the amount being applied to penalties.

Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker, and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

(e) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 3. Section 1776 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate payroll record, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, and straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) Each contractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated in a manner so as to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of written notice specifying in what respects the contractor must comply with this section. In the event that the contractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. These stipulations shall fix the responsibility for compliance with this section on the prime contractor.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

This section shall become operative January 1, 2003.

SEC. 4. Section 1776 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep accurate payroll records, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work. Each payroll record shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under penalty of perjury, stating both of the following:

(1) The information contained in the payroll record is true and correct.

(2) The employer has complied with the requirements of Sections 1771, 1811, and 1815 for any work performed by his or her employees on the public works project.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or for copies thereof. However, a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) A contractor or subcontractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated in a manner so as to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or the subcontractor performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor or subcontractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of a written notice requesting the records enumerated in subdivision (a). In the event that the contractor or subcontractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due. A contractor is not subject to a penalty assessment pursuant to this section due to the failure of a subcontractor to comply with this section.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Chapter 3.5 (commencing with Section 6250), Division 7, Title 1, Government Code) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Section 1798), Part 4, Division 3, Civil Code) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

(j) This section shall remain in effect only until January 1, 2003, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2003, deletes or extends that date.

SEC. 5. Section 1813 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1813. delivery date shown on an express, certified, or registered mail receipt form of the United States Postal Service or by a commercial carrier, if delivered by commercial carrier, or the earlier of (1) two business days after the request was postmarked by the United States Postal Service or (2) one business day before the date stamped received by the insurer or servicing agent. For purposes of this subdivision, "business day" has the meaning set forth in subdivision (g) of Section 1215. Postmarks generated by postage meters not located at an office of the United States Postal Service are to be disregarded.

(g) This section does not alter a contractual provision governing calculation of cash or surrender or other values. The effective date established by subdivision (b) is intended to establish a date certain on which a policyholder may rely in determining when the 45-day period specified in subdivision (a) begins to run. Subdivision (b) is not intended to advance a date otherwise provided by contract that is triggered by a request to surrender. An insurer may request information in addition to that listed in subdivision (b). However, an insurer's request for additional information does not delay an effective date established by a policyholder's compliance with subdivision (b).

SEC. 89. Section 10509.963 of the Insurance Code is amended to read:

10509.963. If the commissioner has reason to believe that any insurer has violated this chapter, the commissioner may request and the insurer shall file both of the following:

(a) An example of the annual report to the policy owner with notice of adverse change in nonguaranteed elements.

(b) An example of an illustration.

SEC. 90. Section 10509.975 of the Insurance Code is amended to read:

10509.975. (a) A life insurer shall provide to all prospective insureds a buyer's guide prior to accepting the applicant's initial premium or premium deposit. However, if the policy for which application is made contains an unconditional refund provision of at least 10 days, the buyer's guide shall be delivered with the policy or prior to delivery of the policy.

(b) For the purposes of this chapter, a buyer's guide is a document that contains, and is limited to, the current buyer's guide recommended for use by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

SEC. 91. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

Every apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he or she is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3 are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him or her, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, approval as established by the joint apprenticeship committee or committees shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The joint apprenticeship committee or committees, subsequent to approving the subject contractor or subcontractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor or subcontractor in order to comply with this section. Every contractor and subcontractor shall submit contract award information to the applicable joint apprenticeship committee that includes an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices will be employed. There is an affirmative duty upon the joint apprenticeship committee or committees administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work to ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentices work for every five hours of labor performed by a journeyman. However, the minimum ratio for the land surveyor classification shall not be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen.

Any ratio shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman, or the higher standard stipulated by the joint apprenticeship committee, is employed at the job site and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed, except for the land surveyor classification. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the job site. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of a joint apprenticeship committee, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he or she is covered by this section, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he or she has been previously approved in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he or she employs apprentices in the craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by a journeyman or, in the land surveyor classification, one apprentice for each five journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio as set forth in this section. This section does not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week shall not be used to calculate the hourly ratio required by this section.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee has the discretion to grant a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(b) The number of apprentices in training in the area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(c) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis or on a local basis.

(d) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition that would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When exemptions are granted to an organization that represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis, the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him or her, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he or she employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but, where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept the funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of the contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to Section 3081.

SEC. 92. Section 6500 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

6500. (a) For those employments or places of employment that by their nature involve a substantial risk of injury, the division shall require the issuance of a permit prior to the initiation of any practices, work, method, operation, or process of employment. The permit requirement of this section is limited to employment or places of employment that are any of the following:

addition, of any article, chapter, part, title, or division of any code by this act shall not become operative if any section of any other act that is enacted by the Legislature during the 1997 calendar year and takes effect on or before January 1, 1998, amends, amends and renumbers, adds, repeals and adds, or repeals any section contained in that article, chapter, part, title, or division.

[Approved by Governor September 30, 1992. Filed with Secretary of State September 30, 1992.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1727 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1727. Before making payments to the contractor of money due under a contract for public work, the awarding body shall withhold and retain therefrom all wages and penalties which have been forfeited pursuant to any stipulation in a contract for public work, and the terms of this chapter. But no sum shall be withheld, retained or forfeited, except from the final payment, without a full investigation by either the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or by the awarding body.

SEC. 2. Section 1730 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 3. Section 1730 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1730. Every awarding body shall transfer all wages and penalties that have been withheld pursuant to Section 1727 to the Labor Commissioner, for disbursement pursuant to Section 1775, whenever a contractor fails to bring a suit against the awarding body for recovery of wages and penalties that are withheld pursuant to Section 1727 within 90 days after the completion of the contract and formal acceptance of the job.

SEC. 4. Section 1731 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1731. If suit is brought against the awarding body within the 90-day period and formal notice thereof is given to the awarding body within the 90-day period either by service of summons or by registered mail which is received within the 90-day period, the wages and penalties shall be retained by the awarding body pending the outcome of the suit, and be forwarded to the Labor Commissioner for disbursement pursuant to Section 1775 if the contractor does not prevail in the action. Wages for workers who cannot be located shall be placed in the Industrial Relations Unpaid Wage Fund and held in trust for the workers pursuant to Section 96.7. Penalties shall be paid into the General Fund.

SEC. 5. Section 1732 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1732. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the time for action by the contractor or his or her assignee for the recovery of wages or penalties is limited to the 90-day period and suit on the contract for alleged breach thereof in not making the payment is the exclusive remedy of the contractor or his or her assignees with reference to those wages or penalties.

SEC. 6. Section 1733 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1733. Suit may be brought by the contractor or his or her assignee without permission from the state or other authority and is limited to the recovery of the wages and penalties without prejudice to the contractor's or assignee's rights in regard to other matters affecting the contract. No other issues shall be presented to the court in the case and the burden shall be on the contractor or his or her assignee to establish his or her right to the wages or penalties withheld. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement may intervene in any court proceeding brought pursuant to this section. In case the action is not commenced and actual notice thereof received by the awarding body within the 90-day period, the action shall be dismissed on motion of the awarding body or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.

The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement may, upon written request of any awarding body, assist in the defense of the action.

SEC. 7. Section 1772 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1772. Workers employed by contractors or subcontractors in the execution of any contract for public work are deemed to be employed upon public work.

SEC. 8. Section 1773.2 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.2. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, what the general rate of per diem wages is for each craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the contract.

In lieu of specifying the rate of wages in the call for bids, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body may, in the call for bids, bid specifications, and contract, include a statement that copies of the prevailing rate of per diem wages are on file at its principal office, which shall be made available to any interested party on request. The awarding body shall also cause a copy of the determination of the director of the prevailing rate of per diem wages to be posted at each job site.

SEC. 9. Section 1775 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1775. The contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit not more than fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker paid less than the prevailing rates as determined by the director for the work or craft in which the worker is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or her or by any subcontractor under him or her. The amount of this penalty shall be determined by the Labor Commissioner and shall be based on consideration of the contractor's mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages, or the previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations, or a contractor's willful failure to pay the correct rates of prevailing wages. A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the contractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties and amounts due in accordance with this section, or in accordance with Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section. This action shall be commenced not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 90 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due.

Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker, and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all workers.

SEC. 10. Section 1776 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate payroll record, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to the employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request by the public for inspection or copies thereof made; provided, however, that a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. If the requested payroll records have not been provided pursuant to paragraph (2), the requesting party shall, prior to being provided the records, reimburse the costs of preparation by the contractor, subcontractors, and the entity through which the request was made. The public shall not be given access to the records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) The certified payroll records shall be on forms provided by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or shall contain the same information as the forms provided by the division.

(d) Each contractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested the records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(e) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated in a manner so as to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address, and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated.

(f) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(g) The contractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of written notice specifying in what respects the contractor must comply with this section. In the event that the contractor fails to comply within the 10-day period, he or she shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

(h) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. These stipulations shall fix the responsibility for compliance with this section on the prime contractor.

(i) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Ch. 3.5 (commencing with Sec. 6250), Div. 7, Title 1, Gov. C.) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Sec. 1798) Pt. 4, Div. 3, Civ. C.) governing the release of these records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

This action shall be commenced not later than six months after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than six months after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. This action shall be commenced not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 90 days after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. The division may maintain a court action whether or not it has an assignment of the wage claim of the worker. Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker and, if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all the workers.

A mistake, inadvertence, or neglect in failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages is not excusable if the contractor had knowledge of his or her obligations under this part. The difference between the prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each worker for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each worker was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each worker by the employer, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that this section will be complied with.

To the extent that there is insufficient money due an employer to cover all wages and penalties forfeited and amounts due in accordance with this section, or in accordance with Section 1813, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the, employer the awarding body shall notify the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the violation and the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the wages and penalties due under this section. This action shall be commenced not later than six months after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than six months after acceptance of the public work, whichever last occurs. The division may maintain a court action whether or not it has an assignment of the wage claim of the worker. No issue other than that of the liability of the employer for the wages and penalties due shall be determined in the action, and the burden shall be upon the employer to establish that the wages and penalties demanded in the action are not due.

Out of any money withheld, recovered, or both, there shall first be paid the amount due each worker and if insufficient funds are withheld, recovered, or both, to pay each worker in full, the money shall be prorated among all the workers.

"Employer," as used in this section, means the contractor or the subcontractor, whichever one employs the worker.

SEC. 10. Section 1777.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1777.1. (a) Whenever any contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in violation of this chapter with intent to defraud, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or any firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has a substantial interest shall be ineligible to bid on or to receive any public works contract for a period of not less than one year or more than three years. The period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of the violation is made by the Labor Commissioner.

(b) Whenever any contractor or subcontractor performing a public works project pursuant to this chapter is found by the Labor Commissioner to be in willful violation of this chapter, except Section 1777.5, the contractor or subcontractor or any firm, corporation, partnership, or association in which the contractor or subcontractor has a substantial interest shall be ineligible to bid on or to receive any public works contract for a period up to three years for each second and subsequent violation occurring within three years of a separate and previous willful violation of this chapter. These periods of debarment shall run from the date the determination of the violation is made by the Labor Commissioner.

(c) Any determination by the Labor Commissioner shall be made after a full investigation by the Labor Commissioner and a fair and impartial hearing and reasonable notice.

(d) A willful violation occurs when the contractor or subcontractor knew or reasonably should have known of his or her obligations under the public works law and deliberately fails or refuses to comply with its provisions.

(e) The Labor Commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the administration and enforcement of this section, the definition of terms, and appropriate penalties.

SEC. 11. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he or she is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he or she is registered.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 3070) of Division 3, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he or she is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him or her, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workers in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected. However, approval as established by the joint apprenticeship committee or committees shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The joint apprenticeship committee or committees, subsequent to approving the subject contractor or subcontractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor or subcontractor in order to comply with this section. Every contractor and subcontractor shall submit contract award information to the applicable joint apprenticeship committee which shall include an estimate of journeyman hours to be performed under the contract, the number of apprentices to be employed, and the approximate dates the apprentices will be employed. There shall be an affirmative duty upon the joint apprenticeship committee or committees administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work to ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of work performed by apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but, except as otherwise provided in this section, in no case shall the ratio be less than one hour of apprentices work for every five hours of labor performed by a journeyman. However, the minimum ratio for the land surveyor classification shall not be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen.

Any ratio shall apply during any day or portion of a day when any journeyman, or the higher standard stipulated by the joint apprenticeship committee, is employed at the job site and shall be computed on the basis of the hours worked during the day by journeymen so employed, except for the land surveyor classification. The contractor shall employ apprentices for the number of hours computed as above before the end of the contract. However, the contractor shall endeavor, to the greatest extent possible, to employ apprentices during the same time period that the journeymen in the same craft or trade are employed at the job site. Where an hourly apprenticeship ratio is not feasible for a particular craft or trade, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, upon application of a joint apprenticeship committee, may order a minimum ratio of not less than one apprentice for each five journeymen in a craft or trade classification.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he or she is covered by this section, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he or she has been previously approved in the craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he or she employs apprentices in the craft or trade in the state on all of his or her contracts on an annual average of not less than one hour of apprentice work for every five hours of labor performed by a journeyman, or in the land surveyor classification, one apprentice for each five journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 hourly ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to contracts of general contractors or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, when the contracts of general contractors or those specialty contractors involve less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days. Any work performed by a journeyman in excess of eight hours per day or 40 hours per week, shall not be used to calculate the hourly ratio required by this section.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, means a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) Unemployment for the previous three-month period in the area exceeds an average of 15 percent.

(b) The number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5.

(c) There is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either on a statewide basis, or on a local basis.

(d) Assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his or her life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, if they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him or her, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he or she employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept the funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of the contributions in computing his or her bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of the contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. The stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to Section 3081.

SEC. 12. Section 1777.7 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 13. Section 1777.7 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1777.7. (a) In the event a contractor or subcontractor willfully fails to comply with Section 1777.5, the Director of Industrial Relations shall deny to the contractor or subcontractor, both individually and in the name of the business entity under which the contractor or subcontractor is doing business, the right to bid on, or to receive, any public works contract for a period of up to one year for the first violation and for a period of up to three years for the second and subsequent violations. Each period of debarment shall run from the date the determination of noncompliance by the Administrator of Apprenticeship becomes an order of the California Apprenticeship Council.

(b) A contractor or subcontractor who violates Section 1777.5 shall forfeit as a civil penalty the sum of fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding Section 1727, upon receipt of a determination that a civil penalty has been imposed, the awarding body shall withhold the amount of the civil penalty from contract progress payments then due or to become due.

(c) In lieu of the penalty provided for in subdivision (a) or (b), the director may for a first time violation and with the concurrence of the joint apprenticeship committee, order the contractor or subcontractor to provide apprentice employment equivalent to the work hours that would have been provided for apprentices during the period of noncompliance.

(d) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if the awarding body is an entity other than the state.

(e) The interpretation and enforcement of Section 1777.5 and this section shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures of the California Apprenticeship Council.

SEC. 14. (a) Section 7 of this bill incorporates amendments to Section 1775 of the Labor Code proposed by both this bill and AB 254. It shall only become operative if (1) both bills are enacted and become effective January 1, 1990, (2) each bill amends Section 1775 of the Labor Code, and (3) SB 197 is not enacted or as enacted does not amend that section, and (4) this bill is enacted after AB 254, in which case Sections 6, 8, and 9 of this bill shall not become operative.

(b) Section 8 of this bill incorporates amendments to Section 1775 of the Labor Code proposed by both this bill and SB 197. It shall only become operative if (1) both bills are enacted and become effective January 1, 1990, (2) each bill amends Section 1775 of the Labor Code, (3) AB 254 is not enacted or as enacted does not amend that section, and (4) this bill is enacted after SB 197 in which case Sections 6, 7, and 9 of this bill shall not become operative.

(c) Section 9 of this bill incorporates amendments to Section 1775 of the Labor Code proposed by this bill, AB 254, and SB 197. It shall only become operative if (1) all three bills are enacted and become effective January 1, 1990, (2) all three bills amend Section 1775 of the Labor Code, and (3) this bill is enacted after AB 254 and SB 197, in which case Sections 6, 7, and 8 of this bill shall not become operative.

The insurer may, at its option, include in this provision a definition of "other valid coverage," approved as to form by the commissioner. The definition shall be limited in subject matter to coverage provided by organizations subject to regulation by insurance law or by insurance authorities of this or any other state of the United States or any province of Canada, and to any other coverage the inclusion of which may be approved by the commissioner. In the absence of that definition the terms shall not include group insurance, or benefits provided by union welfare plans or by employer or employee benefit organizations. For the purpose of applying this policy provision with respect to any insured, any amount of benefit provided for the insured pursuant to any compulsory benefit statute, including any workers' compensation or employers' liability statute, whether provided by a governmental agency or otherwise, shall in all cases be deemed to be "other valid coverage" of which the insurer has had notice. In applying this provision, no third party liability coverage shall be included as "other valid coverage."

No other issues shall be presented to the court

The certificate shall show the expiration date of the policy. No insurer shall issue a certificate unless the full deposit premium on the policy has been paid, and the insurer shall give the county or city at least 10 days' advance notice of the cancellation of the policy.

(b) This section shall not apply in either of the following cases:

(1) The permit is for one hundred dollars ($100) or less.

(2) The applicant for the permit signs a certificate which reads as follows, or the wording of which has been approved by the Director of Industrial Relations:

If, after making the certificate, the applicant for the permit should become subject to the workers' compensation provisions of this code, he or she shall forthwith comply with the provisions of Section 3700 or his or her permit is revoked.

21200. This article applies only to a public agency whose governing board has by resolution elected to become subject to the uniform construction cost accounting procedures set forth in Article 2 (commencing with Section 21100) and which has notified the Controller of that election. In the event of a conflict with any other provision of law relative to bidding procedures, this article shall apply to any public agency which has adopted a resolution and so notified the Controller.

21201. Nothing in this article shall prohibit a board of supervisors or a county road commissioner from utilizing, as an alternative to the procedures set forth in this article, the procedures set forth in Article 25 (commencing with Section 20390) of Chapter 1.

21202. (a) Public projects of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) or less may be performed by the employees of a public agency by force account or by negotiated contract.

(b) Public projects of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) or less may be let to contract by purchase order procedures as set forth in this article.

(c) Public projects of more than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) but less than one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), may be let to contract by informal bidding procedures.

(d) Public projects of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) or more shall, except as otherwise provided in this article, be let to contract by formal bidding procedure.

21203. It shall be unlawful to split or separate into smaller work orders or projects any project for the purpose of evading the provisions of this article requiring work to be done by contract after competitive bidding.

21204. (a) Each public agency subject to this article shall adopt ordinances or regulations providing for formal and informal bidding procedures as required by this article for public projects conducted by that public agency.

(b) Each public agency which elects to become subject to the uniform construction accounting procedures set forth in Article 2 (commencing with Section 21100), shall enact a purchase order ordinance to govern the selection of contractors to perform public projects pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 21202. The ordinance shall include all of the following:

(1) The public agency shall maintain a list of all qualified contractors, identified according to categories of work.

(2) Before awarding a public project contract, at least three bids must be received by the public agency unless any of the following occurs:

(A) The product or service is proprietary.

(B) All of the qualified contractors on the list have been solicited, but less than three bids have been received.

(3) The public agency shall solicit a sufficient number of qualified contractors from the list in order to obtain three bids.

(4) If at least three bids are not obtained as a result of the first bidding procedure, the public agency shall solicit qualified contractors until either three bids are received or all the contractors on the list have been solicited.

(5) Nothing shall prohibit the public agency from soliciting all contractors on the list for a particular project.

21205. In cases of great emergency, as determined by the governing body of the public agency, including, but not limited to, states of emergency defined in Section 8558 of the Government

Code, when repair or replacements are necessary to permit the continued conduct of the operation or services of a public agency or to avoid danger to life or property, the governing body by majority vote, may proceed at once to replace or repair any public facility without adopting plans, specifications, strain sheets, or working details, or giving notice for bids to let contracts. The work may be done by day labor under the direction of the governing body, by contract, or by a combination of the two. The governing body, by majority vote, may delegate to the appropriate county administrative officer or city manager the power to declare a public emergency subject to confirmation by the governing body, by a four-fifths vote, at its next meeting.

21206. Notice inviting informal bids shall be published at least once and publication shall be completed at least 24 hours before the time scheduled for opening of the bids. The public agency may cause the notice to be printed as display advertising in such form and style as it deems appropriate. The notice shall describe the project in general terms and state a closing date and time for submission of the informal bids. Publication of notice pursuant to this section shall be in a newspaper of general circulation printed and published within the jurisdiction of the public agency, or, if there is no newspaper printed and published within the jurisdiction of the public agency, in a newspaper of general circulation which is circulated in the jurisdiction of the public agency, and in addition, in a construction trade publication circulated within the jurisdiction of the public agency; or, if there is no newspaper which is circulated within the jurisdiction of the public agency, publication shall be by posting the notice in at least three public places within the jurisdiction of the public agency as have been designated by ordinance or regulation of the public agency as places for the posting of its notices. In addition to notice required by this section, the public agency may give other notice as it deems proper.

21207. Notice inviting formal bids shall state the time and place for the receiving and opening of sealed bids and distinctly describe the project. The notice shall be published at least 30 days before the date of opening the bids in a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the jurisdiction of the public agency, and also in a construction trade publication circulated within the jurisdiction of the public agency; or, if there is no newspaper or construction trade publication printed and published within the jurisdiction of the public agency, in a newspaper of general circulation which is circulated within the jurisdiction of the public agency, or, if there is no newspaper or construction trade publication which is circulated within the jurisdiction of the public agency, publication shall be by posting the notice in at least three places within the jurisdiction of the public agency as have been designated by ordinance or regulation of the public agency as places for the posting of its notices. In addition to notice required by this section, the public agency may give such other notice as it deems proper.

21208. (a) In its discretion, the public agency may reject any bids presented. If after the first invitation for bids all bids are rejected, after reevaluating its cost estimates of the project, the public agency shall have the option of either of the following:

(1) Abandoning the project or readvertising for bids in the manner described by this article.

(2) By passage of a resolution by a four-fifths vote of its governing body declaring that the project can be performed more economically by the employees of the public agency, may have the project done by force account without further complying with this article.

(b) If a contract is awarded, it shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. If two or more bids are the same and the lowest, the public agency may accept the one it chooses.

(c) If no bids are received, the project may be performed by employees of the public agency by force account, or by informal bidding procedures set forth in Section 21204 without further complying with this article.

21209. The governing body of the public agency shall adopt plans, specifications, and working details for all public projects of more than one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000).

21210. Any person may examine the plans, specifications, or working details, or all of these, adopted by the public agency for any project.

21211. This article does not apply to the construction of any public building used for facilities of juvenile forestry camps or juvenile homes, ranches, or camps established under Article 15 (commencing with Section 880) of Chapter 2 of Part 1 of Division 2 of the Welfare and Institutions Code, if a major portion of the construction work is to be performed by wards of the juvenile court assigned to those camps, ranches, or homes.

21212. The commission shall review the accounting procedures of any participating public agency where an interested party presents evidence that the work undertaken by the public agency falls within any of the following categories:

(a) Is to be performed by a public agency after rejection of all bids, claiming work can be done less expensively by the public agency.

(b) Exceeded the force account limits.

(c) Has been improperly classified as maintenance.

21213. In those circumstances as set forth in subdivision (a) of Section 21212, a request for commission review shall be by letter received by the commission not later than five days from the date the public agency has rejected all bids. In those circumstances set forth in subdivision (b) or (c) of Section 21212, a request for commission review shall be by letter received by the commission not later than five days from the date an interested party formally complains to the public agency. The commission review shall commence immediately and conclude within 30 days from the receipt of the request for commission review. During the review of a project that falls within subdivision (a) of Section 21212, the agency shall not proceed on the project until a final decision is received by the commission.

21214. The commission shall prepare written findings. Should the commission find that the provisions of this chapter or of the uniform cost accounting procedures provided for in this chapter were not complied with by the public agency, the following steps shall be implemented by that agency:

(a) On those projects set forth in subdivision (a) of Section 21212, the public agency has the option of either (1) abandoning the project, or (2) awarding the project to the lowest responsible bidder.

(b) On those projects set forth in subdivision (b) or (c) of Section 21212, the public agency shall present the commission's findings to its governing body and that governing body shall conduct a public hearing with regard to the commission's findings within 30 days of receipt of the findings.

21215. (a) No later than January 1, 1985, the commission shall recommend, for adoption by the Controller, written procedures implementing the accounting procedures review provided for in this article.

(b) The Controller shall, upon receipt of the commission's recommendation, review and evaluate the recommended procedures and either formally adopt or reject the recommended procedures within 90 days of submission of the commission.

[Approved by Governor September 26, 1978. Filed with Secretary of State September 27, 1978.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1722.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1722.1. For the purposes of this chapter, the terms "contractor" and "subcontractor" shall include a contractor, subcontractor, licensee, officer, agent, or representative thereof, acting in such capacity, when working on public works pursuant to Article 1 (commencing with Section 1720) and Article 2 (commencing with Section 1770) of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code.

SEC. 2. Section 1775 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1775. The contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each workman paid less than the prevailing rates as determined by the director for such work or craft in which such workman is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or by any subcontractor under him. The difference between such prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each workman for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each workman was paid less than the prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each workman by the contractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that the provisions of this section will be complied with.

To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties forfeited and amounts due in accordance with this section, or in accordance with Section 1813 of this chapter, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify, provided that in the case of a workman claiming the difference between the prevailing wage rate and the amount paid him the awarding body has first been given the notice mentioned in Section 1190.1 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of such violation and the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided for herein. Such action shall be commenced not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 90 days after acceptance of such public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in such action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in such action are not due.

Out of any money withheld or recovered or both there shall first be paid the amount due each workman and if insufficient funds are withheld or recovered or both to pay each workman in full the money shall be prorated among all such workmen.

SEC. 3. Section 1776 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 4. Section 1776 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1776. (a) Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate payroll record, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice, worker, or other employee employed by him or her in connection with the public work.

(b) The payroll records enumerated under subdivision (a) shall be certified and shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours at the principal office of the contractor on the following basis:

(1) A certified copy of an employee's payroll record shall be made available for inspection or furnished to such employee or his or her authorized representative on request.

(2) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to a representative of the body awarding the contract, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards of the Department of Industrial Relations.

(3) A certified copy of all payroll records enumerated in subdivision (a) shall be made available upon request to the public for inspection or copies thereof made; provided, however, that a request by the public shall be made through either the body awarding the contract, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards, or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The public shall not be given access to such records at the principal office of the contractor.

(c) Each contractor shall file a certified copy of the records enumerated in subdivision (a) with the entity that requested such records within 10 days after receipt of a written request.

(d) Any copy of records made available for inspection as copies and furnished upon request to the public or any public agency by the awarding body, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement shall be marked or obliterated in such a manner as to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address and social security number. The name and address of the contractor awarded the contract or performing the contract shall not be marked or obliterated.

(e) The contractor shall inform the body awarding the contract of the location of the records enumerated under subdivision (a), including the street address, city and county, and shall, within five working days, provide a notice of a change of location and address.

(f) In the event of noncompliance with the requirements of this section, the contractor shall have 10 days in which to comply subsequent to receipt of written notice specifying in what respects such contractor must comply with this section. Should noncompliance still be evident after such 10-day period, the contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon the request of the Division of Apprenticeship Standards or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, such penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due.

(g) The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. Such stipulations shall fix the responsibility for compliance with this section on the prime contractor.

(h) The director shall adopt rules consistent with the California Public Records Act, (Ch. 3.5 (commencing with Sec. 6250), of Div. 7, Title 1, Gov. C.) and the Information Practices Act of 1977, (Title 1.8 (commencing with Sec. 1798) Pt. 4, Div. 3, Civ. C.) governing the release of such records, including the establishment of reasonable fees to be charged for reproducing copies of records required by this section.

SEC. 5. Section 1777.7 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.7. (a) In the event a contractor willfully fails to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5, such contractor shall:

(1) Be denied the right to bid on any public works contract for a period of one year from the date the determination of noncompliance is made by the Administrator of Apprenticeship; and

(2) Forfeit as a civil penalty in the sum of fifty dollars ($50) for each calendar day of noncompliance. Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1727, upon receipt of such a determination the awarding body shall withhold from contract progress payments then due or to become due such sum.

(b) Any such determination shall be issued after a full investigation, a fair and impartial hearing, and reasonable notice thereof in accordance with reasonable rules and procedures prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council.

(c) Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be deposited in the General Fund if the awarding body is a state entity, or in the equivalent fund of an awarding body if such awarding body is an entity other than the state.

The interpretation and enforcement of Sections 1777.5 and 1777.7 shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures of the California Apprenticeship Council.

SEC. 6. Section 3098 of the Labor Code is amended and renumbered to read:

1773.3. An awarding agency whose public works contract falls within the jurisdiction of Section 1777.5 shall, within five days of the award, send a copy of the award to the Division of Apprenticeship Standards. When specifically requested by a local joint apprenticeship committee, the division shall notify the local joint apprenticeship committee regarding all such awards applicable to the joint apprenticeship committee making the request. Within five days of a finding of any discrepancy regarding the ratio of apprentices to journeymen, pursuant to the certificated fixed number of apprentices to journeymen, the awarding agency shall notify the Division of Apprenticeship Standards.

SEC. 7. The sum of twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars

($27,500) is hereby appropriated from the General Fund to the Department of Industrial Relations for the purposes of this act.

CHAPTER 423

An act to amend Section 1773.2 of the Labor Code, relating to public works wages.

[Approved by Governor August 27, 1977. Filed with Secretary of State August 27, 1977.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1773.2 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.2. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, what the general rate of per diem wages is for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract.

In lieu of specifying the rate of wages in the call for bids, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body may, in such call for bids, bid specifications, and contract, include a statement that copies of the prevailing rate of per diem wages are on file at its principal office, which shall be made available to any interested party on request. The awarding body shall also cause a copy of the determination of the director of the prevailing rate of per diem wages to be posted at each job site.

An act to amend Section 1070 of the Education Code, and to amend Sections 1777.5, 1777.6, 3071, 3073, 3075, 3076, 3077.5, and 3096 of, and to add Sections 3074.3, and 3075.1 to, the Labor Code, relating to apprenticeship, and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately.

[Approved by Governor September 20, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State September 22, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is registered.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected; provided, however, that the action by the joint apprenticeship committee or committees shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The joint apprenticeship committee or committees, subsequent to approving the subject contractor or subcontractor, shall notify the appropriate dispatch agency of such approval in order for the contractor or subcontractor to comply with this section. There shall be an affirmative duty upon the joint apprenticeship committee or committees administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work to ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each five journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to contracts of general contractors involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, involving less than two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

The Administrator of Apprenticeship's may grant an exemption pursuant to this section to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis. In such cases member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to the local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contributions in computing his bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of such contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. Such stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to the provisions of Section 3081.

SEC. 2. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly registered apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is registered.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area or industry affected; provided, however, that the approval as established by the joint apprenticeship committee or committees shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship. The joint apprenticeship committee or committees, subsequent to approving the subject contractor or subcontractor, shall arrange for the dispatch of apprentices to the contractor or subcontractor in order to comply with this section. There shall be an affirmative duty upon the joint apprenticeship committee or committees administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work to ensure equal employment and affirmative action in apprenticeship for women and minorities. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each five journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards may grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to contracts of general contractors involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, involving less than two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate, which shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator of Apprenticeship, exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When such exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contributions in computing his bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of such contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. Such stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to the provisions of Section 3081.

SEC. 3. Section 1777.6 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.6. It shall be unlawful for an employer or a labor union to refuse to accept otherwise qualified employees as registered apprentices on any public works, on the ground of the race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, sex, or age, except as provided in Section 3077, of such employee.

SEC. 4. Section 3071 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3071. The California Apprenticeship Council shall meet at the call of the Director of Industrial Relations and shall aid him in formulating policies for the effective administration of this chapter.

Thereafter the California Apprenticeship Council shall meet quarterly at a designated date and special meetings may be held at the call of the chairman. The California Apprenticeship Council shall establish standards for minimum wages, maximum hours, working conditions for apprentice agreements, hereinafter in this chapter referred to as labor standards, which in no case shall be lower than those prescribed by this chapter; shall issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the intent and purpose of this chapter, which shall include regulations governing equal opportunities in apprenticeship, affirmative action programs which include women and minorities in apprenticeship, and other on-the-job training, and criteria for selection procedures with a view particularly toward eliminating criteria not relevant to qualification for training employment or more stringent than is reasonably necessary; shall foster, promote, and develop the welfare of the apprentice and industry, improve the working conditions of apprentices, and advance their opportunities for profitable employment; shall insure that selection procedures are impartially administered to all applicants for apprenticeship; shall gather and promptly disseminate information through apprenticeship and training information centers; and shall maintain on public file in all high schools and field offices of the Department of Employment Development the name and location of the local area apprenticeship committees, the filing date, and minimum requirements for application of all registered apprenticeship programs. The California Apprenticeship Council shall make biennial reports through the Director of Industrial Relations of its activities and findings to the Legislature and to the public.

SEC. 6. Section 3075 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3075. Local or state joint apprenticeship committees may be selected by the employer and the employee organizations, in any trade in the state or in a city or trade area, whenever the apprentice training needs of such trade justifies such establishment. Such joint apprenticeship committees shall be composed of an equal number of employer and employee representatives. All selection and disciplinary proceedings for apprentices or prospective apprentices shall be duly noticed to such individuals. The Division of Apprenticeship Standards shall audit all such proceedings.

SEC. 7. Section 3075.1 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

3075.1. It is the public policy of this state to encourage the utilization of apprenticeship as a form of on-the-job training, when such training is cost-effective in developing skills needed to perform public services. State and local public agencies shall make a diligent effort to establish apprenticeship programs for apprenticeable occupations in their respective work forces. In furtherance of this policy, public agencies shall take into consideration (a) the extent to which a continuous supply of trained personnel is readily available to public agencies to meet their skill requirements in the various occupations which are determined to be apprenticeable, and (b) the application of established programs in the private sector, where appropriate. Public sector apprenticeship programs should be fully compatible with affirmative action goals for the participation of minorities and women in apprenticeship programs.

SEC. 8. Section 3076 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

3076. The function of the joint apprenticeship committee shall be to work in an advisory capacity with employers and employees in matters regarding schedule of operations, application of wage rates, working conditions for apprentices, the number of apprentices which shall be employed in the trade under apprentice agreements under this chapter, in accordance with labor standards set up by the California Apprenticeship Council except as specific written authority is delegated to the joint apprenticeship committee by the parent bodies they represent; and to aid in the adjustment of apprenticeship disputes as they affect labor standards. The joint apprenticeship committee shall establish selection procedures which specify minimum requirements for formal education or equivalency, physical examination, if any, subject matter of written tests and oral interviews, and any other criteria pertinent to the selection process; shall specify the relative weights of all factors which determine

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the administrator shall, upon request of, and after written report by, the commission, relieve the division of the case and assign it to the commission, on or before the 61st day following the day upon which a written copy of the complaint was filed with the division. Upon receipt of such assignment, the commission shall immediately proceed to act upon the complaint. The commission shall hold at least one open hearing within 14 days following the day of assignment. The commission shall complete its investigations and any attempts to eliminate any unlawful practices discovered and shall issue an accusation thereon or advise the complainant that the evidence does not warrant further proceedings thereon, within 30 days after the complaint is assigned to the commission. The commission shall prepare such findings, determinations, and orders for issuance by the administrator, who shall notify the complainant and shall make available his findings within 10 days after review of such findings by the commission. Such findings, determinations and orders shall be subject to further legal processes as set forth in this chapter. SEC. 14. It is the intent of the Legislature, if this bill and Assembly Bill No. 2466 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, both bills amend Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code, and this bill is chaptered after Assembly Bill No. 2466, that Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code, as amended by Section 1 of Assembly Bill No. 2466, be further amended on the effective date of this act in the form set forth in Section 2 of this act to incorporate the changes in Section 1777.5 proposed by this bill. Therefore, if this bill and Assembly Bill No. 2466 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, and Assembly Bill No. 2466 is chaptered before this bill and amends Section 1777.5, Section 2 of this act shall become operative on the effective date of this act and Section 1 of this act shall not become operative.

CHAPTER 1174

An act to amend Section 1735 of the Labor Code, and to amend Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, relating to sex discrimination.

[Approved by Governor September 21, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State September 22, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1735 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1735. No discrimination shall be made in the employment of persons upon public works because of the race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital status, or sex of such persons, except as provided in Section 1420, and every contractor for public works violating this section is subject to all the penalties imposed for a violation of this chapter.

SEC. 2. Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, as amended by Chapter 447 of the Statutes of 1975, is amended to read:

453. (a) No public utility shall, as to rates, charges, service, facilities, or in any other respect, make or grant any preference or advantage to any corporation or person or subject any corporation or person to any prejudice or disadvantage.

(b) No public utility shall prejudice, disadvantage, or require different rates or deposit amounts from a person because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, occupation, sex, marital status or change in marital status. A person who has exhausted all administrative remedies with the commission may institute a suit for injunctive relief and reasonable attorney's fees in cases of an alleged violation of this subdivision. If successful in litigation, the prevailing party shall be awarded attorney's fees.

(c) No public utility shall establish or maintain any unreasonable difference as to rates, charges, service, facilities, or in any other respect, either as between localities or as between classes of service.

(d) No public utility shall include with any bill for services or commodities furnished any customer or subscriber any advertising or literature designed or intended (1) to promote the passage or defeat of a measure appearing on the ballot at any election whether local, statewide, or national, (2) to promote or defeat any candidate for nomination or election to any public office, (3) to promote or defeat the appointment of any person to any administrative or executive position in federal, state or local government, or (4) to promote or defeat any change in federal, state, or local legislation or regulations.

(e) The commission may determine any question of fact arising under this section.

SEC. 3. Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, as amended by Chapter 447 of the Statutes of 1975, is amended to read:

453. (a) No public utility shall, as to rates, charges, service, facilities, or in any other respect, make or grant any preference or advantage to any corporation or person or subject any corporation or person to any prejudice or disadvantage.

(b) No public utility shall prejudice, disadvantage, or require different rates or deposit amounts from a person because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, occupation, sex, marital status or change in marital status. A person who has exhausted all administrative remedies with the commission may institute a suit for injunctive relief and reasonable attorney's fees in cases of an alleged violation of this subdivision. If successful in litigation, the prevailing party shall be awarded attorney's fees.

(c) No public utility shall establish or maintain any unreasonable difference as to rates, charges, service, facilities, or in any other respect, either as between localities or as between classes of service.

(d) No public utility shall include with any bill for services or commodities furnished any customer or subscriber any advertising or literature designed or intended (1) to promote the passage or defeat of a measure appearing on the ballot at any election whether local, statewide, or national, (2) to promote or defeat any candidate for nomination or election to any public office, (3) to promote or defeat the appointment of any person to any administrative or executive position in federal, state or local government, or (4) to promote or defeat any change in federal, state, or local legislation or regulations; provided that until December 31, 1976, any such prohibitions shall not apply to any notice or statement relating to matters affecting rates or service to customers or subscribers where the public utility has requested and received the prior approval of the commission.

(e) The commission may determine any question of fact arising under this section.

SEC. 4. Notwithstanding Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, there shall be no reimbursement pursuant to that section nor shall there be an appropriation made by this act because the Legislature recognizes that during any legislative session a variety of changes to laws relating to crimes and infractions may cause both increased and decreased costs to local governmental entities and school districts which, in the aggregate, do not result in significant identifiable cost changes.

SEC. 5. It is the intent of the Legislature, if this bill and Senate Bill No. 1683 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, both bills amend Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, and this bill is chaptered after Senate Bill No. 1683, that Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, as amended by Section 1 of Senate Bill No. 1683, be further amended on the effective date of this act in the form set forth in Section 3 of this act to incorporate the changes in Section 453 proposed by this bill. Therefore, if this bill and Senate Bill No. 1683 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, and Senate Bill No. 1683 is chaptered before this bill and amends Section 453, Section 3 of this act shall become operative on the effective date of this act and Section 2 of this act shall not become operative.

SEC. 6. It is the intent of the Legislature, if this bill and Assembly Bill No. 497 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, both bills amend Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, and this bill is chaptered after Assembly Bill No. 497, that Section 453 of the Public Utilities Code, as amended by Section 1 of Assembly Bill No. 497, be further amended on the effective date of this act in the form set forth in Section 3 of this act to incorporate the changes in Section 453 proposed by this bill. Therefore, if this bill and Assembly Bill No. 497 are both chaptered and become effective on or before January 1, 1977, and Assembly Bill No. 497 is chaptered before this bill and amends Section 453, Section 3 of this act shall become operative on the effective date of this act and Section 2 of this act shall not become operative.

An act to amend Section 14311.5 of the Government Code and Section 1771 of the Labor Code, relating to public works.

[Approved by Governor September 9, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State September 10, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 14311.5 of the Government Code is amended to read:

14311.5. In all state projects where federal funds are involved, no bid submitted or contract thereafter awarded shall be invalidated by the failure of the bidder or contractor to be properly licensed in accordance with the laws of this state, nor shall any such contractor be denied payment under any such contract because of such failure; provided, however, that the first payment for work or material under such contract shall not be made by the State Controller unless and until the Registrar of Contractors certifies to him that the records of the Contractors State License Board indicate that such contractor was or became properly licensed between the time of bid opening and the making of the certification. Any bidder or contractor not so licensed shall be subject to all legal penalties imposed by such laws, including but not limited to any appropriate disciplinary action by the Contractors State License Board. The department shall include a statement to that effect in the standard form of prequalification questionnaire and financial statement.

SEC. 2. Section 1771 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1771. Except for public works projects of five hundred dollars ($500) or less, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed as provided in this chapter, shall be paid to all workmen employed on public works.

4 1953 28 9 365 722

This section is applicable only to work performed under contract and is not applicable to work carried out by a public agency with its own forces. This section is applicable to contracts let for maintenance work.

CHAPTER 599

An act to amend Section 1776 of the Labor Code, relating to public works wages.

[Approved by Governor August 26, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State August 27, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1776 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1776. Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate payroll record, showing the name, address, social security number, work classification, straight time and overtime hours worked each day and week, and the actual per diem wages paid to each journeyman, apprentice or worker employed by him in connection with the public work. The contractor's and subcontractor's payroll records shall be available for inspection at all reasonable hours, and a copy shall be made available to the employee or his authorized representative, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, and the Division of Apprenticeship Standards. The body awarding the contract may charge a reasonable fee for copying such records. The body awarding the contract shall be required to retain the records filed pursuant to this section for 90 days after completion of the contract. After a complaint has been filed with the awarding body or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement alleging that a contractor or subcontractor has paid less than the prevailing wage on a public works project, the contractor or subcontractor shall upon written notice from either the awarding body or the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement within 10 days file with the body awarding the contract a certified copy of the payroll records.

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, there shall be no reimbursement pursuant to this section nor shall there be an appropriation made by this act because self-financing authority is provided in this act to cover such costs.

An act to amend Section 1777.5 of, and to add Section 1777.7 to, the Labor Code, relating to apprenticeship standards.

[Approved by Governor August 24, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State August 24, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly indentured apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is indentured.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area of the site of the public work. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, shall, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall, employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each eight journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards shall grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to contracts of general contractors involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of specialty contractors not bidding for work through a general or prime contractor, involving less than two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When such exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contributions in computing his bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Law Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of such contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. Such stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to the provisions of Section 3081.

SEC. 2. Section 1777.7 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1777.7. In the event a licensed contractor willfully fails to comply with the provisions of Section 1777.5, such licensee shall be denied the right to bid on any public works contract for a period of one year from the date the determination of noncompliance is made by the Administrator of Apprenticeship and, notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1727, upon receipt of such a determination the awarding body shall withhold from contract progress payments then due or to become due the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000). Any determination shall be issued after a full investigation, a fair and impartial hearing, and reasonable notice thereof in accordance with reasonable rules and procedures prescribed by the California Apprenticeship Council. Any funds withheld by the awarding body pursuant to this section shall be released to the contractor upon issuance of an order to that effect by the administrator, or upon completion of the contract.

The interpretation and enforcement of Sections 1777.5 and 1777.7 shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures of the California Apprenticeship Council.

SEC. 3. No appropriation is made by this act, nor is any obligation created thereby under Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, for the reimbursement of any local agency for any costs that may be incurred by it in carrying on any program or performing any service required to be carried on or performed by it by this act.

CHAPTER 733

[Approved by Governor September 24, 1989. Filed with Secretary of State September 25, 1989.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 22002 of the Public Contract Code is amended to read:

22002. (a) "Public agency," for purposes of this chapter, means a city, county, city and county, including chartered cities and chartered counties, any special district, and any other agency of the state for the local performance of governmental or proprietary functions within limited boundaries. "Public agency" also includes a nonprofit transit corporation wholly owned by a public agency and formed to carry out the purposes of the public agency.

(3) In the case of a publicly owned utility system, "public project" shall include only the construction, erection, improvement, or repair of dams, reservoirs, powerplants, and electrical transmission lines of 230,000 volts and higher.

(d) "Public project" does not include maintenance work. For purposes of this section, "maintenance work" includes all of the following:

(2) Minor repainting.

(3) Resurfacing of streets and highways at less than one inch.

(4) Landscape maintenance, including mowing, watering, trimming, pruning, planting, replacement of plants, and servicing of irrigation and sprinkler systems.

(5) Work performed to keep, operate, and maintain publicly owned water, power, or waste disposal systems, including, but not limited to, dams, reservoirs, powerplants, and electrical transmission lines of 230,000 volts and higher.

(e) For purposes of this chapter, "facility" means any plant, building, structure, ground facility, utility system, subject to the limitation found in paragraph (3) of subdivision (c), real property, streets and highways, or other public work improvement.

SEC. 2. Section 125223 of the Public Utilities Code is amended to read:

125223. Contracts for the purchase of supplies, equipment, and materials in excess of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder after competitive bidding, except in an emergency declared by the vote of two-thirds of the membership of the board.

CHAPTER 281

An act to amend Section 15716 of the Education Code and to amend Sections 1770, 1773, 1773.1, and 1773.6 of, to repeal and add Section 1773.7 to, and to repeal Section 1773.3 of, the Labor Code, relating to wages on public works.

[Approved by Governor June 25, 1976. Filed with Secretary of State June 26, 1976.]

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 15716 of the Education Code is amended to read:

15716. The governing board of the school district shall obtain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages from the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations for each craft, classification or type of workman needed for the construction of the building and shall specify in the resolution and in the notice, required by Section 15712, or in the resolution required by Section 15712.5 and in the lease or agreement made pursuant to this article (commencing at Section 15701), what the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality is for each craft, classification or type of workmen needed for the construction of the building. The holidays upon which such rate shall be paid need not be specified by the governing board, but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workmen employed on the project.

Any agreement or lease entered into pursuant to this article shall require that such general prevailing rates will be paid. It shall also require that work performed by any workman employed upon the project in excess of eight hours during any one calendar day shall be permitted only upon compensation for all hours worked in excess of eight hours per day at not less than 1½ times the basic rate of pay. There may also be included in leases or agreements entered into pursuant to this article any other requirements with respect to matters related to the subject of this section which the governing board deems necessary or desirable.

SEC. 2. Section 1770 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1770. The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations shall determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in accordance with the standards set forth in Section 1773, and the director's determination in the matter shall be final except as provided in Section 1773.4. Nothing in this article, however, shall prohibit the payment of more than the general prevailing rate of wages to any workman employed on public work. Nothing in this act shall permit any overtime work in violation of Article 3 of this chapter.

SEC. 3. Section 1773 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall obtain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality in which the public work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract from the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations. The holidays upon which such rates shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body, but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workman employed on the project.

In determining such rates, the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and such rates as may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Where such rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the director shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in such craft, classification or type of work.

If the director determines that the rate of prevailing wage for any craft, classification or type of workman is the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, the director may adopt such rate by reference as provided for in such agreement and such determination shall be effective for the life of such agreement or until the director determines that another rate should be adopted.

SEC. 4. Section 1773.1 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.1. Per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel time, and subsistence pay as provided for in Section 1773.8, apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by Section 3093, and similar purposes, when the term "per diem wages" is used in this chapter or in any other statute applicable to public works.

For the purpose of determining such per diem wages for contracts entered into with the state, the representative of any craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contracts entered into with the state shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of the collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. Such agreements shall be filed within 10 days after their execution and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids.

SEC. 5. Section 1773.3 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 6. Section 1773.6 of the Labor Code is amended to read:

1773.6. If during any quarterly period the Director of Industrial Relations shall determine that there has been a change in any prevailing rate of per diem wages in any locality he shall make such change available to the awarding body and his determination shall be final. Such determination by the Director of Industrial Relations shall not be effective as to any contract for which the notice to bidders has been published.

SEC. 7. Section 1773.7 of the Labor Code is repealed.

SEC. 8. Section 1773.7 is added to the Labor Code, to read:

1773.7. The provisions of Section 11250 of the Government Code shall not be applicable to Sections 1773, 1773.4, and 1773.6.

SEC. 9. Notwithstanding Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, there shall be no reimbursement pursuant to this section nor shall there be an appropriation made by this act because the duties, obligations or responsibilities imposed on local governmental entities or school districts by this act are such that related costs are incurred as part of their normal operating procedures.

been filed, and after consideration of such exceptions the director shall decide that the exceptions to the report of the service do raise substantial and material factual issues, he shall direct the hearing officer to issue a notice of hearing, whereupon the procedures for a hearing and the issuance of the hearing officer's report provided for in subsection (e) of this section (including the provision for filing exceptions to the hearing officer's report) shall be followed. The director may adopt the recommendations of the hearing officer issued under subsection (d) or the report of the hearing officer issued under subsection (e) as his own. The service shall thereafter promptly proceed to take such action as may be called for by the decision of the director, after which the proceedings will be closed.

§ 15875. Runoff Elections.

(a) The service shall conduct a runoff election, without further order of the director, when an election in which a ballot providing for not less than three choices (i.e. at least two representatives and "neither" or "none") results in no choice receiving a majority of the valid ballots cast, which runoff election shall be held promptly following final disposition of any challenges, objections or exceptions which followed the prior election as provided in Section 15870. Only one runoff election shall be held pursuant to this section.

(b) Employees who were eligible to vote in the election and who are employed in an eligible category on the date of the runoff election shall be the only employees eligible to vote in the runoff election.

(c) The ballot in the runoff election shall provide for a selection between the two choices receiving the largest and second largest number of votes.

(d) In the event the number of votes cast in an inconclusive election in which the ballot provided for a choice among two or more representatives and "neither" or "none" is equally divided among the several choices, or in the event the number of ballots cast for one choice in such election is equal to the number cast for another of the choices but less than the number cast for the third choice, the director shall declare the first election a nullity and shall conduct another election among the three choices which received the greatest number of ballots in the original election; provided that in the event there was a tie in the original election between the third and fourth choices or among the third, fourth and other choices, the director shall in the runoff election include on the ballot all such tied choices. In the event two or more choices receive the same number of ballots, and if either (1) there are no challenged ballots which would affect the results of the election, or (2) after all challenges have been disposed of it is found that all eligible voters have cast valid ballots, there shall be no runoff election and the petition shall be dismissed. Only one such further election pursuant to this subsection (d) may be held.

(e) The provisions of Section 15870 above shall be applicable to a runoff election.

(1) Filing of collective bargaining agreements.

(A) To enable the Director to ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements when making prevailing wage determinations, the representatives of any crafts, classifications, or types of workers needed to execute any public works contracts shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of all their collective bargaining agreements, including any and all addenda which modify the agreements, within 10 days of their execution and shall be considered as the basis for a prevailing wage determination whenever on file 30 days before the call for bids on a project.

(B) Copies of collective bargaining agreements filed with the Department of Industrial Relations pursuant to Sections 1773.1 and 1773.8 of the Labor Code, and Section 16200(a)(1)(A) of these regulations shall be addressed to: Chief, Division of Labor Statistics and Research, P.O. Box 420603, San Francisco, CA 94142.

(C) Collective bargaining agreements filed with the Division of Labor Statistics and Research must be accompanied by a signed statement which is certified as true and correct to the best of the knowledge and belief of the person preparing the statement, under penalty of perjury, and which:

1. certifies that the agreement filed is fully executed and in effect, unless it is a signed original agreement or photocopy thereof, or a printed copy of a fully executed agreement showing the names of the signatory parties, except in the case of a printed agreement the Director may require certification;

2. names or otherwise identifies all California counties within the jurisdiction of the local union or unions signatory to the agreement;

3. names and provides the address of the signatory employer association or, if there be no signatory employer association, provides the names and addresses of all contractors signatory to the agreement, unless such information is contained in the agreement;

4. provides the number of workers currently employed under the terms of the agreement and, if practicable, the number of workers in each county within the jurisdiction of the signatory local union or unions;

5. provides any other information not contained in the agreement that the Director may need to give proper consideration to applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining.

(D) Copies of collective bargaining agreements which are not bona fide shall not be deemed filed. The party filing a contract may be asked to substantiate the assertion that such collective bargaining agreement is bona fide.

(2) Criteria for using collective bargaining agreement wage rates as basis of prevailing wage determinations. Before accepting the collective bargaining agreement wage rate for the applicable craft and locality, DLSR shall take the following factors into consideration:

(A) The geographical area(s) specified in the agreement;

(B) The number of workers covered by the agreement;

(C) If signatory parties to the agreement have workers in the geographical area(s);

(D) If work has been performed in the geographical area(s) specified in the agreement in the past 12 months;

(E) The wage rates determined by the federal government as set forth in Section 16200(b).

(3) Adoption of Collective Bargaining Agreements.

(A) If the Director determines pursuant to Section 1773 of the Labor Code that the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement is the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for each craft, classification or type of worker and the Director adopts such rate by referral, the Director will publish such rate. Only those rates and employer payments specifically enumerated in the definition of "general prevailing rate of per diem wages" in Section 16000 shall be included in the rate adopted.

(B) When such rate is adopted, and in the case where the collective bargaining agreement contains definite and predetermined changes during its term which will affect the rate adopted, the Director shall incorporate such changes in the determination.

NOTE: A statement must be filed with the Director for any adjustments made to a contract which are not contained in the agreement currently on file with DLSR.

(C) When such rate is adopted, and in the case where the collective bargaining agreement contains changes during its term which will affect the rate adopted, which are not definite or predetermined, the changes shall not be adopted. The prior determination will remain in effect until a new determination is issued. Any interested party may request that the Director make a new determination when contract changes become definite and determined by filing a statement as set forth in Section 16200(a)(1). The statement must summarize the amounts and effective dates of any cost–of–living adjustments, allocations of interim wage increases to wages and employer payments, and other relevant changes which will affect the rate adopted by the Director. The statement must be signed by an officer or agent of the bargaining representative and certified, under penalty of perjury, as true and correct to the best of his or her knowledge and belief.

(D) When such agreement is adopted as the basis of the prevailing wage determination, all wage classifications may be considered.

(E) Holidays. Holidays specifically named in the collective bargaining agreement or determined by wage surveys shall be included in the wage determination. Overtime pay may be required as provided in Section 16200(a)(3)(F) of these regulations.

(F) Overtime. Overtime will be paid as indicated in the wage determination.

EXCEPTION 1: If a workweek other than Monday through Friday is a fixed business practice or is required by the awarding body, no overtime payment is required for the first eight hours on Saturday or Sunday.

EXCEPTION 2: If the collective bargaining agreement provides for Saturday and Sunday work at straight–time, no overtime payment is required for the first eight hours on Saturday or Sunday.

EXCEPTION 3: If the awarding body determines that work cannot be performed during normal business hours or work is necessary at off hours to avoid danger to life or property, no overtime is required for the first eight hours in any one calendar day, and 40 hours during any one calendar week.

EXCEPTION 4: No overtime payment is required for less than 40 hours in a standard work week or for less than eight hours in a calendar workday unless specified in the collective bargaining agreement used as the basis for the prevailing wage determination.

(G) Wage rates, training contributions and apprenticeship contributions. Apprenticeship rates shall be determined by the Director of Industrial Relations using apprentice wage standards set forth in the collective bargaining agreement and/or approved by the California Apprenticeship Council. A contractor or subcontractor on a public works contract must pay training fund contributions or apprenticeship contributions in one of the following manners:

1. into the appropriate craft apprenticeship program in the area of the site of the public work; or

2. (if the trust fund is unable to accept such contributions) an equivalent amount shall be paid to the California Apprenticeship Council (CAC) administered by DAS.

3. If neither of the above will accept the funds, cash pay shall be as provided for in Section 16200(a)(3)(I) of these regulations.

(H) Rates for helpers. Rates for helpers will be published when the information available to the Director indicates that a practice of using such a subclassification prevails in a particular area, such as contained in a collective bargaining agreement, and within the parameters of the applicable collective bargaining agreement. In the absence of such determination, the helper classification may not be used as a substitute for a journeyman or apprentice. This section does not exempt the contractor from the 1–5 apprentice–journeyman ratio requirements set forth in Labor Code Section 1777.5.

(I) Credit Available For Actual Payment of Fringe Benefit Costs up to the Prevailing Amount. The contractor obligated to pay the full prevailing rate of per diem wages may take credit for amounts up to the total of all fringe benefit amounts listed as prevailing in the appropriate wage determination. This credit may be taken only as to amounts which are actual payments under Employer Payments Section 16000(1)–(3). In the event the total of Employer Payments by a contractor for the fringe benefits listed as prevailing is less than the aggregate amount set out as prevailing in the wage determination, the contractor must pay the difference directly to the employee. No amount of credit for payments over the aggregate amount of employer payments shall be taken nor shall any credit decrease the amount of direct payment of hourly wages of those amounts found to be prevailing for straight time or overtime wages.

(b) Federal Rates. In reviewing rates predetermined for federal public works, the Director will consider those rates published pursuant to the Davis–Bacon Act.

(c) Data collection shall be in accordance with Labor Code Section 1773.

(d) Wage rate factors.

NOTE: Wage surveys are conducted by DLSR.

(1) The following factors shall be considered:

(A) Type of work to be performed;

(B) Classification(s) of worker(s) needed;

(C) Geographical area of project;

(D) Nearest labor market area;

(E) If work has been performed in the geographical area in the past 12 months.

(F) Mobility of craft, classification, or type of worker needed for project;

(G) Number of workers in craft or job classification;

(H) Normal industry practice in selection of craft and classification of worker;

(I) Size (dollar amount) of project;

(J) Degree of project's remoteness from survey area.

(2) Time period used in determining prevailing wage by survey. The time period reference for establishing the prevailing wage in the area of determination shall be the 12–month period prior to the request for a wage determination unless another time period is necessary. In such cases, the Director shall establish the appropriate time period.

(e) Other information. Pursuant to Section 1773 of the Labor Code, the Director may also obtain and consider other data from interested parties, and shall give consideration to data submitted by any interested party, concerning rates actually paid on public or private projects under construction or recently completed in the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Such data may be obtained by holding a hearing, instituting an investigation, or by such other means as the Director determines will best serve the purposes of the law. Information submitted by interested parties for the Director's consideration shall include, but not be limited to the following for each project:

(1) the name, address, job title, and telephone number of the interested party submitting the information and the basis for qualification as an interested party under Section 16102;

(2) the basic hourly wage rate, overtime and holiday pay rates, and employer payments as enumerated in Section 16000 of these regulations for each classification in question as effective for the last payroll period, or most recent payroll period, for which payments based on such rates were actually made;

(3) the number of workers employed on the project in each classification in question during the payroll period for which data is submitted;

(4) the location of the project;

(5) the name and address of the contractor or subcontractor making the payments, and of all other contractors or subcontractors on the project;

(6) the type of construction (e.g. residential, commercial building, etc.);

(7) the approximate cost of construction;

(8) the beginning date and completion date, or estimated completion date of the project;

(9) the source of data (e.g. "payroll records");

(10) the method of selection of the projects for which data is submitted, when data is not submitted for all projects recently completed or in progress in the locality or in the nearest labor market area.

§ 16201. General Area Determinations.

When the Director determines that the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for a particular craft, classification, or type of worker is uniform throughout an area, the Director shall issue a determination enumerated county by county, but covering the entire area. Such determinations will ordinarily be made for an entire county or group of counties and shall constitute the Director's determination for all localities in which public work is performed within that county or counties except as the geographic application of the determination may be specifically limited by the determination itself.

Note: General determinations are usually issued on a quarterly basis. However, the Director may issue an interim wage determination following the procedures set forth in Section 1773 of the Labor Code, and in these regulations. See Section 16000 as to issue date, and Section 16204 as to effective date of determination. The general determination usually applies where a collective bargaining agreement has been filed and adopted as the prevailing wage rate.

Note: Authority cited: Sections 1773.5 and 1773.6, Labor Code. Reference: Section 1773, Labor Code.

§ 16202. Special Determinations.

(a) Awarding body request. The awarding body shall request the Director to make a determination for a particular craft, classification or type of worker not covered by a general determination. Any such request shall be submitted at least 45 days prior to the bid advertisement date.

(b) Department of Industrial Relations initiated determination. Where an awarding body does not specify the prevailing wage rate as set forth in Labor Code Section 1773.2, any interested party (as defined in Section 16000 of these regulations) may petition the Director as set forth in Labor Code Section 1773.4 and Section 16302 of these regulations. The Labor Commissioner may, prior to the letting of the bid, request such a determination of the Director.

Note: Authority cited: Section 1773.5, Labor Code. Reference: Sections 1770, 1773 and 1773.4, Labor Code.

§ 16203. Format.

(a) All determinations made by the Director of the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for a particular craft, classification, or type of worker will separately specify each of the following components:

(1) The prevailing basic straight–time hourly wage rate.

(2) The following statement when applicable: "In accordance with Labor Code Section 1773, holidays upon which the prevailing hourly wage rate for holiday work shall be paid shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workers employed on the project, which is on file with the Director of Industrial Relations."

(3) The prevailing employer payments for benefits included in the general prevailing rate of per diem wages pursuant to Section 1773.1 of the Labor Code and enumerated in Section 16000 of these regulations.

(4) The following statement when applicable. "The contractor shall make travel and subsistence payments to each worker needed to execute the work, as such travel and subsistence payments are defined in the applicable collective bargaining agreements filed with the Director of Industrial Relations in accordance with Labor Code Section 1773.8."

(b) Where the prevailing employer payment for any benefit is expressed in a formula or method of payment other than an hourly rate the Director may convert the rate to an hourly rate whenever such action would facilitate the administration of the law.

(c) The applicability of the apprentice rate of per diem wages shall be indicated and furnished upon request.

(d) The dates between which the applicable rate shall be paid for work performed in those periods shall be indicated.

(e) As a supplement to each determination the Director shall make available to any awarding body upon request, a list of all holidays recognized and the provision for travel and subsistence payments, taken from the applicable collective bargaining agreement.

Note: Authority cited: Section 1773.5, Labor Code. Reference: Section 1773.5, Labor Code.

§ 16204. Effective Dates of Determination and of Rates Within Determination.

(a) Effective Date of Determination.

(1) All determinations issued will be effective ten (10) days after issuance, provided that requests for copies, reprints or reissuance of prior determinations shall not affect the original effective date unless a new effective date is reflected upon the determination (see subdivision (3) below). Any call for bids put out on or after the effective date of the determination must reflect that determination unless the Director determines that subdivision (4) of this section is applicable, after notification and request by an awarding body.

(2) Determinations issued by the Director will show an issue date and will ordinarily show an expiration date.

(3) All determinations will remain in effect until their expiration date or until modified, corrected, rescinded or superseded by the Director.

(4) Determinations modified, corrected, rescinded or superseded on the basis of information contained in copies of collective bargaining agreements filed with the Department shall not be effective as to any project in which a call for bids takes place less than 30 days after the filing of the agreement.

Note: See Section 1773.1 of the Labor Code.

(5) It shall be the responsibility of the awarding body to ensure that the correct determination is used.

(b) Modification of Effective Date of Determination by Asterisks. Meaning of single and double asterisks. Prevailing wage determinations with a single asterisk (*) after the expiration date which are in effect on the date of advertisement for bids remain in effect for the life of the project. Prevailing wage determinations with double asterisks () after the expiration date indicate that the basic hourly wage rate, overtime and holiday pay rates, and employer payments to be paid for work performed after this date have been predetermined. If work is to extend past this date, the new rate must be paid and should be incorporated in contracts entered into now. The contractor should contact the Prevailing Wage Unit, DLSR, or the awarding body to obtain predetermined wage changes. All determinations that do not have double asterisks () after the expiration date remain in effect for the life of the project.

(2) All interested parties made known to the Director shall be notified by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, of the time and place of the hearing except that, in the event of numerous interested parties or in the event that mailing notices by registered or certified mail could cause an undue delay adverse to the interest of the parties or a timely hearing, the Director may send certified or registered notices to the petitioner and other directly interested parties that have been made known to the Director and mail notices to the other parties, and publish such notices in newspapers.

(3) Notification of the time and place of the hearing shall be at least one week in advance.

Subchapter 4. Awarding Body Labor Compliance Programs

Article 1. Applicable Dates for Enforcement of Awarding Body Labor Compliance Programs

§ 16425. Applicable Dates for Enforcement of Awarding Body Labor Compliance Programs.

(a) No contracts shall be subject to LCP jurisdiction nor shall the limited exemption from payment of prevailing wages pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5(a) apply to any contract of an awarding body until after the LCP has received initial or final approval under these regulations.

(b) Contracts for which the Date of Notice or the Call for Bids are subsequent to the date of initial or final approval of a LCP are subject to Labor Code Section 1771.5. In the case of a contract for which there is no Call for Bids, the applicable date shall be the date of execution of the contract.

(c) Revocation of approval of a LCP by the Director shall not affect the limited exemption from payment of prevailing wages pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5(a) if the date of such revocation is subsequent to the Date of Notice or Call for Bids or, in the case of a contract for which there is no Call for Bids, subsequent to the date of execution of the contract.

(d) If the Director revokes approval of a LCP, the Director shall give notice to the awarding body specifying enforcement responsibilities, including enforcement actions pending hearing, as of the date of revocation.

Article 2. Approval and Revocation of Approval of Labor Compliance Programs by Director § 16426. Initial Approval.

(a) An awarding body seeking approval of a LCP shall submit evidence of its ability to operate its LCP. Prior to granting approval, the Director shall consider the following factors:

(1) Experience and training of the awarding body's personnel on public works labor compliance issues;

(2) The average number of public works contracts the awarding body annually administers;

(3) Whether the LCP is a joint or cooperative venture among awarding bodies, and how the resources and expanded responsibilities of the LCP compare to the awarding bodies involved;

(4) The awarding body's record of taking cognizance of Labor Code violations and of withholding in the preceding five years;

(5) The availability of legal support for the LCP;

(6) The availability and quality of a manual outlining the responsibilities and procedures of the LCP to the awarding body; and

(7) The method by which the awarding body will transmit notice to the Labor Commissioner of willful violations as defined in Labor Code Section 1777.1(d).

(b) The Director shall notify the awarding body within 30 days of receipt of the request for approval that initial approval is granted and the effective date of initial approval, or that the request is incomplete and of the materials necessary to complete the request or that the request is disapproved for other reasons.

(c) Initial approval of a LCP shall automatically expire one year after approval unless an extension is requested in writing and granted in writing by the Director at least thirty days prior to the anniversary date of the approval. Where necessary to coordinate with the local government's fiscal year or existing public works procedures, initial approval may be for a period up to 18 months.

(d) The Director will maintain a list of all initially approved LCPs for distribution to interested parties upon request.

§ 16427. Final Approval.

(a) An awarding body which has operated a LCP for 11 continuous months after initial approval may apply to the Director for final approval. The awarding body bears the burden of producing evidence that it meets the criteria in (b).

(b) The Director will grant final approval if the awarding body has satisfactorily demonstrated its ability to monitor compliance with the requirements of the Labor Code and these regulations, and has filed timely, complete, and accurate reports as required by these regulations.

(c) The Director shall notify the awarding body within 30 days of the receipt of a request for final approval that final approval is granted and the effective date of final approval, or that the request for final approval is denied, the reason for the denial and the status of the LCP program.

(d) An awarding body which has received final approval of its LCP may enter into an agreement with the Labor Commissioner which may provide for procedures and for securing approval of forfeitures in a manner different from that set forth in Section 16437, and for alternate procedures for appeals of enforcement actions to the Director.

(e) The Director will maintain a list of all finally approved LCPs, for distribution to interested parties upon request. The Director may agree to alternative reporting formats under Section 16431 of these regulations and shall maintain a list of interested parties who wish notification of alternative reporting formats before adoption.

HISTORY

1. New section filed 2–20–92; operative 3–23–92 (Register 92, No. 13).

§ 16428. Revocation of Final Approval.

(a) The Director may revoke final approval of a LCP only after giving due notice to the awarding body, conducting a hearing, and finding cause for revocation.

(1) Cause for revocation of final approval includes, but is not limited to:

(A) Failure of the awarding body to monitor compliance with the requirements of the Labor Code and these regulations or to take appropriate enforcement action for violations of which it becomes or should have become cognizant;

(B) Failure of the awarding body to file timely, complete, and accurate reports to the Director as required by Section 16431 or elsewhere in these regulations.

(b) Interested parties may request the Director revoke final approval of a LCP. A request for revocation shall include evidence of failure of the awarding body to monitor compliance with the requirements of the Labor Code and these regulations or to take enforcement action after becoming cognizant of a violation of the Labor Code or these regulations. A request for revocation shall also include any other relevant evidence.

(1) Final approval of a LCP may be revoked by the Director based on a request by an interested party after a proceeding conducted as provided in subdivision (a). A copy of the request for revocation shall be provided to the awarding body as part of the notice required under subdivision (a).

(2) As part of a proceeding for revocation of final approval based on a request by an interested party, the Director may require the awarding body to furnish a supplemental report for the period between the ending date of the last annual report filed by the awarding body pursuant to Section 16431 and the date of notice by the Director, and containing the information listed in subdivision (a) of said Section 16431.

(3) Revocation of final approval of a LCP based on a request by an interested party is solely within the discretion of the Director. The duty of an awarding body to carry out its LCP runs solely to the Director and not to any worker, contractor, or interested party. The sole remedy for failure of an awarding body's duty is revocation of approval by the Director.

(c) Upon determining that the request for revocation will be denied without hearing, the Director shall notify the LCP, awarding body and requesting party of the decision and of the reasons therefore by mail.

(d) Upon determining that a hearing is necessary, the parties will be notified and a hearing on cause for revocation of final LCP approval will be held in accordance with the procedures for notice and hearing proceedings set forth in 8 CCR Section 16304.

(2) A prejob conference shall be conducted before commencement of the work with contractors and subcontractors listed in the bid, at which time federal and state labor law requirements applicable to the contract shall be discussed, and copies of suggested reporting forms furnished. Use of the current version of DIR's "Public Works Payroll Reporting Form" (A–1–131) (New 2–80) constitutes full compliance with this requirement by the awarding body. A copy of this suggested form follows Title 8 CCR Section 16500;

(4) A program for orderly review of payroll records and, if necessary, for audits to verify compliance with the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code;

(5) A prescribed routine for withholding penalties, forfeitures, and underpayment of wages for violations of the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code;

§ 16431. Annual Report.

The awarding body shall submit to the Director an annual report on the operation of its LCP within 60 days after the close of its fiscal year, or accompany its request for an extension of initial approval, whichever comes first. The annual report shall contain, at the minimum, the following information:

(1) Number of contracts awarded, and their total value;

(2) The number, description, and total value of contracts awarded which were exempt from the requirement of payment of prevailing wages pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5(a);

(3) A summary of penalties and forfeitures imposed and withheld, or recovered in a court of competent jurisdiction;

§ 16432. Audits.

(a) Audits may be conducted when deemed necessary by the awarding body and shall be conducted upon request of the Labor Commissioner.

(1) An audit consists of a comparison of payroll records to the best available information as to the actual hours worked and classifications of workers employed on the contract. An audit is sufficiently detailed when it enables the LCP, and the Labor Commissioner in reviewing proposed penalties, to draw reasonable conclusions as to compliance with the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2 of the Labor Code, and to enable accurate computation of underpayment of wages to workers and of applicable penalties and forfeitures. Records shall be made available to show that the audits conducted are sufficiently detailed to verify compliance with the requirements of Chapter 1 of Part 7 of Division 2. An audit record in the form set out in Appendix B presumptively demonstrates sufficiency.

(3) A record remaining uncorrected for one payroll period, after the awarding body has given the contractor notice of inaccuracies detected by audit or record review. Provided, however, that prompt correction will stop any duty to withhold if such inaccuracies do not amount to 1 percent of the entire Certified Weekly Payroll in dollar value and do not affect more than half the persons listed as workers employed on that Certified Weekly Payroll, as defined in Labor Code Section 1776 and Title 8 CCR Section 16401.

(b) "Failing to pay the correct rate of prevailing wages" means those public works violations which the Labor Commissioner has exclusive authority to approve before they are recoverable by the Labor Compliance Program, and which are appealable by the contractor in court or before the Director under Labor Code Section 1771.7. Regardless of what are defined as "prevailing wages" in contract terms, non–compliance with the following are failures to pay prevailing wages.

(1) Nonpayment of items defined as "Employer Payments" and "General Prevailing Rate of Per Diem Wages" in Title 8 CCR Section 16000 and Labor Code Section 1771.

(2) Payroll records required by Labor Code Section 1776.

§ 16437. Determination of Amount of Forfeiture by the Labor Commissioner.

(a) Where the LCP of the awarding body requests a determination of the amount of forfeiture, the request shall include a file or report to the Labor Commissioner which contains at least the following information:

(1) The deadline by which contract acceptance of filing of a notice of completion, under Labor Code Section 1775, plus 90 days, will occur;

(2) Any other deadline which if missed would impede collection;

(3) Evidence of violation, in narrative form;

(4) Evidence that an "audit" or "investigation," as defined in Section 16432 of these regulations, occurred;

(5) Evidence that the contractor was given the opportunity to explain why there was no violation, or that any violation was caused by mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, before the forfeiture was sent to the Labor Commissioner, and the contractor either did not do so, or failed to convince the awarding body of its position;

(6) Where the LCP of the awarding body seeks not only amounts of wages but also a penalty as part of the forfeiture, and the contractor has unsuccessfully contended that the cause of violation was mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, a short statement should accompany the proposal for a forfeiture, with a recommended penalty amount pursuant to Labor Code Section 1775;

(7) Where the LCP of the awarding body seeks only wages or a penalty less than $50 per day as part of the forfeiture, and the contractor has successfully contended that the cause of the violation was mistake, inadvertence, or neglect, then the file should include the evidence as to the contractor's knowledge of his or her obligation, including the program's communication to the contractor of the obligation in the bid invitations, at the prejob conference agenda and records, and any other notice given as part of the contracting process. With the file should be a statement, similar to that described in (6), and recommended penalty amounts, pursuant to Labor Code Section 1775;

(8) The previous record of the contractor in meeting his or her prevailing wage obligations.

(9) Whether the LCP has been granted initial, extended initial or final approval.

(b) The file or report shall be served on the Labor Commissioner not less than 30 days before the final payment or, if that deadline has passed, not less than 90 days before the expiration of the deadline to file suit under Labor Code Section 1775.

(c) A copy of the recommended forfeiture and the file or report shall be served on the contractor at the same time as it is sent to the Labor Commissioner. The awarding body may exclude from the documents served on the contractor copies of documents secured from the contractor during an audit, investigation, or meeting if those are clearly referenced in the file or report. Along with the copy served on the contractor shall be a notice stating all deadlines and rights of the contractor to contest the amount of forfeiture. A Notice of Deadlines in the format set out in Appendix C will presumptively fulfill the requirements of this subsection;

(d) The Labor Commissioner shall affirm, reject, or modify the forfeiture in whole or in part as to penalty, and/or wages due.

(e) The Labor Commissioner's determination of the forfeiture is effective on one of the two following dates:

(1) For programs with initial approval or an extension of initial approval pursuant to Section 16426 of these regulations, on the date the Labor Commissioner serves by first class mail, on the political subdivision and on the contractor, an endorsed copy of the proposed forfeiture, or a newly drafted forfeiture statement which sets out the amount of forfeiture approved. Service on the contractor is effective if made on the last address supplied by the contractor in the record. The Labor Commissioner's approval, modification or disapproval of the proposed forfeiture shall be served within 30 days of receipt of the proposed forfeiture or no more than 30 days after the notice of completion has been filed.

(2) For programs with final approval, approval is effective 20 days after the requested forfeitures are served upon the Labor Commissioner, unless the Labor Commissioner serves a notice upon the parties, within that time period, that this forfeiture request is subject to further review. For such programs, a notice that approval will follow such a procedure will be included in the transmittal of the forfeiture request to the contractor. The Labor Commissioner's final approval, modification or disapproval of the proposed forfeiture shall be served within 30 days of the date of receipt of the proposed forfeiture or no more than 30 days after the notice of completion has been filed, unless some other procedure has been adopted pursuant to 8 CCR Section 16427(d).

Appendix C

Notice of Deadlines

(To Go to Contractor for Forfeitures under Section 16437)

"This document requests the Labor Commissioner of California to approve a forfeiture of money you otherwise would be paid. The [name of the labor compliance program] for the [name of the awarding body having this work done] is asking the Labor Commissioner of California to agree, in 20 days, that the enclosed package of materials indicates that you have violated the law."

"Failure to respond to the [name of the labor compliance program's] request that the Labor Commissioner approve a forfeiture by writing to the Labor Commissioner within 20 days of the date of service (date of postmark) of this document on you may lead the Labor Commissioner to affirm the proposed forfeiture, and may also end your right to contest those amounts further. You must serve any written response on the Labor Commissioner, the [name of the labor compliance program] and [name of the awarding body] by return receipt requested/certified mail. If you serve a written explanation, with evidence, as to why the violation did not occur, or why the penalties should not be assessed, within the 20 day period, it will be considered,"

and

"If you change address, or decide to hire an attorney, it is your responsibility to advise both the [name of the Labor Compliance Program] and the Labor Commissioner by certified mail. Otherwise, notices will be served at your last address on file, and deadlines might pass before you receive such notices."

§ 16438. Deposits of Penalties and Forfeitures Withheld.

(a) Where the involvement of the Labor Commissioner has been limited to a determination of the actual amount of penalty, forfeiture or underpayment of wages, and the matter has been resolved without litigation by or against the Labor Commissioner, the awarding body having a LCP shall deposit penalties and forfeitures in its general fund. If an approved LCP is operated through an agent, penalties and forfeitures shall be deposited as provided in the agreement designating the agent for the awarding bodies involved.

(b) Where collection of fines, penalties or forfeitures results from court action to which the Labor Commissioner and awarding body are both parties, the fines, penalties or forfeitures shall be divided between the general funds of the state and the awarding body, as the court may decide.

(c) All amounts recovered by suit brought by the Labor Commissioner and to which the awarding body is not a party, shall be deposited in the general fund of the state.

(d) All wages and benefits which belong to an employee and are withheld or collected from a contractor or sub–contractor, either by withholding or as a result of court action pursuant to Labor Code Section 1775, and which have not been paid to the employee or irrevocably committed on the employee's behalf to a benefit fund, shall be deposited with the Labor Commissioner, who shall handle such wages and benefits in accordance with Labor Code Section 96.7.

§ 16439. Appeals of a Labor Compliance Program Enforcement Action.

(a) A contractor may appeal the result of a LCP enforcement action by serving a notice of appeal on the Director of Industrial Relations as an alternative to going to court under Labor Code Section 1732. Such notice must be served within 20 days of the date a determination of forfeiture has been approved by the Labor Commissioner. A copy of the notice of appeal shall be served on the awarding body and the LCP at the same time as it is sent to the Director. Appeal of a LCP enforcement action to the Director of Industrial Relations waives the contractor's right to file suit pursuant to Labor Code Section 1732.

(b) The notice shall state the grounds for the appeal, and whether a hearing is desired. The decision to hold a hearing is within the sole discretion of the Director and shall be dependent upon whether the appeal is timely, the matter is within the scope of Labor Code Section 1732, and the material furnished by the record already in the file is insufficient for a fully informed decision. The Director may appoint a hearing officer to review the record below (subsection (c)), hold a hearing and recommend a decision. The Director shall make the final decision on the appeal.

(c) Upon receipt of a copy of the notice of appeal, the awarding body shall, within 30 days, forward to the Director a full copy of the record of the enforcement proceedings and any further documents, arguments, or authorities it wishes to have considered in the appeals process. Accompanying those materials shall be a declaration of service on the contractor although materials already served in the process of seeking Labor Commissioner approval may be listed rather than re–served.

(d) The Director may request a supplemental report on the activities of the Labor Compliance Program. This report will be an update of the annual report required in 8 CCR Section 16431.

(e) Upon receipt of the notice of appeal, and all documentation referred to in section (c) above, the Director shall have 90 days in which to issue a determination. If additional time is required due to the complexity of the issues, or for other good cause, the Director shall have the right, upon notice to the parties to one 30 day extension of the time in which to issue the determination.

(f) The Director's ruling on the appeal shall be final.

§ 16801. Investigations: Duties, Responsibilities and Rights of the Parties.

(a) Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (hereinafter "DLSE") may investigate any alleged violation of the provisions of chapter 1, part 7 of the California Labor Code for purposes of enforcing Labor Code section 1777.1. Investigations pursuant to section 1777.1 are for the purpose of determining a Respondent's willful violation, or violation with the intent to defraud, of the provisions of chapter 1, part 7 of the California Labor Code, with the exception of section 1777.5.

(1) Where a preliminary investigation reveals that there is insufficient evidence to continue the investigation, DLSE may close the investigation and shall notify the Respondent and awarding body in writing.

(2) In the event an investigation of any Respondent reveals a violation of Labor Code section 1777.1, DLSE shall notify the awarding body in writing and shall serve upon the Respondent a Notice of Hearing together with a Statement of Alleged Violations, which shall specifically set forth DLSE's allegations against the Respondent.

(A) Service of both the Notice of Hearing and Statement of Alleged Violations shall be complete when mailed, by first class postage, to the last address of record for the Respondent listed with the State Contractors License Board or, in the event the Respondent is not licensed by the State Contractors License Board, the last known address of the Respondent available to the awarding body or, in the case of a subcontractor, the last known address available to the general contractor with whom the subcontractor contracted in the performance of the public works project under investigation. In the event there is neither an address of record with the State Contractors License Board or the awarding body or general contractor, the Notice of Hearing and Statement of Alleged Violations shall be served pursuant to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 415.10 – 415.50, concerning the service of civil summons.

(B) The Notice of Hearing shall list the date, time and place of the hearing which shall not be scheduled sooner than forty–five days after the date of the mailing of the Notice of Hearing and Statement of Alleged Violations.

(C) The Respondent shall have the opportunity to review and copy such records from the investigative file of DLSE which are not subject to either attorney–client or work product privileges. The Respondent shall be entitled to a reasonable number of subpoenas but shall be liable for any costs of service of the subpoenas, or any other witness or mileage fees incurred.

Mileage and Witness fees shall be set as specified in Government Code section 68093. In the exercise of his or her discretion, the Hearing Officer may limit the number of witnesses subpoenaed either for the purpose of corroboration or for establishing a single material fact in issue, or where the Respondent has not furnished satisfactory evidence that the witness will be able to give necessary and competent testimony material to the issues at the hearing.

(D) In presiding over a hearing conducted pursuant to section 1777.1(c), the Hearing Officer shall control the order of presentation of evidence, and shall direct and rule on matters concerning the conduct of the hearing and of those persons appearing. The hearing shall be conducted in an informal setting preserving the rights of the Respondent. The formal rules of evidence shall not apply and any relevant evidence may be admitted if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule which might make improper the admission of such evidence over objection in civil actions. However, no determination shall be made based solely upon any evidence which would not be admissible, over objection, in a court of law in this state.

(E) The hearing shall be phonographically recorded. The Respondent may request a copy of the recording, and shall bear all costs incidental to the preparation of same. The Respondent may arrange to have the hearing reported by a certified court reporter and shall bear all cost incidental thereto. If the record of the hearing is transcribed by the Respondent, a copy thereof shall be provided to the Labor Commissioner free of any cost within five (5) days of such transcription.

(F) Oral evidence at the hearing shall be taken only upon oath or affirmation. The Respondent shall have the right to call and examine witnesses, to introduce exhibits and to rebut the evidence against him or her.

(G) Any Respondent to a proceeding hereunder may, but need not, be represented by legal counsel during the entire course of the investigation, including the hearing.

(H) Continuances of hearings scheduled pursuant to Labor Code section 1777.1(c) ordinarily will not be granted. The Hearing Officer, in the exercise of his or her sound discretion, may grant a continuance of the hearing only upon a showing of extraordinary circumstances and good cause.

(I) At the conclusion of the hearing the Hearing Officer may take the matter under submission or allow the introduction of post hearing briefs. The Hearing Officer shall prepare a Findings of Fact and Conclusions and a proposed Determination which shall contain the recommended penalty, if applicable. The Labor Commissioner or his designee shall have the right to modify, change or adopt the proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions, the proposed Determination and any recommended penalty. No Determination or penalty shall be final until adopted by the State Labor Commissioner.

(J) The Determination of the Labor Commissioner after the hearing shall be served on the Respondent as provided in subdivision (A), above.

The provisions of Labor Code section 1742 and these Rules apply to all such assessments and notices served on a contractor or subcontractor on or after July 1, 2001 and provide the exclusive method for an Affected Contractor or Subcontractor to obtain review of any such notice or assessment. These Rules also apply to transitional cases in which notices were served but no court action was filed under Labor Code sections 1731–1733 prior to July 1, 2001, in accordance with Section 17270 (Rule 70) below.

(b) These Rules do not govern debarment proceedings under Labor Code section 1777.1, nor proceedings to review determinations with respect to the violation of apprenticeship obligations under Labor Code sections 1777.5 and 1777.7, nor any criminal prosecution.

(c) These Rules do not preclude any remedies otherwise authorized by law to remedy violations of Division 2, Part 7, Chapter 1 of the Labor Code.

(d) For easier reference, individual sections within these prevailing wage hearing regulations are referred to as "Rules" using only their last two digits. For example, this Section 17201 may be referred to as Rule 01.

Any written communication concerning a matter of procedure or practice, and any written response, or a written memorandum identifying the participants and stating the substance of any such oral communication or response, shall be added to the case file so that all Parties have a reasonable opportunity to review it. Unless otherwise provided by statute or these Rules, the appointed

Hearing Officer may determine a matter of procedure or practice based upon a permissible ex–parte communication. The term "matters of procedure or practice" shall be liberally construed.

(d) A communication from the Labor Commissioner to the Hearing Officer or the Director which is deemed permissible under Government Code section 11430.30 is permitted only if any such written communication and any written response, or a written memorandum identifying the participants and stating the substance of any such oral communication or response, is added to the case file so that all Parties have a reasonable opportunity to review it.

(e) If the Hearing Officer or the Director receives a communication in violation of this Rule, he or she shall comply with the requirements of Government Code section 11430.50.

(f) To the extent not inconsistent with Labor Code section 1742, the provisions of Article 7 of Chapter 4.5 of Title 2, Division 3, Part 1 (commencing with section 11430.10) of the Government Code governing ex parte communications in administrative adjudication proceedings shall apply to review proceedings conducted under these Rules.

(g) This Rule shall not be construed as prohibiting communications between the Director and the Labor Commissioner or between the Director and any other interested Person on issues or policies of general interest that coincide with issues involved in a pending review proceeding; provided that (1) the communication does not directly or indirectly seek to influence the outcome of any pending proceeding; (2) the communication does not directly or indirectly identify or otherwise refer to any pending proceeding; and (3) the communication does not occur at a time when the Director or the other party to the communication knows that a proceeding in which the other party to the communication is interested is under active consideration by the Director.

§ 17208. Intervention and Participation by Other Interested Persons.

(a) The Labor Commissioner may intervene as a matter of right in any review from a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, either as the Representative of the Awarding Body or as an interested third Party.

(b) A bonding company and any Surety on a bond that secures the payment of wages covered by the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments shall be permitted to intervene as a matter of right in a pending review filed by the contractor or subcontractor from the Assessment or Withholding of Contract Payments in question; provided that, intervention is sought at or before the first prehearing conference held pursuant to Rule 31 [Section 17231] below and within either 30 days after the bonding company or Surety was served with a copy of the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments or 30 days after the filing of the Request for Review, whichever is later. Thereafter, any request to intervene by such a bonding company or Surety shall be treated as a motion for permissive participation under subpart (d) of this Rule. A bonding company or Surety shall have the burden of proof with respect to any claim that it did not receive notice of the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments until after the filing of the Request for Review.

(c) The employee(s), labor union, or Joint Labor–Management Committee who filed the formal complaint which led the Enforcing Agency to issue the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract payments shall be permitted to intervene in a pending review filed by the contractor or subcontractor from the Assessment or Withholding of Contract Payments in question; provided that, intervention is sought at or before the first prehearing conference held pursuant to Rule 31 [Section 17231] below and there is no good cause to deny the request. Thereafter, any request to intervene by such employee(s), labor union, or Joint Labor–Management Committee shall be treated as a motion for permissive participation as an interested Person under subpart (d) of this Rule.

(d) Any other Person may move to participate as an interested Person in a proceeding in which that Person claims a substantial interest in the issues or underlying controversy and in which that Person's participation is likely to assist and not hinder or protract the hearing and determination of the case by the Hearing Officer and the Director. Interested Persons who are permitted to participate under this Rule shall not be regarded as Parties to the proceeding for any purpose, but may be provided notices and the opportunity to present arguments under such terms as the Hearing Officer deems appropriate.

(e) Rights to intervene or participate as an interested party are only in accordance with this Rule. Intervention or permissive participation under this Rule shall not expand the scope of issues under review nor shall it extend any rights or interests which have been forfeited as a result of an Affected Contractor or Subcontractor's own failure to file a timely Request for Review. The Hearing Officer may impose conditions on an intervener's or other interested Person's participation in the proceeding, including but not limited to those conditions specified in Government Code § 11440.50(c).

(f) No Person shall be required to seek intervention in a review proceeding as a condition for pursuing any other remedy available to that Person for the enforcement of the prevailing wage requirements of Division 2, Part 7, Chapter 1 (starting with section 1720) of the Labor Code.

(a) An Assessment, a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, or a notice assessing penalties under Labor Code section 1776 shall be served on the contractor and subcontractor, if applicable, by first class and certified mail pursuant to the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure section 1013. A copy of the notice shall also be served by certified mail on any bonding company issuing a bond that secures the payment of the wages covered by the Assessment or Notice and to any Surety on a bond, if the identities of such companies are known or reasonably ascertainable. § 17221. Opportunity for Early Settlement.

(a) The Affected Contractor or Subcontractor may, within 30 days following the service of an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, request a meeting with the Enforcing Agency for the purpose of attempting to settle the dispute regarding the Assessment or Notice.

(b) Upon receipt of a timely written request for a settlement meeting, the Enforcing Agency shall afford the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor a reasonable opportunity to meet for such purpose. The settlement meeting may be held in person or by telephone and shall take place before expiration of the 60–day limit for filing a Request for Review under Rule 22 [Section 17222].

(c) Nothing herein shall preclude the Parties from meeting or attempting to settle a dispute after expiration of the time for making a request or after the filing of a Request for Review.

(d) Neither the making or pendency of a request for a settlement meeting, nor the fact that the Parties have met or have failed or refused to meet as required by this Rule shall serve to extend the time for filing a Request for Review under Rule 22 [Section 17222] below.

(a) Any Request for Review of an Assessment or of a Notice of Withholding of Contract Wages shall be transmitted in writing to the Enforcing Agency within 60 days after service of the Assessment or Notice. Failure to request review within 60 days shall result in the Assessment or the Withholding of Contract Wages becoming final and not subject to further review under these Rules.

(b) A Request for Review shall be transmitted to the office of the Enforcing Agency designated on the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments from which review is sought.

(c) A Request for Review shall be deemed filed on the date of mailing, as determined by the U.S. Postal Service postmark date on the envelope or the overnight carrier's receipt in accordance with Rule 03(b) [Section 17203(b)] above, or on the date of receipt by the designated office of the Enforcing Agency, whichever is earlier.

(d) An additional courtesy copy of the Request for Review may be served on the Department by mailing to the address specified in Rule 23 [Section 17223] below at any time on or after the filing of the Request for Review with the Enforcing Agency. The service of a courtesy copy on the Department shall not be effective for invoking the Director's review authority under Labor Code section 1742; however, it may determine the time within which the hearing shall be commenced under Rule 41(a) [Section 17241(a)] below.

(e) A Request for Review either shall clearly identify the Assessment or Notice from which review is sought, including the date of the Assessment or Notice, or it shall include a copy of the Assessment or Notice as an attachment. (b) An Enforcing Agency shall be deemed to have provided the opportunity to review evidence required by this Rule if it (1) gives the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor the option, at the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor's own expense, to either (A) obtain copies of all such evidence through a commercial copying service or (B) inspect and copy such evidence at the office of the Enforcing Agency during normal business hours; or if (2) the Enforcing Agency at its own expense forwards copies of all such evidence to the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor.

(c) The evidence required to be provided under this Rule shall include the identity of witnesses whose testimony the Enforcing Agency intends to present, either in person at the hearing or by declaration or affidavit. (b) For good cause, a Request for Review so dismissed may be reinstated by the Hearing Officer or the Director upon a showing that the withdrawal resulted from misinformation given by the Enforcing Agency or otherwise from fraud or coercion. A motion for reinstatement must be filed within 60 days of service of the letter, order or decision granting withdrawal of the Request for Review or, in the event of fraud which could not have been suspected or discovered with the exercise of reasonable diligence, within 60 days of discovery of such fraud. Where a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments seeks to recover wages, penalties, or damages in excess of the amounts withheld from available contract payments (see Rule 20(b)(2) [Section 17220(b)(2)] above), an Awarding Body may recover any excess amounts that become or remain due when the Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments has become final under Labor Code section 1771.6. To recover the excess amounts, the Awarding Body shall transmit to the Labor Commissioner the Notice together with any decision of the Director or court that has become final and not subject to further review. The Labor Commissioner in turn shall certify and file the final order with the superior court in accordance with Labor Code section 1742(d).

Article 3. Prehearing Procedures

§ 17230. Scheduling of Hearing; Continuances and Tolling.

(a) The appointed Hearing Officer shall establish the place and time of the hearing on the merits, giving due consideration to the needs of all Parties and the statutory time limits for hearing and deciding the matter. Parties are encouraged to communicate scheduling needs to the Hearing Officer and all other Parties at the earliest opportunity. It shall not be a violation of Rule 07 [Section 17207]'s prohibition on ex parte communications for the Hearing Officer or his or her designee to communicate with Parties individually for purposes of clearing dates and times and proposing locations for the hearing. The Hearing Officer may also conduct a prehearing conference by telephone or any other expeditious means for purposes of establishing the time and place of the hearing.

(b) Once a hearing date is set, a request for a continuance that is not joined in by all other Parties or that is for more than 30 days will not be granted absent a showing of extraordinary circumstances, giving due regard to the potential prejudice to other Parties in the case and other Persons affected by the matter under review. Absent an enforceable waiver (see subpart (d) below), no continuance will be granted nor any proceeding otherwise delayed if doing so is likely to prevent the Hearing Officer from commencing the hearing on the matter within the statutory time limit.

(c) A request for a continuance that is for 30 days or less and is joined by all Parties shall be granted upon a showing of good cause. Notwithstanding subpart (b) above, a unilateral request for a continuance made by the Party who filed the Request for Review shall be granted upon a showing of good cause if the new date for commencing the hearing is no more than 150 days after the date of service of the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

(d) If a Party makes or joins in any request that would delay or otherwise extend the time for hearing or deciding a review proceeding beyond any prescribed time limit, such request shall also be deemed a waiver by that Party of that time limit.

(e) The time limits for hearing and deciding a review proceeding shall also be deemed tolled (1) when proceedings are suspended to seek judicial enforcement of a subpoena or other order to compel the attendance, testimony, or production of evidence by a necessary witness; (2) when the proceedings are stayed or enjoined by any court order; (3) between the time that a proceeding is dismissed and then ordered reinstated under Rule 25 [Section 17225] above; (4) upon the order of a court reinstating or requiring rehearing of the merits of a proceeding; or (5) during the pendency of any other cause beyond the Director's direct control (including but not limited to natural disasters, temporary unavailability of a suitable hearing facility, or absence of budget authority) that prevents the Director or any appointed Hearing Officer from carrying out his or her responsibilities under these Rules.

§ 17231. Prehearing Conference.

(a) Upon the application of any Party or upon his or her own motion, the appointed Hearing Officer may conduct a prehearing conference for any purpose that may expedite or assist the preparation of the matter for hearing or the disposition of the Request for Review. The prehearing conference may be conducted by telephone or other means that is convenient to the Hearing Officer and the Parties.

(b) The Hearing Officer shall provide reasonable advance notice of any prehearing conference conducted pursuant to this Rule. The Notice shall advise the Parties of the matters which the Hearing Officer intends to cover in the prehearing conference, but the failure of the Notice to enumerate some matter shall not preclude its discussion or consideration at the conference.

(c) With or without a prehearing conference, the Hearing Officer may issue such procedural Orders as are appropriate for the submission of evidence or briefs and conduct of the hearing, consistent with the substantial rights of the affected Parties.

(a) The Hearing Officer may consolidate for hearing and decision any number of proceedings where the facts and circumstances are similar and consolidation will result in conservation of time and expense. Where the Hearing Officer proposes to consolidate proceedings on his or her own motion, the Parties shall be given reasonable notice and an opportunity to object before consolidation is ordered.

§ 17233. Prehearing Motions; Cut Off Date.

(a) Any motion made in advance of the hearing on the merits, any opposition thereto, and any further reply shall be in writing and directed to the appointed Hearing Officer. No particular format shall be required; however, the following information shall appear prominently on the first page: (1) the case name (i.e., names of the Parties); (2) any assigned case number; (3) the name of the Hearing Officer to whom the paper is being submitted; (4) the identity of the Party submitting the paper; (5) the nature of the relief sought; and (6) the scheduled date, if any, for the hearing on the merits of the Request for Review. The motion shall also include a Proof of Service, as defined in Rule 10 [Section 17210] above, showing that copies have been served on all other Parties to the proceeding.

(b) Prehearing motions shall be served and filed no later than 20 days prior to the hearing on the merits of the Request for Review. Any opposition shall be served and filed no later than 10 days after service of the motion or at least 7 days prior to the hearing on the merits, whichever is earlier. The Hearing Officer may in his or her discretion decide the motion in writing in advance of the hearing on the merits or reserve the matter for further consideration and determination at the hearing on the merits.

(c) There shall be no right to a separate oral hearing on any prehearing motion, except in those instances in which an oral hearing has been specially requested by a Party or the Hearing Officer and in which the enforcement or forfeiture of a fundamental right is at stake. When the Hearing Officer determines that such an oral hearing is necessary or appropriate, it may be conducted by telephone or other manner that is convenient to the Parties.

(d) With the exception of timeliness challenges under Rule 27 [Section], prehearing motions which seek to dispose of a Request for Review or any related claim or defense are disfavored and ordinarily will not be considered prior to the hearing on the merits.

§ 17234. Evidence by Affidavit or Declaration.

(a) At any time 20 or more days prior to commencement of a hearing, a Party may serve upon all other Parties a copy of any affidavit or declaration which the proponent proposes to introduce in evidence, together with a notice as provided in subpart (b). Unless another Party, within 10 days after service of such notice, delivers to the proponent a request to cross–examine the affiant or declarant, the right to cross–examine such affiant or declarant is waived and the affidavit or declaration, if introduced in evidence, shall be given the same effect as if the affiant or declarant had testified in person. If an opportunity to cross–examine an affiant or declarant is not afforded after request therefor is made as herein provided, the affidavit or declaration may be introduced in evidence, but shall be given only the same effect as other hearsay evidence.

(b) The notice referred to in subpart (a) shall be substantially in the following form with the appropriate information inserted in the places enclosed by brackets:

"The accompanying affidavit or declaration of [name of affiant or declarant] will be introduced as evidence at the hearing in [title and other information identifying the proceeding]. [Name of affiant or declarant] will not be called to testify orally, and you will not be entitled to question the affiant or declarant unless you notify [name of the proponent, Representative, agent or attorney] at [address] that you wish to cross–examine the affiant or declarant. Your request must be mailed or delivered to [name of proponent, Representative, agent or attorney] on or before [specify date at least 10 days after anticipated date of service of this notice on the other Parties]."

(c) If a timely request is made to cross–examine an affiant or declarant under this Rule, the burden of producing that witness at the hearing shall be upon the proponent of the witness. If the proponent fails to produce the witness, the affidavit or declaration may be introduced in evidence, but shall be given only the same effect as other hearsay evidence under Rule 44 [Section 17244].

(a) Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum may be issued for attendance at a hearing and for the production of documents at any reasonable time and place or at a hearing.

(b) Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum shall be issued by the Hearing Officer at the request of a Party, or by the attorney of record for a Party, in accordance with sections 1985 to 1985.6, inclusive, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The burden of serving a subpoena that has been issued by the Hearing Officer shall be upon the Party who requested the subpoena.

(c) Service of subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum, objections thereto, and mileage and witness fees shall be governed by the provisions of Government Code sections 11450.20 through 11450.40.

(d) Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum shall be enforceable through the Contempt and Monetary Sanctions provision set forth in Rule 47 [Section 17247] below. A Party aggrieved by the failure or refusal of any witness to obey a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum shall have the burden of showing to the satisfaction of the Hearing Officer that the subpoena or subpoena duces tecum was properly issued and served and that the testimony or evidence sought was necessary to prove or disprove a significant claim or defense in the proceeding.

§ 17236. Written Notice to Party in Lieu of Subpoena.

(a) In the case of the production of a Party of record in the proceeding or of a Person for whose benefit a proceeding is prosecuted or defended, the service of a subpoena upon any such witness is not required if written notice requesting the witness to attend, with the time and place of the hearing, is served on the attorney of the Party or Person. For purposes of this Rule, a Party of record in the proceeding or Person for whose benefit a proceeding is prosecuted or defended includes an officer, director, or managing agent of any such Party or Person.

(b) Service of written notice to attend under this Rule shall be made in the same manner and subject to the same conditions provided in section 1987 of the Code of Civil Procedure for service of written notice to attend in a civil action or proceeding.

(c) The Hearing Officer shall have authority under Rule 47 [Section 17247] below to sanction a Party who fails or refuses to comply with a written notice to attend that meets the requirements of this Rule and has been timely served in accordance with section 1987 of the Code of Civil Procedure. However, the Hearing Officer may not initiate contempt proceedings against the witness for failing to appear based solely on non–compliance with a written notice to attend served on the Party's attorney. A Party seeking sanctions for another Party's failure or refusal to comply with a written notice to attend shall have the burden of showing to the satisfaction of the Hearing Officer that the written notice to attend was properly issued and timely served and that the testimony or evidence sought was necessary to prove or disprove a significant claim or defense in the proceeding.

(b) Oral depositions may be conducted only by stipulation of all Parties to the proceedings or by order of the appointed Hearing Officer upon a showing of substantial good cause. Oral depositions will be permitted only for purposes of obtaining the testimony of witnesses who are likely to be unavailable to testify at the hearing.

(c) Nothing in this Rule shall preclude the use of deposition testimony or other evidence obtained in separate proceedings, if such evidence is otherwise relevant and admissible.

§ 17240. Notice of Appointment of Hearing Officer; Objections.

(a) Notice of the Appointment of a Hearing Officer under Rule 04 [Section 17204] above shall be provided to the Parties as soon as practicable and no later than when the matter is noticed for a prehearing conference or hearing.

(b) The Director may appoint a different Hearing Officer to conduct and hear the review or to conduct and dispose of any preliminary or procedural matter in a given case.

(c) A Party wishing to object to the appointment of a particular Hearing Officer, including for any one or more of the grounds specified in sections 11425.30 and 11425.40 of the Government Code or section 1742(b) of the Labor Code, shall within 10 days after receiving notice of the appointment and no later than the start of any hearing on the merits, whichever is earlier, file a motion to disqualify the appointed Hearing Officer together with a supporting affidavit or declaration. The motion shall be filed with the Chief Counsel of the Office of the Director at the address indicated in Rule 23 [Section 17223] above. Notwithstanding the foregoing time limits, if a Party subsequently discovers facts constituting grounds for the disqualification of the appointed Hearing Officer, including but not limited to that the Hearing Officer has received a prohibited ex parte communication in the pending case, the motion shall be filed as soon as practicable after the facts constituting grounds for disqualification are discovered.

(d) Upon receipt of a motion to disqualify the appointed Hearing Officer, the Director may: (1) consider and decide the motion or appoint another Hearing Officer to consider and decide the motion, in which case the challenged Hearing Officer shall first be given an opportunity to respond to the motion, but no proceedings shall be conducted by the challenged Hearing Officer until the motion is determined; or (2) appoint another Hearing Officer to hear the Request for Review, in which case the motion shall be deemed moot.

§ 17241. Time and Place of Hearing.

(a) A hearing on the merits of a timely Request for Review shall be commenced within 90 days after the date it is received by the Office of the Director. The hearing shall be conducted at a suitable location within the county where the appointed Hearing Officer maintains his or her regular office, unless the hearing is moved to a different county in accordance with subpart (b) below.

(b) Upon the agreement of the Parties or upon a showing of good cause by either the Party who filed the Request for Review or the Enforcing Agency, the hearing shall be conducted at a suitable location within either (1) the county where a majority of the subject public works employment was performed, or (2) any other county that is proximate to or convenient for the Parties and necessary witnesses.

(c) A suitable location under this section means one that is open and accessible to members of the public and which includes appropriate facilities for the recording of testimony. Any facility that is regularly used by any state agency or by the Awarding Body for public hearings and that will reasonably accommodate the anticipated number of Parties and witnesses involved in the proceeding, is presumed suitable in the absence of a contrary showing. Parties seeking to change the location of a hearing under subpart (b) shall make reasonable efforts to identify, agree upon, and arrange for the availability of a suitable location within a county specified in subpart (b)(1) or (b)(2).

(a) Subject to the qualifications set forth below, the hearing shall be open to the public. If all or part of the hearing is conducted by telephone, television, or other electronic means, the Hearing Officer shall conduct the hearing from a location where members of the public may be physically present, and members of the public shall also have a reasonable right of access to the hearing record and any transcript of the proceedings.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subpart (a), the Hearing Officer may order closure of a hearing or make other protective orders to the extent necessary to: (1) preserve the confidentiality of information that is privileged, confidential, or otherwise protected by law; (2) ensure a fair hearing in the circumstances of the particular case; or (3) protect a minor witness or a witness with a developmental disability from intimidation or other harm, taking into account the rights of all persons.

(c) Upon motion of any Party or upon his or her own motion, the Hearing Officer may exclude from the hearing room any witnesses not at the time under examination. However, a Party to the proceeding and the Party's Representative shall not be excluded.

(d) This section does not apply to any prehearing or settlement conference.

§ 17243. Conduct of Hearing.

(a) Testimony shall be taken only on oath or affirmation under penalty of perjury.

(b) Every Party shall have the right to call and examine witnesses; to introduce exhibits; to question opposing witnesses on any matter relevant to the issues even though that matter was not covered in the direct examination; to impeach any witness regardless of which Party first called the witness to testify; and to rebut any opposing evidence. A Party may be called by an opposing Party and examined as if under cross-examination, whether or not the Party called has testified or intends to testify on his or her own behalf.

(c) The Hearing Officer may call and examine any Party or witness and may on his or her own motion introduce exhibits.

(d) The Hearing Officer shall control the taking of evidence and other course of proceedings in a hearing and shall exercise that control in a manner best suited to ascertain the facts and safeguard the rights of the Parties. Prior to taking evidence, the Hearing Officer shall define the issues and explain the order in which evidence will be presented; provided that, for good cause the Hearing Officer later may vary the order of presentation as circumstances warrant.

§ 17244. Evidence Rules; Hearsay.

(a) The hearing need not be conducted according to technical rules relating to evidence and witnesses. Any relevant evidence shall be admitted if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule which might make improper the admission of such evidence over objection in civil actions.

(b) The rules of privilege shall be recognized to the same extent and applied in the same manner as in the courts of this state.

(c) The Hearing Officer may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will necessitate undue consumption of time.

(d) Hearsay evidence is admissible but shall not be sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it either would be admissible over objection in a civil action or no Party raises an objection to such use. Unless previously waived, an objection or argument that evidence is insufficient in itself to support a finding because of its hearsay character shall be timely if presented at any time before submission of the case for decision.

(a) A Hearing Officer may take official notice of (1) the Director's General Prevailing Wage Determinations, the Director's Precedential Coverage Decisions, and wage data, studies, and reports issued by the Division of Labor Statistics and Research; (2) any other generally accepted technical fact within the fields of labor and employment that are regulated by the Director under Divisions 1, 2, and 3 of the Labor Code; and (3) any fact which either must or may be judicially noticed by the courts of this state under Evidence Code sections 451 and 452.

(b) The Parties participating in a hearing shall be informed of those matters as to which official notice is proposed to be taken and given a reasonable opportunity to show why and the extent to which official notice should or should not be taken.

(c) The Hearing Officer or the Director shall state in a decision, order, or on the record the matters as to which official notice has been taken.

§ 17246. Failure to Appear; Relief from Default.

(a) Upon the failure of any Party to appear at a duly noticed hearing, the Hearing Officer may proceed in that Party's absence and may recommend whatever decision is warranted by the available evidence, including any lawful inferences that can be drawn from an absence of proof by the non–appearing Party.

(b) For good cause and under such terms as are just, the appointed Hearing Officer or the Director may relieve a Party from the effects of a failure to appear and order that a review proceeding be reinstated or reheard. A Party seeking relief from non–appearance shall file a written motion at the earliest opportunity and no later than 10 days following a proceeding of which the Party had actual notice. Such application shall be supported by an affidavit or declaration based on the personal knowledge of the declarant, and copies of the application and any supporting materials shall be served on all other Parties to the proceeding. No application shall be granted unless and until the other Parties have been afforded a reasonable opportunity to make a showing in opposition. An Order reinstating a proceeding or granting a rehearing under this section may be conditioned upon providing reimbursement to the Department and the other Parties for the costs associated with the prior non–appearance.

(c) Notwithstanding any application or showing made under subpart (b) of this Rule, neither the Hearing Officer nor the Director may reinstate any Request for Review where the underlying Assessment or Withholding of Contract Payments has become final and entered as a court judgment.

(a) If any Person in proceedings before an appointed Hearing Officer disobeys or resists any lawful order or refuses, without substantial justification, to respond to a subpoena, subpoena duces tecum, or refuses to take the oath or affirmation as a witness or thereafter refuses to be examined or is guilty of misconduct during a hearing or so near the place thereof as to obstruct the proceedings, or violates the prohibition against ex parte communications under Rule 07 [Section 17207] above, the Hearing Officer may do any one or more of the following: (1) certify the facts to the Superior Court in and for the county where the proceedings are held for contempt proceedings pursuant to Government Code section 11455.20; (2) exclude the Person from the hearing room; (3) prohibit the Person from testifying or introducing certain matters in evidence; and/or (4) establish certain facts, claims, or defenses if the Person in contempt is a Party.

(b) Either the appointed Hearing Officer by separate order or the Director in his or her decision may order a Party, the Party's authorized Representative, or both, to pay reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by another Party as a result of bad faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay as defined in section 128.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Such order or the denial of such an order shall be subject to judicial review in the same manner as a decision of the Director on the merits. The order shall be enforceable in the same manner as a money judgment or by the contempt sanction.

§ 17248. Interpreters.

(a) Proceedings shall be conducted in the English language. The notice advising a Party of the hearing date shall also include notice of the Party's right to request an interpreter for a Party or witness who cannot speak or understand English, or who can do so only with difficulty, or who is deaf or hearing impaired as defined under Evidence Code section 754.

(b) A request for an interpreter for a Party or witness shall be submitted as soon as possible after the requesting Party becomes aware of the need for an interpreter and prior to the commencement of the hearing. The request should include information that (1) will enable the Hearing Officer and Department to obtain an interpreter with appropriate skills; and (2) will assist the Hearing Officer in determining whether the Department or the requesting Party should pay for the cost of the interpreter.

(c) Upon receipt of a timely request, the Hearing Officer shall direct the Department to provide an interpreter and shall also decide whether the Department or the requesting Party shall pay the cost of the interpreter, based upon an equitable consideration of all the circumstances, including the requesting Party's ability to pay.

(d) A person is qualified to serve as an interpreter if he or she (1) is on the current State Personnel Board List of Certified Administrative Hearing Interpreters maintained pursuant to Government Code section 11435.25; and (2) has also been examined and determined by the Department to be sufficiently knowledgeable of the terminology and procedures generally used in these proceedings.

(e) In the event that a qualified interpreter under subpart (d) is unavailable or if there are no certified interpreters for the language in which assistance is needed, the Hearing Officer may qualify and appoint another interpreter to serve as needed in a single hearing or case.

(f) Before appointment of an interpreter, the Hearing Officer or a Party may conduct a brief supplemental examination of the prospective interpreter to see if that person has the qualifications necessary to serve as an interpreter, including whether he or she understands terms and procedures generally used in these proceedings, can explain those terms and procedures in English and the other language being used, and can interpret those terms and procedures into the other language. An interpreter shall not have had any prior substantive involvement in the matter under review, and shall disclose to the Hearing Officer and the Parties any actual conflict of interest or appearance of conflict. Any condition that interferes with the objectivity of an interpreter constitutes a conflict of interest. A conflict may exist if an interpreter is an employee of, acquainted with, or related to a Party or witness to the proceeding, or if an interpreter has an interest in the outcome of the proceeding.

(g) The Hearing Officer shall disqualify an interpreter if the interpreter cannot understand and interpret the terms and procedures used in the hearing or prehearing conference, has disclosed privileged or confidential communications, or has engaged in conduct which, in the judgment of the Hearing Officer, creates an appearance of bias, prejudice, or partiality.

(h) Nothing in this section limits any further rights extended by Evidence Code section 754 to a Party or witness who is deaf or hard of hearing.

§ 17249. Hearing Record; Recording of Testimony and Other Proceedings.

(a) The Hearing Officer and the Director shall maintain an official record of all proceedings conducted under these Rules. In the absence of a determination under subpart (b) below, all testimony and other proceedings at any hearing shall be recorded by audiotape. Recorded testimony or other proceedings need not be transcribed unless requested for purposes of further court review of a decision or order in the same case.

(b) Upon the application of any Party or upon his or her own motion, the Hearing Officer may authorize the use of a certified court reporter, videotape, or other appropriate means to record the testimony and other proceedings. Any application by a Party under this subpart shall be made at a prehearing conference or by prehearing motion filed no later than 10 days prior to the scheduled date of hearing. Upon the granting of any such application, it shall be the responsibility of the Party or Parties who made the application to procure and pay for the services of a qualified person and any additional equipment needed to record the testimony and proceedings by the requested means. Ordinarily the granting of such application will be conditioned on the applicant's paying for certified copies of the transcript for the official record and for the other Parties. The failure of a requesting Party to comply with this requirement shall not be cause for delaying the hearing on the merits, but instead shall result in the proceedings being tape recorded in accordance with subpart (a).

(c) The Parties may, at their own expense, arrange for the recording of testimony and other proceedings through a different means other than the one authorized by the Hearing Officer, provided that it does not in any way interfere with the Hearing Officer's control and conduct of the proceedings, and further provided that, it shall not be regarded as an official record for any purpose absent a stipulation by all of the Parties or order of the Hearing Officer.

§ 17250. Burdens of Proof on Wages and Penalties.

(a) The Enforcing Agency has the burden of coming forward with evidence that the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor (1) was served with an Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments in accordance with Rule 20 [Section 17220]; (2) was provided a reasonable opportunity to review evidence to be utilized at the hearing in accordance with Rule 24 [Section 17224]; and (3) that such evidence provides prima facie support for the Assessment or Withholding of Contract Payments.

(b) If the Enforcing Agency meets its initial burden under (a), the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor has the burden of proving that the basis for the Civil Wage and Penalty Assessment or for the Withholding of Contract Payments is incorrect.

(c) With respect to any civil penalty established under Labor Code section 1775, the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor shall have the burden of proving that the Labor Commissioner abused his or her discretion in determining that a penalty was due or in determining the amount of the penalty.

(d) All burdens of proof and burdens of producing evidence shall be construed in a manner consistent with relevant sections of the Evidence Code, and the quantum of proof required to establish the existence or non–existence of any fact shall be by a preponderance of the evidence, unless a higher standard is prescribed by law.

§ 17251. Liquidated Damages.

(a) With respect to any liquidated damages for which an Affected Contractor, Subcontractor, or Surety on a bond becomes liable under Labor Code section 1742.1, the Enforcing Agency shall have a further burden of coming forward with evidence to show the amount of wages that remained unpaid as of 60 days following the service of the Assessment or Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments. The Affected Contractor or Subcontractor shall have the burden of demonstrating that he or she had substantial grounds for believing the Assessment or Notice to be in error.

(b) To demonstrate "substantial grounds for believing the Assessment or Notice to be in error," the Affected Contractor or Subcontractor must establish (1) that it had a reasonable subjective belief that the Assessment or Notice was in error; (2) that there is an objective basis in law and fact for the claimed error; and (3) that the claimed error is one that would have substantially reduced or eliminated any duty to pay additional wages under the Assessment or Notice.

§ 17252. Oral Argument and Briefs.

(a) Parties may submit prehearing briefs of reasonable length under such conditions as the appointed Hearing Officer shall prescribe. Parties shall also be permitted to present a closing oral argument of reasonable length at or following the conclusion of the hearing.

(b) There shall be no automatic right to file a post–hearing brief. However, the Hearing Officer may permit the Parties to submit written post–hearing briefs, under such terms as are just. The Hearing Officer shall have discretion to determine, among other things, the length and format of such briefs and whether they will be filed simultaneously or on a staggered (opening, response, and reply) basis.

(c) In addition to or as an alternative to post–hearing briefs, the Hearing Officer may also prepare proposed findings or a tentative decision or may designate a Party to prepare proposed findings and thereafter give the Parties a reasonable opportunity to present arguments in support of or opposition to any proposed findings or tentative decision prior to the issuance of a decision by the Director under Rule 60 [Section 17260] below.

(a) The hearing shall be deemed concluded and the matter submitted either upon the completion of all testimony and post–hearing arguments or upon the expiration of the last day for filing any post–hearing brief or other authorized submission, whichever is later. Thereafter, the Director shall have 45 days within which to issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the Assessment or the Withholding of Contract Wages.

(b) For good cause, the Hearing Officer may vacate the submission and reopen the hearing for the purpose of receiving additional evidence or argument, in which case the time for the Director to issue a written decision shall run from the date of resubmission.

§ 17260. Decision.

(a) The appointed Hearing Officer shall prepare a recommended decision for the Director's review and approval. The decision shall consist of a notice of findings, findings, and an order, and shall be in writing and include a statement of the factual and legal basis for the decision, consistent with the requirements of Labor Code section 1742 and Government Code section 11425.50.

(b) A recommended decision shall have no status or effect unless and until approved by the Director and issued in accordance with subpart (c) below.

(c) A copy of the decision shall be served by first class mail on all Parties in accordance with the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure section 1013. If a Party has appeared through an authorized Representative, service shall be made on that Party at the last known address on file with the Enforcing Agency in addition to service on the authorized Representative.

§ 17261. Reconsideration.

(a) Upon the application of any Party or upon his or her own motion, the Director may reconsider or modify a decision issued under Rule 60 [Section 17260] above for the purpose of correcting any error therein.

(b) The decision must be reconsidered or modified within 15 days after its date of issuance pursuant to Rule 60(c) [Section 17260(c)]. Thereafter, the decision may not be reconsidered or modified, except that a clerical error may be corrected at any time.

(c) The modified or reconsidered decision shall be served on the Parties in the same manner as a decision issued under Rule 60 [Section 17260].

(d) A Party is not required to apply for reconsideration before seeking judicial review of a decision of the Director. An application for reconsideration made by any Party shall not extend the time for seeking judicial review pursuant to Labor Code section 1742(c) unless the Director issues a modified or reconsidered decision within the 15–day time limit prescribed in subpart (b) of this section.

§ 17262. Final Decision; Time for Seeking Review.

(a) The decision of the Director issued pursuant to Section Rule 60 [Section 17260] above shall be the final decision of the Director from which any Party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of Labor Code section 1742(c) and Code of Civil Procedure section 1094.5; provided however, that if the Director has issued a modified decision pursuant to and within the 15–day limit of the Director's reconsideration authority under Section Rule 61 [Section 17261] above and Labor Code section 1742(b), the right of review and time for seeking such review shall extend from the date of service of the modified decision rather than the original decision.

(b) The modification of a decision to correct a clerical error after expiration of the 15–day time limit on the Director's reconsideration authority shall not extend the time for seeking judicial review.

(c) The time for seeking judicial review shall be determined from the date of service of the decision of the Director under Code of Civil Procedure section 1013, including any applicable extension of time provided in that statute.

(d) Any petition seeking judicial review of a decision under these Rules may be served (1) upon the Director by serving the Office of the Director — Legal Unit where the appointed Hearing Officer who conducted the hearing on the merits regularly maintains his or her office; and (2) upon the Labor Commissioner (in cases in which the Labor Commissioner was the Enforcing Agency) by the serving the regular office of the attorney who represented the Labor Commission at the hearing on the merits. The intent of this subpart is to authorize and designate a preferred method for giving the Director and the Labor Commissioner formal notice of a court action seeking review of a decision of the Director under these Rules; it does not preclude the use any other service method authorized by law.

§ 17263. Preparation of Record for Review.

(a) Upon notice that a Party intends to seek judicial review of a decision of the Director and the payment of any required deposit, the Department, under the direction of the appointed Hearing Officer, shall immediately prepare a hearing record consisting of all exhibits and other papers and a transcript of all testimony which the Party has designated for the inclusion in the record on review.

(b) The Party who has requested the record or any part thereof shall bear the cost of its preparation, including but not necessarily limited to any court reporter transcription fees and reasonable charges for the copying, binding, certification, and mailing of documents. Absent good cause, no record will be released to a Party or filed with a court until adequate funds to cover the cost of preparing the record have been paid by the requesting Party to the Department or to any third party designated to prepare the record. However, upon notice that a Party seeking judicial review has been granted in forma pauperis status under California Rule of Court 985, the Department shall bear the cost of preparing and filing the record where necessary for a proper review of the proceedings.

(c) The pendency of any request for the Department to prepare a hearing record shall not extend the time limits for filing a petition for review under Labor Code section 1742(c) and Code of Civil Procedure section 1094.5.

§ 17264. Request for Participation by Director in Judicial Review Proceeding.

Although the Director should be named as the Respondent in any action seeking judicial review of a final decision, the Director ordinarily will rely upon the Parties to the hearing (as Petitioner and Real Party in Interest) to litigate the correctness of the final decision in the writ proceeding and on any appeal. The Director may participate actively in proceedings raising issues that specifically concern the Director's authority under the statutes and regulations governing the payment of prevailing wages on public work contracts, or the validity of related laws, regulations, or the Director's decisions as to public works coverage or generally applicable prevailing wage rates. Any Party may request the Director to file a response in the action by including a separate written request with any court pleading being served on the Director in accordance with Rule 62(d) [Section 17262(d)]. Any such separate written request should specify briefly what issues are raised by the petition that extend beyond the facts of the case and warrant the Director's participation.

Article 7. Transitional Rule

§ 17270. Applicability of These Rules to Notices Issued Between April 1, 2001 and June 30, 2001.

(a) These Rules shall apply to any notice issued by the Labor Commissioner or an Awarding Body with respect to the withholding or forfeiture of contract payments for unpaid wages or penalties under the prevailing wage laws in effect prior to July 1, 2001; provided that, the party seeking review has not commenced a civil action with respect to such notice under the provisions of Labor Code sections 1731–1733 [repealed effective July 1, 2001].

(b) An Affected Contractor or Subcontractor may appeal any such notice served between April 1, 2001 and June 30, 2001 by filing a Request for Review with the Enforcing Agency that issued the notice, in the manner and form specified in Rule 22 [Section 17222] above. Any such Request for Review shall be in writing and shall include a statement indicating the date upon which the contractor or subcontractor was served with the notice of withholding or forfeiture.

(c) This Rule shall not extend the time available to appeal the notice under the former law. A Request for Review of a notice issued prior to July 1, 2001 must be filed with the Enforcing Agency within ninety (90) days after service of the notice.

(d) A contractor or subcontractor who has sought review of a notice issued prior to July 1, 2001 by filing a court action under the repealed provisions of Labor Code sections 1731–1733 on or after July 1, 2001, shall, if said action would have been timely under those sections, be afforded the opportunity to dismiss the action without prejudice, after entering into a stipulation that the proceeding be transferred to the Director for hearing in accordance with these Rules. The stipulation shall also provide that the time for commencing a hearing under Rule 41 [Section 17241] shall not begin to run until the case has been formally transferred to and received by the Office of the Director.

(e) Any hearing request made pursuant to Labor Code section 1771.7 [repealed effective July 1, 2001] that has not been heard and decided by a Hearing Officer prior to July 1, 2001 shall be handled in accordance with these Rules.

Prevailing Wage Rates

I, Thomas J. Donner, Executive Vice President - Business and Administration,

Santa Monica Community College District, make the following declaration and statement.

In my capacity as Executive Vice President - Business and Administration, I am responsible for the award and implementation of public works contracts. I am familiar with the provisions and requirements of the Labor and Public Contract Code Sections and the Title 8 California Code of Regulations enumerated above.

These code sections and regulations require the Santa Monica Community College District to:

1) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16202, to obtain the applicable general prevailing rate of per diem wages from the Director of Industrial Relations before awarding a contract for Public Works.

2) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16204, to ensure that the correct prevailing wage rates have been determined by the Director of Industrial Relations.

3) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations Section 16001, to request from the Director of Industrial Relations a coverage determination regarding a specific project or type of work to be performed.

4) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16302, to file a petition for review of a determination of the Director of Industrial Relations of any rate or rates.

5) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.4 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations Section 16002.5, to appeal an incorrect determination made by the Director of Industrial Relations.

6) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1773.2, to include a statement of prevailing rate of per diem wages in all calls and advertisements for bids, in the public works contract itself, and to post the statement at all job sites. In lieu of those requirements, the district may include a statement in the call for bids and contract a statement to the effect that copies of the prevailing rate of wages are on file in its principal office.

7) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.1 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16800 through 16802, to maintain records of ineligible contractors and subcontractors and to refuse to grant them public works projects of the district.

8) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1777.3, to send copies of all awards to the Division of Apprenticeship Standards and notify the Division of any discrepancies.

9) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776, when necessary or requested by the Director of Industrial Relations, to inspect and audit payroll records of contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects.

10) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16402, when requested by appropriate parties, to obtain and provide copies of the payroll records of the contractors and subcontractors working on district public works projects. The records provided are required to be marked or obliterated to prevent disclosure of an individual's name, address and social security number.

11) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.5 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Sections 16425 through 16439, to comply with all of the requirements of a Labor Compliance Program, when initiated and enforced by the district. These requirements include:

(a) All bid invitations and public works contracts shall contain appropriate language concerning the requirements of the prevailing wage laws;

(b) A prejob conference shall be conducted with the contractor and the subcontractors to discuss federal and state labor requirements applicable to the contract;

(c) Project contractors and subcontractors shall maintain and furnish, at a designated time, a certified copy of each weekly payroll containing a statement of compliance signed under penalty of perjury

(d) The district shall review, and, if appropriate, audit payroll records to verify compliance with prevailing wage laws;

(e) The district shall withhold contract payments when payroll records are delinquent or inadequate; and

(f) The district shall withhold contract payments equal to the amount of underpayments and applicable penalties when, after investigation, it is established that underpayment has occurred.

12) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.6 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 17220, to provide contractors and subcontractors, and bonding companies and sureties with Notices of Withholding of Contract Payments when minimum wage law violations are discovered by the district. The notice shall be in writing and include the following information:

(a) A description of the nature of the violation and basis for the notice.

(b) The amount of wages, penalties and forfeitures due, including a specification of amounts that have been or will be withheld from available contract payments, as well as all additional amounts that the enforcing agency has determined are due, including the amount of any liquidated damages that potentially may be awarded under Labor Code section 1742.1.

(c) The name and address of the office to whom a Request for Review may be sent.

(d) Information on the procedures for obtaining review of an Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments.

(e) Notice of Opportunity to request a settlement meeting under Section 17221.

(f) A statement appearing in bold or another type of face, that makes it stand out from other text, to the effect that failure to submit a timely request for review will result in a final order binding on the contractor and subcontractor, and on the bonding company.

13) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726, to report any suspected violations of the prevailing wage laws to the Labor Commissioner.

14) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1726, to withhold contract payments for underpaid wages and for penalties when, through the district's own investigation, the district determines a violation of prevailing wages has occurred.

15) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1727, to withhold amounts necessary to satisfy Civil Wage and Penalty Assessments issued by the Labor Commissioner.

16) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1727, to retain amounts withheld to satisfy a Civil Wage and Penalty Assessment until receiving a final order no longer subject to judicial review.

17) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742, after July 1, 2001[1], and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 17220, to comply with all due process requirements for the benefit of contractors and subcontractors when amounts are withheld pursuant to a Civil Wage and Penalty Assessment or a Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, including the providing of proper and timely notices, allowing them to review evidence relied upon, appearance and participation at hearings and the appeals therefrom.

18) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742, after July 1, 2001, to respond to petitions for writs of mandates filed by contractors and subcontractors seeking review of orders of the Labor Commissioner, including the retention of counsel to file timely responses, participating in pre-trial discovery matters, the trial of the cause, pre-trial and post-trial briefing, and the preparation of findings and judgment.

[1] Prior to July 1, 2001, different procedures and legal remedies were available to contractors and subcontractors. See: former Labor Code Sections 1730, 1731, 1732 and 1733

19) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1742.1 and Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16413, to grant and to participate in settlement meetings requested by contractors or subcontractors in an attempt to settle any disputed issue before formal hearing procedures.

20) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1771.2, a joint labor-management committee may bring an action against an employer who fails to pay prevailing wages. As a necessary party, the school district would be required to appear and participate in these legal proceedings.

21) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1776, to furnish copies of payroll records of a contractor or subcontractor to a joint labor management committee obliterated only to prevent disclosure of social security numbers.

Santa Monica Community College District is required to comply with these laws relating to prevailing wage rate laws in all public works projects, as defined, when:

(a) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720.2, the construction work is performed according to plans, specifications or criteria furnished by the district and where the district enters into a lease, as lessee, of the completed project during or upon completion of the construction;

(b) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720.3, hauling refuse from a public works site to an outside location;

(c) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720, the work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work;

(d) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for maintenance, including landscape maintenance;

(e) Pursuant to Labor Code Section 1720, the work is for installation works;

(f) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for field surveying work traditionally covered by collective bargaining agreements when the work is integral to the specific public works project; and

(g) Pursuant to Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 16001, the work is for residential and commercial projects when the public work is for student or faculty housing.

It is estimated that the Santa Monica Community College District has incurred, and will incur, in excess of $200 annually in staffing and other costs for the period from July 1, 2000 through June, 2002, to implement these new duties mandated by the state for which the district has not been reimbursed by any federal, state, or local government agency, and for which it cannot otherwise obtain reimbursement.

Introduction

Normally, local agencies bring test claims before the Commission because the state imposes some new burden on them.[1] Here, the Test Claimant essentially is complaining about the reverse: Since 1975, the state has taken on more of local agencies' historic responsibilities for determining and enforcing prevailing wages. To make the prevailing wage duties clearer and enforcement less onerous, the state has relieved local agencies of substantial responsibilities, leaving behind only minimal record keeping tasks. This shift from local agencies to the state does not trigger the reimbursement requirements of California Constitution, Article XIIIB. To the extent that there has been any expansion in the scope of public works, the consequent obligation to pay prevailing wages directly affects private contractors and only indirectly affects local governments. An indirect effect on the minimum wage in a labor market does not meet the requirements for subvention.

Test Claim

The Test Claim ("Claim") seeks reimbursement for changes from 1974 to the present in how public works are defined, how prevailing wage rates are determined and how the obligation to pay prevailing wages is enforced. Specifically, the Claim charges 28 specific mandates on local governments. The Claim, in short, seeks a resolution of whether 27 years of changes in California's prevailing wage law has resulted in any new mandates to local governments. (Petition, Statement of Claim, pgs. 128-135, and Exhibits 1 and 2 attached to the Test Claim[2]). Each claim is set out below with the page noted where this response discusses the specific claim.[3]

[1] For the purposes of public works and prevailing wages, local agencies and school districts are treated identically. Even though Test Claimant is a school district, the issues it raises apply equally to both groups. Throughout this response, therefore, this Respondent will use only the term "local agency" to include both groups defined in Government Code §§ 17518, 17519.

[2] Exhibit 2 does not state any new claim for reimbursement from Exhibit 1 and, therefore, will not be cited. Unless otherwise noted, all references are to the Statement of Claim or, where the Statement of Claim is silent, to Exhibit 1.

Public Works and Prevailing Wages

With some exceptions noted below, prevailing wages must be paid to construction workers by private contractors on public works.[4] "The California Prevailing Wage Law is a comprehensive statutory scheme designed to enforce minimum wage standards on construction projects funded in whole or in part with public funds." Road Sprinkler Fitters, Local Union 669 v. G & G Fire Sprinkler, Inc. (2001) 102 Cal.App.4th 765, 776, 125 Cal.Rptr.2nd 804 (citations omitted). The basic definition of a public work has not changed since well before 1975. A public work is any construction performed under contract paid for in whole or in part with public funds. Compare Labor Code § 1720 [1975 version] and Labor Code § 1720(a)(1) [current version].[5] There are three basic elements to the determination of whether a project is a public work ("coverage determination"): 1) the project must be for construction; 2) the project must be performed under contract and not by public employees (Bishop v. City of San Jose (1969) 1 Cal.3rd 56, 81 Cal.Rptr. 465); and 3) the project has to be paid for at least in part with public funds. If a project meets these three requirements, then all the work performed is subject to prevailing wages. Labor Code § 1772 [1975 version]. That is, if a local agency funds only a portion of a project, for example, 10 percent of the funding, the private contractors and subcontractors whose workers are on the project have to pay prevailing wages on all the work. Since all of the workers on a public work are employees of private contractors, the obligation to pay prevailing wage applies solely to private employers and not to local agencies. Enforcement was always against a private employer. Local agencies have to ensure that private employers pay the proper prevailing wages, however.

[4] The statutory term is General Prevailing Rate of Per Diem Wages. Labor Code §§ 1770, et al. This term comes from a period when wages were not calculated on an hourly basis but rather on a daily basis. See, Labor Code § 1810 [definition of a day of work]. The more common vernacular term now used is "prevailing wage," which now is calculated on an hourly basis and will be used throughout this response.

[5] Throughout, Respondents will refer to the 1975 Labor Code as the state of the law as of January 1, 1975 and the 2002 version as the current state of the law. Both versions of the applicable sections of the Labor Code are found in the Appendices, as are all other references. Unless other noted, all references to the Labor Code are the current version.

Once a project is a public work, all construction labor has to be paid at or above the prevailing rate.[6] The prevailing rate is that rate most commonly paid for the specific craft or trade in the local geographical area where the construction project takes place. Labor Code §§ 1773, 1773.9.

This means that local agencies have two primary connections to public works and the payment of prevailing wages: they enforce the obligations that private parties have to pay prevailing wages; and they, like private developers, private contractors, and private subcontractors, are subject to whatever changes in the scope of the definition of public work might occur. As seen below, however, subvention is only appropriate when new mandates arise in local agencies' enforcement role.

A Brief History of Public Works and Prevailing Wages Prior to 1975

Determinations of Public Works ("Coverage Determinations") Before 1975, local agencies, such as the Test Claimant, made their own determinations of whether a specific project was a public work. Local agencies had to apply the standards of Labor Code § 1720 described above. There was no formal process to review determinations of coverage determinations made by local agencies. Instead, coverage determination

[6] The statute excepts projects under $1000. Labor Code § 1771. As discussed at Claim numbers 11 and 12, the threshold is raised 15 to 25 times higher, for local agencies (including school districts) that take advantage of the offer in Labor Code § 1771.5 to establish a Labor Compliance Programs ('LCP") challenges occurred as part of court litigation, where the local agency was sued and had to defend the lawsuit, most often in the context of its enforcement of the prevailing wage law.

Determinations of Prevailing Wage Rate ("Rate Determinations") Local agencies also determined what the prevailing wage rate was. This meant each local agency had to know (or do the investigation and research to find out) what union construction workers received, what non-union construction workers received, and what federal public work construction workers received before it determined what wage rate "prevailed" for a craft, classification, or type of worker. Labor Code § 1773 [1975 version]. Requests to review local agencies' initial rate determinations were directed to the Director of Industrial Relations. Labor Code § 1773.4 [1975 version].[7] That is, if a private potential bidder (such as a contractor or private developer), a union, or a member of the public believed that the specified prevailing wage rate was incorrect, they filed a challenge with the Director of Industrial Relations, and the local agency had to defend its rate determination.

Enforcement Against Private Contractors Enforcement of the obligation to pay prevailing wages was primarily the job of the local agencies. In 1957, the Division of Labor Law Enforcement (now, Division of Labor Standards Enforcement or Labor Commissioner) was permitted by the legislature to assist local agencies. Stats 1957, ch. 398, § 1. However, local agencies remained primarily responsible for enforcement. This meant that local agencies had to monitor each public work project to ensure that prevailing wages were paid. The main enforcement tool available to local agencies was the ability to withhold contract payments to a private contractor for the prevailing wage violations by the contractor or a subcontractor. Labor Code § 1727 [1975 version]. When a dispute arose between the local agency and a contractor or subcontractor over whether payments were properly withheld, the local agency had to defend a civil lawsuit brought by the contractor or subcontractor. Labor Code§§ 1730-1734 [1975 version].

A Brief Synopsis of Public Works and Prevailing Wage

Enforcement As of 2002

Coverage Determinations Currently, public works coverage determinations are made by the Director of Industrial Relations upon the request of any interested party, including local agencies. Labor Code § 1773.4. 8 Cal. Code Regs., tit 8, §§ 16001-16002.5 [current version].[8] This does not mean that a request for a coverage determination is a prerequisite for a local agency to proceed with every public work project. Normally, a local agency makes its own determination of public works coverage but can request a Director's coverage determination to resolve close cases. Appeals of coverage determinations to the Director continue to be available. Private contractors and subcontractors continue to be responsible for the actual payment of prevailing wages.

Since the passage of Proposition 13, local agencies have had lower tax revenues with which to pay for the entire cost of public works. See, Koyama, "Financing Local Government In The Post-Proposition 13 Era: The Use And Effectiveness Of Nontaxing Revenue Sources" 22 Pac. L.J. 1333 (1991). Local agencies have, therefore, sought public/private funding mechanisms whereby construction that benefits the public can occur with fewer public dollars. Increasingly, therefore, the fiscal impact of the determination that a project is a public work, and therefore subject to the payment of prevailing wages, is felt not by local agencies but by private developers.[9] The Director continues to issue determinations, some of which are published as precedential, of his interpretation of § 1720. Cal. Code. Regs., tit 8, § 16001 [current version].

Rate Determinations The rates for prevailing wages are now investigated,

[8] Unless otherwise noted, all references to the California Code of Regulations are to the current version.

[9] In fact, a public agency may pay very little or no money for a project to be a public work. Under Labor Code § 1720(b), public funds can consist of below market transfers of land. See, California State University, San Marcos, PW 2002-012 (October 21, 2002). This means that a below market transfer can result in the obligation for a private contractor to pay the prevailing wage but at the same time not increase any public agency cost. See also, Labor Code § 1720(b) [SB 975].

calculated, published ("determined") and defended in court (when challenged) by the Director rather than by local agencies.[10] This relieves local agencies of having the obligation continually to update their research and investigation into what rate is most commonly paid for similar work in the local area. Instead, the Division of Labor Statistics and Research employs 10 to 12 statisticians and clerks to maintain this information and semi-annually publishes rates for each craft and trade by county ("General Determinations"). This information is sent to each local agency when effective. These rates are also available on the World Wide Web. Where a craft, classification or type of worker called for by the local agency's project does not appear in the published General Determinations, the local agency (or any interested party) can request a "special determination" just for the local agency's specific public work. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16202. See also, for example, Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16001(d).

Enforcement The obligation to pay prevailing wages now is primarily enforced either by the Labor Commissioner, although a local agency has a duty to the "take cognizance" of violations, which is a reduction from its prior responsibility to enforce. Labor Code § 1726. Local agencies also enforce prevailing wage payment obligations when they have chosen to exercise their old independence from the Labor Commissioner by being approved and authorized as LCPs. Labor Code § 1771.5. The Labor Commissioner, after an investigation, issues a citation to any contractor or subcontractor violating the prevailing wage law. The Labor Commissioner may request that a local agency withhold funds either from a contractor or subcontractor up to the amount of the citations, just as a local agency did when it was the enforcer. An LCP likewise can order a local agency to withhold contract funds if it determines that a contractor or subcontractor has not been complying with the prevailing wage law. Labor Code § 1771.6.

[10] For a fuller description of the current methodology for setting prevailing wages (not subject to this claim), see California Slurry Seal Association v. Department of Industrial Relations (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 651, 121 Cal. Rptr.2nd 38.

Currently, the Director performs this arduous task of determining what are prevailing wages. Labor Code § 1770. See, Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16200. The definition of prevailing wages has not changed substantially since prior to 1975, including the requirement that the wages be set for each local geographic area. The Director, through the Division of Labor Statistics and Research ("DLSR") publishes general prevailing wage determinations twice each year for each craft or trade, by county. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16201 [current version]. In addition, DLSR provides special determinations when requested. Cal. Code Regs, tit. 8, § 16202. This work costs the Department approximately $2,071,082.39 per year, based on the prior two and a half fiscal years.[13] This is work local agencies no longer do. Instead, local agencies are required simply to check the most recent determination before advertising a request for bids. See paragraph 2, infra.

2. The Obligation To Ensure The Correct Prevailing Wage Prior to 1975, when local agencies determined local prevailing wages, the duty to obtain the correct prevailing wage was subsumed in the requirement that the agencies ensure they were using the correct rate. However, any interested party could request review of the local agency's determination, and the local agency then had to justify its determination. Labor Code § 1773.4 [1975 version].

In exchange for the Director's making rate determinations, local agencies now obtain the correct prevailing wages from the Director. Labor Code § 1770 [current version]. This task no longer requires local agencies to do the actual investigations, surveys, and calculation ("determination") of the prevailing wage. That is, while the local agencies assume the burden of sending a letter, making a phone call, or checking the Department's website, this writing, sending or calling is substantially less expensive than was their prior obligation to investigate and calculate prevailing wages for each craft or trade on public works projects. If the rate obtained is not correct, in the local agency's view, it may challenge the correctness. Labor Code § 1773.4 [current version].

3. The Ability To Request Prevailing Wage Determination Prior to 1975, a prospective bidder, union representative, or local agency could request the Director to review the local agency's determination of the applicable prevailing wage rate. Labor Code § 1773.4; Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 16200, et seq. [1956 version].

This provision has not changed at all since 1975, and all of the post 1975 regulations apply the provisions of the 1975 version of § 1773.4. The language of the statute continues to be permissive.[14] The provision allows an interested party to either accept the prevailing wage set by the Director or to challenge the wage set. A local agency can either accept the general determination by DLSR for a craft or trade or it can choose to obtain a special determination. Procedural changes were made in 1977 after the Director became responsible for rate determinations. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 16200, et seq. [1977 version]. There is nothing in the Labor Code or the Director's regulations that requires such a petition (see, for example, number 28, infra). There is no fiscal or other compulsion to use or challenge the general determinations issued by DLSR twice each year.

4. The Ability To File For Administrative Review Of Prevailing Wage Rate Prior to 1975, a prospective bidder, or union representative, could request the Labor Commissioner to review the local agency's determination of the applicable prevailing rate. Labor Code § 1773.4, Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16200 [1956 version].

After 1975, the responsibility for reviewing prevailing wage rates was transferred to the Director or to the Chief of the Division of Labor Statistics and Research. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16200 [1977 version]. Starting well before 1975, this ability to request a review of a prevailing wage rate has never been a requirement; rather, an interested party had the option to seek a review of a rate determination. The local agency now shares the ability of contractors and unions to trigger this review.

[14] Labor Code § 1773.4: "Any prospective bidder or his representative, any representative of any craft, classification or type of workman involved, or the awarding body may, within 20 days after commencement of advertising of the call for bids by the awarding body, file with the Director of Industrial Relations a verified petition to review the determination of any such rate or rates upon the ground that they have not been determined in accordance with the provision of Section 1773 of this code." (emphasis added).

5. The Ability To File Administrative Appeal Of Public Work Determination Prior to 1975, there was no explicit procedure for issuing coverage determinations. The Director on request might do so, but there was no formalized process. Local agencies decided whether a project was a public work, and any challenge to this decision was through court litigation between the contractor and the local agency or the Labor Commissioner. Implicit in the right of local agencies and the Labor Commissioner to withhold funds (numbers 14, 15, 16, infra) was the ability to make a coverage determination. See, Lusardi v. Aubry (1992) 1 Cal.4th 976, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837.

Local agencies' ability to determine whether a project is a public work continues to this date. Should a dispute arise over whether a project is a public work, it may still be resolved through administrative litigation between the Labor Commissioner and the affected private contractor over the failure to pay prevailing wages. Alternatively, the Director may be asked to determine whether the project is a public work either by a local agency or an interested party. Local agencies are not required to participate in the Director's review of a project, although they are always asked for their opinion. Starting in approximately 1977, the Director began informally to review coverage determinations. See, Winzler v. Kelly, (1981) 121 Cal.App.3rd 120, 174 Cal.Rptr. 744. In approximately 1986, the Director issued regulations formalizing this review process to interpret Labor Code § 1720. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16001 [1986 version]. This was pursuant to his authority under the Labor Code. Labor Code § 1773.5 [1975 version]. The Director's authority was affirmed in Lusardi, supra, which recognized the inherent ability to make coverage determinations that accompanies enforcement.

6. The Requirement To Notify Contractors Of Prevailing Wage Obligation Prior to 1975, when a local agency announced a bid for a public work, it had to specify in the bid announcement, the bid specification, and the contract itself what general rates would apply. The local agency had the alternative of keeping a copy of the rates in its office and referring to them in the bid announcement, bid specification, and contract. Labor Code § 1773.2 [1975 version]. Local agencies also had to insert into all public works contracts the requirement to make travel and subsistence payments to workers. Labor Code § 1773.8.

The requirement under § 1773.2 has not changed since 1975. Labor Code § 1773.2 [current version]. Labor Code § 1773.8 was repealed in 1999.

7. The Requirement To Maintain Lists Of Contractors Debarred From Working On Public Works By State Prior to 1975, there was no authority to debar contractors with histories of failing to pay prevailing wages from future public works contracts.

In 1989, the legislature required DLSE to debar contractors with a substantial history of prevailing wage violations from bidding or working on public works. Labor Code § 1777.1 [current version], Stats.1989, ch 1224 § 10. Currently, DLSE determines whether to debar a contractor. The local agency has no responsibility to participate in the proceedings. DLSE sends the lists of contractors whose debarment is final to local agencies who are required to receive these lists. Neither the statute nor the regulations require the local agency to do anything in response to a debarment or to receiving the list from DLSE, although presumably the entire statutory scheme presumes that a local agency cannot sign a contract with a debarred contractor. Labor Code § 1777.1 [current version], Cal Code Regs., tit. 8, §16800 [current version].

This prohibition is not particularly onerous, however, as the debarment list is posted on DIR's website and contains between 12 and 20 contractors for the entire state at any one time.[15]

8. The Requirement To Send Copies Of All Awarded Contracts To State Agency (Division Of Apprenticeship Standards) Prior to 1975, local agencies that awarded contracts for public works that required apprentices had to inform the Department of [15] See, Declaration of Anthony Mischel, Paragraph 3, Exhibit B.

Industrial Relations' Division of Apprenticeship Standards ("DAS") whenever it awarded such a contract. Labor Code§ 3098.[16] [1975 version] The local agency also had to inform DAS if it found a discrepancy between the number of apprentices on a project as opposed to the number of apprentices who were supposed to be on the job. Id.

This requirement has not changed. Labor Code § 1773.3 [current version]

9. The Right To Inspect Certified Payroll Records Prior to 1975, contractors were required to keep accurate records of the name, occupation, and actual wages paid to each worker.[17] Contractors were required to make the records available for inspection to local agencies. Labor Code § 1776 [1975 version].

This provision did not change after 1975 in so far as local agencies were concerned, except as discussed in 10, infra. The changes since 1975 have addressed the responsibilities of private contractors as to what information must be recorded. As in the pre 1975 version, contractors currently have to provide local agencies with copies of their payroll records, now called certified payroll records ("CPR").

10. The Requirement To Copy Certified Payroll Records Under Certain Circumstances Prior to 1975, there was no provision for local agencies to obtain or copy CPRs. Since local agencies did their own enforcement, however, they routinely obtained them. See number 9, supra. Before 1975, the Public Records Act made such information disclosable on demand from the public. See Government Code §§ 6252 ["Local agency" includes school district], 6252 (d) [definition of public record]. The post 1975 amendments to § 1776 did not change local agencies' pre-existing requirements to provide copies of public records (including payroll records) to the public. (See also, number 21, infra).

Labor Code § 1776 did not change any local agency requirement in any meaningful way. Test Claimant claims that there is a new mandate because local agencies now have to make copies of the CPRs on request by members of the public and obliterate certain personal information. First, the requirement to obliterate personal information is not necessarily with the local agency. Labor Code § 1776(e) merely requires that the copy provided to the public by DLSE or the local agency "be obliterated," which can be done by the private contractor. Even if this were a new mandate, there is no need for subvention since Labor Code § 1776(b)(3) authorizes local agencies (as well as contractors and subcontractors) to charge for these copies in advance of providing them. Government Code § 17556(d).

11. The Requirements For Setting Up Voluntary Labor Compliance Program Prior to 1975, Labor Compliance Programs did not exist. All enforcement of the obligation to pay prevailing wages was accomplished by the local agency, with assistance from the Labor Commissioner.

Labor compliance programs offer two inducements to local agencies to enforce the state prevailing wage law. First, they increase the monetary ceiling before a project is subject to prevailing wages. Labor Code § 1771.5. Second, where the LCP elects to enforce, the fines, penalties, and forfeitures collected are deposited in the local agency's treasury. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16438. This is an exception to the general rule that fines, penalties, and forfeitures go into the state's General Fund. Labor Code §§ 1730 (repealed 2001), 1731 (repealed 2001) and 1734 [1999 version]. This is not a so-called "carrot and stick" program in that there is no sanction for a local agency that decides not to participate.

Should a local agency choose to become an LCP, there are both initial and continuing requirements it must meet in order to retain its approval status with the Department. These requirements are found at Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 16425 to 16500. Nowhere is this program mandated.[18]

12. The Ability To Enforce Independently Prevailing Wage Violations By Voluntary

[18] The Commission should also note that Test Claimant is not an LCP and therefore may not have standing to bring this portion of its Claim.

Labor Compliance Programs Prior to 1975, Labor Compliance Programs did not exist. See comments to number 11, supra.

The purpose of becoming an LCP is to be able to enforce prevailing wage violations. As seen in number 11, supra, this is a voluntary activity by a local agency.

13. The Obligation To Report Prevailing Wage Violations To Labor Commissioner Prior to 1975, local agencies were required both to "take cognizance" of violations and to withhold funds owed to contractors for prevailing wage violations. Labor Code §§ 1726, 1727. If there were insufficient funds available for withholding, then local agencies notified the Labor Commissioner of the violation. The local agency, with the Labor Commissioner's assistance filed civil lawsuits against the offending contractors. Id.

This obligation to report violations to the Labor Commissioner has not changed. Enforcement of prevailing wage violations was removed from local agencies as of 2001, Stats. 2000, ch. 954. In exchange for this reduction in work for local agencies, the legislature added a reporting responsibility. Id.[19]. The second paragraph of the current version of § 1726 applies to LCPs.

14. The Obligation To Withhold Payment From Contractors During Investigation Of Possible Prevailing Wage Violations Prior to 1975, local agencies withheld funds owed contractors for prevailing wage violations. Labor Code § 1727. This obligation did not change after 1975. In 2000, as part of the overall change in enforcement, private contractors had to withhold funds from offending subcontractors if the local agency had not withheld sufficient funds. The local agency had no role in this process. Labor Code § 1727(b) [current version].

15. The Obligation To Withhold Payment To Contractor When Contractor Cited By State For Prevailing Wage Violation As seen in numbers 13 and 14, supra, the Labor Commissioner did not issue citations against contractors prior to 1975. Local agencies did the bulk of the enforcement.

[19] This simultaneous reduction of work and minor addition of responsibility is not subject to subvention. Government Code § 17556(e).

Currently, the Labor Commissioner does all the enforcement work, and local agencies do no more than withhold funds when the Labor Commissioner informs them of violations. This is identical to local agencies' historic responsibility to "take cognizance" of violations and withhold payments. See, number 13, 14, supra, and number 16, infra.

16. Obligation To Retain Payments To Contractor When Contractor Cited By State For Prevailing Wage Violation Until Resolution Of Citation Prior to 1975, a local agency that believed a contractor had failed to pay prevailing wages had to withhold payment until there was a resolution. Labor Code § 1726 [1975 version].

This duty has not changed.

17. The Requirement To Provide Due Process To Contractors Who Are Cited For Prevailing Wage Violations The claim is correct that prior to 1975, there was no administrative adjudication of citations by the Labor Commissioner. Instead, the private contractor's remedy was a civil suit against the awarding body. See description in G & G Fire Sprinkler cases, infra at n. 20. The awarding body could proffer the defense to the Labor Commissioner. Labor Code § 1733

A new administrative adjudication system was created in Labor Code § 1742.[20] Overall, as seen in number 13, supra, this reduces the role of the local agencies. Now, a local agency is no longer even a nominal plaintiff defended by the Labor Commissioner. There is no requirement in the new statute or in the regulations that local agencies participate in the hearing process, (unless the local agency has availed itself of the option to become an LCP.) The regulations specifically define a "party" as "an Affected Contractor or Subcontractor who has requested review of either an Assessment or a [20] In 2000, the legislature passed AB 1646, which added new Labor Code §§ 1741 and 1742. Section 1741 provided for a new system of citations by DLSE against contractors and subcontractors who failed to comply with the prevailing wage law.

The legislature passed Stats. 2000, ch. 954 (AB1646) in response to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal's decision in G & G Fire Sprinkler v. Bradshaw, 204 Fed.3rd 941 (9th Cir. 2000), which held, in part, that a subcontractor's due process rights were violated because the Labor Code did not give them a direct right to challenge withholding by local agencies. After the passage of AB 1646, the Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit in Lujan v. G& G Fire Sprinkler, 532 U.S. 189, 121 S.Ct. 1446 (2001).

Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments, the Enforcing Agency that issued the Assessment or the Notice of Withholding of Contract Payments from which review is sought, and any other Person who has intervened under subparts (a), (b), or (c) of Rule 08." Cal. Code Reg., tit 8, § 17202(j).[21] This means that a local agency is not automatically a party to these proceedings and, therefore, has no mandatory duty to participate in them.

A local agency's participation only occurs when it seeks to intervene in a proceeding under Labor Code § 1742. Under the regulation for intervention, a local agency could intervene as "any other person."[22] In fact, no local agency, other than one acting as an LCP, has participated as a party in the more than 450 cases filed since the effective date of the statute, July 1, 2001.[23]

This obligation is less than the pre 1975 enforcement obligation for local agencies.

18. The Ability To Respond To Civil Writs Of Mandate Filed By Contractors For Prevailing Wage Violations Prior to 1975, civil suits were filed against the local agency as the contractor's remedy for withholding and were the initial trial level of whether prevailing wages had been paid. See discussion at number 17, supra.

After July 1, 2001, challenges to the decision in the administrative adjudication are brought in civil court under Code of Civil Procedure § 1094.5. Labor Code § 1742(c) [current version]. Unless the local agency becomes an LCP, it does not have to respond to writs of mandate, which is the only method by which to contest the administrative adjudication result. As discussed above, local agencies (other than voluntary intervenors, and voluntary LCP's) are not parties to that administrative process, and thus not even nominal parties to the writ.

This obligation is less than the pre 1975 enforcement mandate for local agencies.

19. The Ability To Participate In Settlement Meetings With Contractors Cited For Prevailing Wage Violations

The same response as in number 17, supra, applies here.

20. The Ability To Be A Party When Contractor Is Sued By Private Party For Prevailing Wage Violations

The same response as in number 17, supra, applies here.

21. The Requirement To Furnish Certified Payroll Records To Joint Labor Management Committee On Request Test Claimant also seeks subvention for its obligations to obtain and to provide copies of CPRs for joint labor-management committees with different obliteration requirements that exist for members of the public. This does not materially change the analysis set forth in number 10, supra. The description of the requirement in number 10 applies equally here. The committees were entitled to file requests under the Public Records Act before 1975.

22. The Creation Of A Public Work Under Certain Circumstances When Construction Is Performed To Specific Plans And Specifications Prior to 1975, the definition of a public work included situations where a local agency did not pay for construction of property it was going to lease if certain criteria were met. Under Labor Code 1720.2, a construction project was also a public work if 1) the construction was between private parties (no local agency involvement), 2) the property was owned privately but after construction at least 50% of the assignable space would be leased by a local agency, and 3) the lease was entered into prior to the construction contract.[24]

The only change to Labor Code § 1720.2 was in 1980, which added an alternative to the third criterion. Under the current version of 1720.2, a project is a public work either if the lease was entered into prior to the construction contract or if the lease was entered into prior to the completion of the construction and the construction was done according to "plans, specifications, or criteria furnished" by the local agency. There is no requirement in either version that a local entity enter into a lease for at least 50% of the assignable space of privately owned property. The requirement for the payment of prevailing wages is solely on the property owner and private contractor. Any increased cost (if any exist) on a local agency is indirect at best.

23. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Rate For Hauling Refuse From A Public Work Prior to 1975, there was no coverage by the prevailing wage law for hauling refuse from a public work project. This meant that refuse hauler was not entitled to prevailing wages, even for removing refuse from a public work.

As of January 1, 2000, refuse haulers are entitled to prevailing wages if they haul refuse from public work in which the local agency is a signatory to the contract. This means the obligation to pay prevailing wage was that of the private refuse hauler or private contractor. In fact, AB 302, which amended § 1720.3, provided that adding local agencies did not create a mandate because the bill created a new crime. See, Stats. 1999, ch. 220, § 3. Therefore, this new provision would not be subject to subvention. Government Code § 17556(g). Presumably the crime created is adding to the list of prevailing wage violations that are crimes. Labor Code § 1777 [current version].

24. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Wages Where Public Funds Are Used In The Design And Pre-construction Phase Prior to 1975, there was no public pronouncement on whether design and pre-construction activities constituted "construction"

In 2000, the legislature passed SB 1999. Stats. 2000, ch. 881. The relevant part of this amendment to § 1720 was the addition of the sentence "For purposes of this paragraph, "construction" includes work performed during the design and preconstruction phases of construction including, but not limited to, inspection and land surveying work." As will be seen, Claim number 27, infra, land survey work has long been subject to the obligation to pay prevailing wages under the same theory as with project inspection: both had prevailing wage determinations prepared that were long standing and occurred very shortly after the Director became responsible for setting prevailing wages. The legislative history for SB 1999 demonstrates that the legislature did not intend any change in the existing interpretation of § 1720:

> This bill codifies much of the department's June 9, 2000, decision by including "inspectors' in the definition of "construction" for purposes of public works. This bill also insures that workers earning the prevailing wage in the construction phase of a project will also be entitled to that wage for the same type of work done during the design and pre-construction phases of a project, even if that work is done pursuant to a services contract or otherwise, as the department found.
> (Senate Rules Committee Report, August 23, 2000, Pgs. 3, 5).

On June 9, 2000, the Director, interpreting the pre 1975 version of Labor Code § 1720, found that project inspectors were entitled to prevailing wages if they worked on public works.[25] In the Decision on Appeal, the Director specifically referred to the fact that inspectors involved in the public works had been covered by a prevailing rate determination since at least 1977 as a part of the basis for his decision.

Currently, the use of public funds during the design and pre-construction phase of a project may make the entire project a public work and subject to prevailing wages. This change, however, only affects those projects where the only public funds used are in the design and pre-construction phase of a project. That is, if public funds are used in the pre-construction phase as well as construction phase, then the amendments to 1720 adding design and pre-construction do not create a new mandate. As with all other prevailing wage obligations, the direct impact is on private contractors who must pay prevailing wages.

24. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Wages Where Public Funds Are Used For [25] California State University Northridge, Earthquake Recovery Project, PW 96-046 (June 9, 2000).

Landscape Maintenance As of 1975, Labor Code § 1771 specifically provided that the private contractors' obligation to pay at least the prevailing wage rate applied to contracts for maintenance work. Labor Code § 1771 [1975 version]; see also, Franklin v. City of Reverside (1962) 58 Cal.2nd 114, 23 Cal.Rptr. 401 [landscape maintenance covered].[26]

The Director clarified in later regulations that maintenance work included landscape maintenance, when an issue arose over whether landscape maintenance was covered by § 1771.[27] This restatement of a pre-1975 obligation is not a new requirement.

25. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Wages Where Public Funds Are Used For Installation Work Prior to 1975, public funds paid for installation was part of the definition of construction under the 1975 version of Labor Code § 1720.[28]

The 2001 amendment to the Labor Code explicitly included installation into the definition of a public work so that private contractors continued to have to pay prevailing wages on all parts of a project if public funds are used to pay for installation work. The addition of the word "installation," therefore, was declarative of the existing interpretation of the basic definition of public work in the 1975 version of § 1720.[29]

26. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Wages Where Public Funds Are Used For Certain Forms Of Land Surveying Prior to 1975, the Director had not announced that the payment of public funds for any form of land surveying subjected a project to the definition of public work. In 1977, the Director in interpreting the 1975 version of § 1720, found that certain land survey work, if paid for with public funds, made a project into a public work. See, Winzler v. Kelly, supra. This decision by the Director was not a [27] See, former Public Contracts Code § 21002, now Public Contracts Code § 22002. When landscape maintenance was removed from the calculation of what was part of a "public project" in the Uniform Public Construction Cost Accounting Act, the Director was forced to clarify that this cost accounting change did not remove landscape maintenance from the definition of maintenance in Labor Code § 1771.

This interpretation of the Labor Code § 1720 was then codified in regulation in 1978. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16001(c).[30]

27. The Requirement To Pay Prevailing Wages Where Public Funds Used For Construction of Certain Residential Facilities Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16001(d) provides that certain residential construction paid for in whole or in part with public funds is a public work. There is a note attached to this section that "such projects may require a Special Determination by the Director..." Test Claimant claims this regulation is a mandate.

In fact, residential construction paid for in whole or in part with public funds has always been a public work under Labor Code § 1720 as it fits in the generic definition of public work. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 16001(d) is intended for a totally different purpose. General Determination wage rates for construction work are set based on new construction of commercial buildings. There is no published General Determination for residential construction, where wages are traditionally lower than in commercial construction. For certain classes of residential construction (including dormitories four stories or less), the Director will issue a Special Determination. Far from creating a mandate for increased costs to a private contractor, this provision allows the private contractor or private developer potentially to reduce its costs by paying a lower wage rate.

Further, nothing in the Claim suggests that any school district is involved in residential construction.

Analysis of Test Claim

Certain "costs mandated by the state" on local governments, including school districts, are subject to subvention. Government Code § 17550. The Claim procedure was created to ensure that the Legislature, in an effort to balance its own books, did not make local agencies pay for services that the state believed should be provided to the public and to provide an administrative mechanism for resolving these claims. County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3rd 46, 56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38. Therefore, "new programs" or "higher levels of service" imposed on a local agency are entitled to subvention if the legislature or executive branch mandates them. Cal. Const., Art XIIIB, § 6. "[L]ocal entities are not entitled to reimbursement for all increased costs mandated by state law, but only those costs resulting from a new program or increased level of service imposed on them by the state." Lucia Mar Unified School District v. Honig (1988) 44 Cal.3rd 830, 835, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677. Voluntary acts, even if sanctioned or regulated by state law, are not mandates; and subvention is not allowed. City of Merced v. State of California (1984) 153 Cal.App.3rd 777, 200 Cal.Rptr. 642.

"Costs mandated by the state" is very specifically defined in Government Code § 17514. Costs must be incurred by local agencies after July 1, 1980, as a result of one of two occurrences:

1. Any statute enacted on or after January 1, 1975; or
2. Any executive order that implements a statute that was enacted after January 1, 1975.[31]

The new enactment or implementation of a new enactment must mandate a "new program" or "higher level of service".

To obtain subvention, Test Claimant must show it is under a legal compulsion to act as a result of some legislative action after January 1, 1975. Executive orders that were issued after January 1, 1975 to implement pre 1975 enactments do not constitute a mandate. Similarly, where the Director, through his prevailing wage determinations, interprets the scope of the pre 1975 Labor Code, there is no ground to claim a "cost mandated by the state." It would therefore follow that post 1975 legislative enactments that merely restate prior interpretations based on the law as of January 1, 1975, similarly do not fall within the definition of § 17514 as no new program or higher level of service is being required. See, for example, Government Code § 17556(b).

[31] "Executive order" is defined in Government Code § 17516 to mean "any order, plan, requirement, rule or regulation..." While this language clearly covers the regulations issued by the Director, it is not so clear that the Director's less formal interpretations of what work is covered within the definition of public work is an executive order.

In this case, all of the Test Claims fail for one or more of three reasons: [32]

1. The alleged change in state law is not a new program or increased level of service
2. The alleged change in state law simply does not exist; or
3. The alleged change in state law is not a mandate but regulation of voluntary activity by local agencies.

Some Changes Are Not "New Programs" Or "Higher Levels of Service" Because The Requirements Do Not Uniquely Affect Governmental Entities.[33]

Some aspects of the Claim fall for the most basic of reasons; the claims are mandates for private parties who deal with local agencies, not for the local agencies themselves. "New programs" or "higher levels of service", if they exist, must be unique to governments. If a change in state law affects a larger population, including the public and private citizens, then the change is not subject to reimbursement. County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra. The Supreme Court held that for a new program or higher level of service to exist:

> We conclude that the drafters and the electorate had in mind the commonly understood meanings of the term ["higher level of service"]-- programs that carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public, or laws which, to implement a state policy, impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state

[33] See, numbers 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28.

County of Los Angeles, supra, 4 Cal.3rd at 56

The Court held that a change in workers' compensation benefits that affects all employers (but does not affect employee responsibilities, and is irrelevant to independent contractors, unemployed, or retirees) is not a mandate within the meaning of the Government Code. The Court delineated between those increased costs that only government organization face versus increased costs that both governments and members of the public share alike. Compare, Carmel Valley Fire Protection v. State of California (1987) 190 Cal.App.3rd 521, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795 [fire fighting unique government program] and County of Sacramento v. State of California (1990) 50 Cal.3rd 51, 266 Cal.Rptr. 139 [paying unemployment insurance premiums not unique government program]

The Test Claimant conflates two broad sets of alleged mandates into a single claim: It has combined coverage and enforcement issues with the indirect effects of refinements or changes in the scope of public works ("public works changes"). Changes to how coverage determinations (including rate determinations) are made and how enforcement occurs are clearly unique government functions (collectively "enforcement changes"). Had any of those responsibilities that are mandatory for local agencies increased since 1975, subvention would be required. If anything, as seen below, the mandatory local agencies' responsibilities for enforcement changes have decreased, not increased. The remaining claimed enforcement changes are actually voluntary.

The effect of the Director's coverage determinations, and conforming legislation, however, is on private parties directly. Some of the Claims are that the public works changes increased the number of projects that are considered public works. The alleged increased cost is that prevailing wages have to be paid. Payment of prevailing wages, however, is uniquely a responsibility of private parties, as local agencies are never subject to pay their own employees prevailing wages. Labor Code § 1771. See also, Bishop v. City of San Jose, supra. Therefore, any public works changes affect primarily the private parties who hire workers, not local agencies. This includes private developers of blighted areas, developers of large tracts of vacant land that have to provide public infrastructure, commercial landlords, and all the myriad contractors, subcontractors, haulers, and the like. The expansion of the definition of public works does not affect the local agencies directly.

Even if there were an increased cost of construction because a project is covered as a public work, the cost of the increase is not borne directly by the local agencies; nor is there any reason to think that the entire increase in the cost of construction that is attributable to changes in coverage would necessarily be passed onto the local agency as an increased cost.[34] Therefore, the additional costs that might have arisen to local agencies are "an incidental impact of a law that applies generally to all entities [and] is not the type of expense that the voters had in mind when they adopted section 6 of California Constitution, article XIIIB." City of El Monte v. Commission on State Mandates (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 266, 277, 99 Cal.Rptr.2nd 333.

Finally, some claimed increased costs of construction may well have been offset by increased funding for school districts. If so, costs associated with any increased mandate would not be subject to subvention. Government Code § 17556(d). For example, Education Code § 17070.65 provides that the Department of General Services shall "provide assistance" to local districts that use the 1998 State Schools Facilities Fund for school construction. As funds have already been made available, subvention would not be appropriate.

Some Claims Are Not Changes In State Law. Local Agencies Have Less Responsibilities Than Before January 1, 1975.[35]

It is a sine qua non that state law has to change for grounds to exist for a test claim. As seen above, in many aspects, local agencies are under no new obligations from [34] The notion that requiring payment of prevailing wages raises the overall cost of construction is a debatable point. See, submission by State Building Trades Council ("SBTC"). One of the primary findings in the studies submitted by the SBTC is that while prevailing wage rates are higher than, for example, minimum wages, construction costs are often lower because of increased efficiencies. This means that even if a private contractor has to pay more for an hour of labor, this increase does not necessarily equate to an increased cost to the developer.

---

[35] See, numbers 3, 6, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 21.

1975. For example, parties have always been able to request the Director to review coverage determinations, to seek review of rate determinations, and to appeal coverage determinations. Local agencies have always had to notify contractors of their obligations to pay prevailing wages, withhold funds from illegally operating contractors, et cetera. These unchanged responsibilities can be seen by comparing the 1975 and 2002 Labor Codes. These unchanged responsibilities for local agencies, as seen above, are not entitled to subvention. This much should be obvious.

In fact, during the 27 years covered by the Test Claim, the legislature, in an effort to create a statewide system for the payment of prevailing wage coverage and enforcement, has relieved local agencies of much of the responsibilities for prevailing wage enforcement. This has resulted in an overall reduction in how much the local agencies have to do.[36] Some of these reductions have been simultaneous with different responsibilities for local agencies (such as the change from local agencies making rate determinations to requesting them from the Director). None of these reductions have been accounted for in the Claim.

The Director's interpretation of the definition of "construction" in the pre 1975 version of § 1720 are similarly not new mandates that are subject to subvention under Government Code § 17514. For example, the Director relied on the pre 1975 definition of "construction" to include landscape maintenance, land surveying, installation, inspection, and pre-construction activities.[37] Even assuming that the Director's prevailing wage determinations are "executive orders," these determinations do not meet the standard in Government Code § 17514 because these orders merely implemented legislation enacted before January 1, 1975, regardless of when the determinations were issued. Similarly, post 1975 law that puts into law these interpretations of pre 1975 enactments are not changes or new mandates under the precise language of Government Code § 17514.

Some of the Changes Are Not Mandatory.[38]

For a new mandate to occur, the local agency must be under a compulsion to act. City of Sacramento v. State of California, supra, 50 Cal.3rd at 51. Local agencies that voluntarily adopt new programs are not eligible for reimbursement. City of Merced v. State of California, supra, 153 Cal.App.3rd at 777 [the decision to proceed by eminent domain not a mandatory duty and not reimbursable]. Some of the Claims are not mandates since the new provisions control voluntary programs, such as the LCP provisions and the new administrative appeal system for the failure to pay prevailing wages. These are, in the words of the Supreme Court, "true choices." City of Sacramento v. State of California, supra, 50 Cal.3rd at 76.

Conclusion

There are a myriad of reasons why the Claim should be denied in its entirety. Many of the alleged claimed changes in fact are identical requirements that existed in 1975; many of the alleged changes are not new programs nor higher levels of service; and many changes are for programs in which local agencies do not have to participate.

In fact, when it comes to enforcement and to determinations of coverage and prevailing wage rates, local agencies are better off now than they were in 1975. The hard work of making coverage determinations and complying with the exacting requirements to set a prevailing wage rate is no longer a local agencies' responsibility. The primary enforcement responsibility similarly has been lifted from local agencies' shoulders.

The final point is that the scope of what is a public work has admittedly expanded to some degree. The Claim infers, but is not explicit, that the increased scope of what is a public work has increased local agencies' costs. As pointed out above, this is a debatable point, given the overall increased efficiencies of a skilled workforce. It is further debatable when the various funding mechanism that local agencies use to leverage their resources are considered. If the Claim is accepted on the issue of the expanded scope of the public works, this Commission is going to have to consider each construction project separately, determining whether the project would have been covered before 1975. If a project would not have been covered before 1975, the Commission will have to determine what the increase in the local agency's portion of each project was, excluding any increase because prevailing wages (as have all wages to all employers) have increased over time. In light of the funding mechanisms such as described in the CSU, San Marcos situation, this determination can only be made on a case by case basis. This task easily could consume the entire Commission's time.

For all of these reasons, the Claim should be denied.

DECLARATION OF ANTHONY MISCHEL

I, ANTHONY MISCHEL, declare:

1. I am an attorney at law, licensed to practice in this state. I have personal knowledge of the facts contained in this Declaration. I am employed by the Office of the Director of Industrial Relations as a Senior Attorney. I have personal knowledge of the facts contained in this Declaration and could competently testify to them.

2. Attached to this Declaration as Exhibit A is a printout from DIR's budget office containing figures that come directly from the State Controller's Office for the Division which I know to be, and to have been, responsible for determining and publishing the prevailing wage, during the period of the claim, the Division of Labor Statistics and Research (DLSR). This document is a computer printout of figures directly from the official State Controller's Office computer, produced in the ordinary course of state business to record expenditures. It shows the amount spent by DLSR for fiscal years 2000 to 2003 (partial). For fiscal year 2000/2001, DLSR spent $2,081334.09 in salaries and expenses determining and publishing prevailing wage rates. For fiscal year 2001/2002, DLSR spent $2,086,009.41 in salaries and expenses determining and publishing prevailing wage rates. For the fiscal year, to date, DLSR spent $1,010,362.48 in salaries and expenses determining and publishing prevailing wage rates. The two and half year average is $2,071,082.39. Based on these figures, DLSR currently uses approximately 24 personnel years to meet the requirements of issuing general and special prevailing wage determinations.

3. Currently DLSE publishes the list of debarred contractors on its website at http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/debar.html. The current list of debarred contractors is attached to this Declaration as Exhibit B. This lists 16 contractors for the entire state of California. To my knowledge over the past 12 months, this list has never exceeded 20 contractors.

lc 1791 Maintenance (Tree Trimmers)

To : Donald Vial

Ernie Vivas

Date : March 31, 1977

Subject: "Maintenance" and Prevailing Wage Rates as to Treetrimmers

From : Department of Industrial Relations
Christine Curtis

Issue: Is maintenance covered under public works and how do we determine rates?

1. Facts: DLSR issued a verbal determination that maintenance of foliage on median traffic islands in Pasadena was about $7 an hour. In fact, the industry purports to pay about $3.50 an hour. (I think this is an area in which illegal aliens are heavily employed and this was stated outright by the personnel for the City of Pasadena who handles the contract.)

   The City of Pasadena has listed a rate of $7.65 plus benefits an hour for landscape maintenance in a project booklet for all of the contracts which the city lets (it shows that a general or construction laborer is to receive $7.65 and a landscape gardener is to receive $7.75, see attached Exhibit A). The definition of landscape maintenance clearly is general upkeep of foliage (rather than installation of foliage after construction).

   The city has never let a contract under this as it had been performed by force before. (I forgot to check the rate paid by the city for force work or why the city is stopping its force work except that the city is attempting to cut its work force.) Jim Valentine, the City of Pasadena personnel in charge of the bidding, stated that it only received three bids for the job: two potential bidders refused to bid at the $7 rate; one bidder appears to do all his work himself so will pay no wages (came in second); the highest bidder based his rates on the issued prevailing wage rate of $7+ an hour even though he was the only person who attended a pre-bid meeting and that protested the $7 rate; and the lowest bidder based his bid on the $3.50 rates. The city has not yet awarded the contract. If we decide that $7 is not the rate, we must do so immediately so that they can republish the call for bids. The city is upset because it will get one-half of the work for the same amount of money if the $7 rate is used. The city agent, of course, wants us to declare: 1) that maintenance is not covered by the contract, or 2) that the rate is lower.

This rate was not written, nor was their request. Before the city could follow up with a letter of request for a determination, the attorney for the lowest bidder asserted that he was going to challenge the rate. This rate had been arrived at by Jim Roeckel by calling to find the master labor agreement.

Bill Cohen, the attorney, and his client arrived at our office Monday afternoon, March 28, at which time he presented me with a typed protest, which appears to be a Section 1773.4 petition for review. Although deficient, according to the regulations, in that there is insufficient information as to the particulars of the bidder or as to the awarding body under Section 16204 of the regulations or as to sufficient information on which to reestablish a rate, the complaint can be amended or the information furnished. An agent of the awarding body has been notified of the request for review. There is a technical failure in that the Chief of Labor Standards and Research was not notified, but I sent her a copy on this on the 29th. On that day, the attorney Cohen sent by mail carrier additional information - the David Bacon wages for San Diego County at $3.25 an hour for general maintenance laborer and a collective bargaining agreement for nonconstruction maintenance workers for San Diego County at $3.43 an hour effective December 1, 1974. (This is a two year old rate).

The Director may request that the petition for review be amended or dismiss it. The latter seems unwarranted, so I recommend that I proceed to obtain additional information. I already asked Jim Roeckel on Tuesday afternoon, January 29th, to call several employers' groups in that area and to get the Davis-Bacon rates. The determination must be made within 20 days from filing the petition or from amendment of the petition (since insufficient material was sent, we will have 20 days from the date we deem the information sufficient.) The decision must be made soon in deference to the Pasadena contract.

A. Coverage of "Maintenance"

1. The first issue is whether the public works section covers regular maintenance. There is no elaboration in the public works section, and Section 1771 provides merely that prevailing wages should be paid on contracts set for maintenance work.

Cohen asserts that this means "maintenance" on construction so as to mean maintenance construction. He ignores that Section 1720 has other definitions as to public works such as utility districts and street improvement. Why should maintenance be limited to construction? Also, the state is permitting governments to use public funds to hire individuals without protection. What public policy is there behind not protecting the worker by insisting that prevailing wages be used in awarding contracts. Governments use contracts to keep their costs down, but, as the Department charged with protecting the worker, we should not dismiss lightly this category of worker. We would not be artificially inflating the economy or winning higher wages in a nonunionized area if we merely reflect what is the actual prevailing wage rate. We are now inflating the wages by establishing high rates by the practice of calling one union which has master agreements covering large geographic areas, rather than the locality, and by accepting their statement as to the appropriate classification.

Note that the public utilities now are required by statute to pay prevailing wages to contracts for their custodial services (Section 465 of Public Utilities Code, subject of AB 114). The definitions of maintenance we have include general work to maintain a piece of property.

Section 1771 provides that no less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed shall be paid to all workers employed on public works. The applicability of the section is further defined by the addition of language that prevailing wages must be paid only to work performed under contract and not to work by force account and that prevailing wages must be paid on contracts let for maintenance work.

As I noted in my memo of February 7, 1977, the statute was amended in 1974 to change "exclusive of maintenance work" to include "maintenance work". The only prior case was Franklin v. City of Riverdale, 58 C. 2d 114 (1962), in which the work of trimming of trees and clearing of brush on electric wires was held to be performing maintenance work so as to be excluded from prevailing wage rates. This case thus interpreted the term "maintenance" to mean exactly what is at issue here. As the term "maintenance" has been so defined or recognized by case law under Section 1771, it seems apparent that statutory inclusion of the term maintenance now means that regular maintenance activity is intended to be covered. This is true regardless of an attempt by Cohen to interpret maintenance as applying only to Section 1720 (a) construction, alteration, demolition or repair work. The addition of maintenance is thus interpreted to be an extension of 1720's definition of public work inartfully done by so specifying in Section 1771, which might have appeared to be the appropriate section as it originally excluded maintenance work.

As to the Pasadena case, the city's description of the job is very clear that they intend regular maintenance to be covered.

Note that landscape maintenance was deemed covered as of December 17, 1976, in Santa Clara County and the rate was $4.85 straight-time, $.44 health and welfare, $.20 pensions, $.19 vacation, $.15 holiday and $.10 training or $5.93 per hour total.

Maintenance thus is included in the requirement of prevailing wages, which, by statement in 1771, applies to the entire chapter. Cohen's first argument that prevailing wages do not include maintenance should be denied.

B. Procedure

The second point that the rate has been incorrectly determined has merit. The Labor Code Section 1773 should be interpreted by considering many factors.

1. Proper determination of prevailing wage rates once they are deemed to fall within public works.

As in the instance of the water well drillers, there is often a disparity between union wages and the nonunion rates for work which is basically nonconstruction. In these areas, as well as construction areas, I think it imperative to investigate the actual prevailing wage rate in the area. Apparently now all that is being done is one phone call to a large union in the area to see what is their agreement. There is no data or attempt to see if that rate actually prevails. We must immediately follow up Sara Behman's conclusion as to the method of research in the water well drilling instance and make a survey of collective bargaining agreements, Davis Bacon and other data from the industry including both employers and employee organizations. The staff of the Division of Labor Standards and Research has relied upon the outline, stated by Peter Weiner and affirmed by the Director, that we first look to the collective bargaining agreement, then to Davis Bacon and then to the industry data if necessary. This determination procedure should be revised to require collection of all of that data with special emphasis on finding the exact number of persons who are employed in the area. There appears to be insufficient data on hand to support the determination as to the prevailing wage rate. This procedure must be made applicable to all determinations.

2. Determination of proper classification.

The rates will vary, of course, according to the characterization of the work. The water well drilling incident exemplifies this: is it a construction, agricultural, or exploratory drilling classification? In this instance, one challenge is as to general maintenance, general gardening, or landscape gardening. The survey conducted by the division should also pinpoint in each instance the exact nature of the job and the appropriate classification chosen by Division of Labor Standards and Research.

Conclusion:

1. Determine that maintenance is covered.

2. Establish a procedure for investigating the actual coverage of collective bargaining agreements.

3. Establish a procedure for reconciling or choosing among such collective bargaining agreement rates, Davis-Bacon rates, and other data from labor and management to reach a final determination of the prevailing wage rate.

Memorandum

To : Don Vial, Director

Date : February 7, 1977

Subject: § 1720 of the Labor Code - Interpretation of "Public Works" to Require payment of Prevailing Wage Rates

From : Department of Industrial Relations

Christine C. Curtis
Counsel

ISSUES: How broadly should "public works" be interpreted, so as to invoke payment of prevailing wages on public works? Should "maintenance" activities be included?

Statutes involved: Labor Code § 1720, 1720.2, 1771

CONCLUSION: The Labor Code provisions for prevailing wages should be broadly construed to cover most activities involved with onsite construction or maintenance. Specifically, the statutes should be interpreted administratively to include, in the public works definition, maintenance activities (as specified in § 1771) and other work which arguably falls under the categories specifically outlined in § 1720 (construction, alteration, demolition, or repair work; work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improvement districts (except for operation of irrigation systems); street, sewer, or other improvement work supervised by any governmental body; and some instances of carpet laying). The aim would be to examine the nature of the work covered, rather than to be limited by an arbitrary definition of statutory language when none need be im Therefore, strong arguments could be made to include these areas under the public works definition subject to prevail wage rates (in response to list submitted to the Director' office by Leo Connolly):

1. Installation of communication equipment would be covered as an "alteration" or as still part of "construction", § 1720(a) (in fact, the category currently is so covered)

2, 3, 4. Snow, garbage and refuse removal and changing lamps would be covered as "repair" or "maintenance" under § 1720(a) or § 1771 or "street sewer or other improvemer work done under the direction and supervision" of any state public body or of any political subdivision or district, under § 1720(c).

5. Handyman would be covered under "maintenance" or und "repair", under § 1771 or § 1720(a).

6. Note that tree trimmer also now seems to be covered under "maintenance" or "repair" and the 1962 Frankli v. City of Riverside case excluding tree trimmers as "maintenance" was based on exclusion by statute and sh be overturned by the legislative inclusion of "maintena in § 1771 in 1974.

7, 8. Water well drilling and laying irrigation pipe by water agencies would be covered by § 1720(b), "work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improv ment districts, and other district (except for the operation of irrigation systems) or by "construction under § 1720(a). (A.G. Op., Jan. 7, 1960 as to floo control districts for construction of conduits, bri and buildings.)

9. Land levelling would be covered by "construction", under § 1720(a).

10. Offsite construction would not be covered.

DISCUSSION:

I. Arguments for broad interpretation of the applicability of prevailing wage rates:

A. General statement of intent of prevailing wage legislation

The courts have not stated that the legislation is to be interpreted broadly, except that the court noted, in Shalz v. Union School Dist. 58 C.A.3d 599 (1943), interpreting the penalties section for failure to pay prevailing wage rates (§ 1775):

"The purpose and intent of the act is plain and its object should not be defeated by overvice construction." (p.606)

The court noted that little had been written concerning the purpose of the California legislation. Sansone Co. v. Dept. of Transp., 55 C.A.3d 434 (1976), which extended the applicability of the prevailing wage rates to truck driver deliveries of aggregate sub-base materials. But the court noted that the purpose of the similar federal Davis-Bacon Act (40 USC § 276a et seq.) was to protect employees of contractors on public works from a substandard wage and to permit employers of union and nonunion workers to act competitively for public works bids (p.458): "Prevailing wage legislation was designed to benefit the construction worker on public construction under the California prevaili wage law, under the Davis-Bacon Act, and legislative histor of the Davis-Bacon Act" (p.461)

Note that the California Attorney General states that California' prevailing wage law is similar to the Davis-Bacon Act. 54 Ops.ATY.Gen. 34.

As a remedial labor standards act, the Davis-Bacon Act is to be liberally construed, Acting Comptroller's Decision, B-117954, April 20, 1954: the government is not bound by the definition of public works used by the contractor and the union, Comptroller General's Opinion, No. B-150318, June 6, 1963; and "public work" was defined to include any government owned permanent or temporary structure or article, Memorandum No. 95, Workplace Standards Administrator, April 30, 1971, Act applies on the basis of contract as a whole and not by item by item basis and, if work is substantially for construction, alteration or repair, then all work under it is covered, Comptroller General's Opini No. B-150905, May 24, 1963. The establishment of wage rates under the Davis-Bacon Act lists extensive compilation of information, including land clearing, power lines, sewers and excavating. 29 CFR §1.3. Liber construction of Davis-Bacon Act is intended by congressional intent, U.S. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur.Co., 480F.2d 1095 (1973); Drivers, Salesman, Warehouseman, Mills Processors, Cannery, Dairy Emp. and Helpers Local Union No. 695 v. N.L.R.B. 361 F.2d 547.

B. Legislative Classification of the Coverage of Public Works.

The public works definition of § 1720 was recently extended by amendment to § 1771 to specifically include "maintenance work contracts (Stats. 1974, C.1202, p.2593). The statute formerly provided "exclusive of maintenance work". This statutory change would thus invalidate old case law which expressly excluded "maintenance" activities from the covera of the Act, such as Franklin v. City of Riverside, 58 C.2d 114 (1962), in which tree trimmers were held to be performing maintenance work so as to be excluded from the prevaili wage rates. Note was taken of the statutory change of § 1771 in Sansone Co. v. Dept. of Transportation, 55 C.A.3d 434, 461 (2nd Dist.,Feb., 1976), as evidence of legislative consideration of the approrpiate coverage of the prevailing wage rate law.

Note also that the public works definition was extended in § 1720.2 to include some instances of contracting between parties (Stats. 1974, C.1207, p.2228, § 1)

The term maintenance is interpreted thusly by California Case law:

Maintenance covers any activity after completion of construction which preserves, holds or keeps the object the same condition or existing state, including in some in some instances salaries or costs of operations. Holman v. County of Santa Cruz, 91 CA2d 502, 519 (1949). (corresponds with general definition, except for operati given in Words and Phrases).

Note the maintenance definition by IBEW:

For the purpose of this agreement, the term "maintenance has the following meaning: "Maintenance" is the routine recurring work required to keep a facility (plant, build structure, ground facility, utility system, or any real property) in such a condition that it may be continuousl utilized, at its original or designed capacity and effi-ciency, for its intended purposes. (Note attached definit

C. Judicial interpretation of statutory language of public works

Broad interpretation of the statutory language of "demo-lition" and "alteration" in § 1720 reinforces the concep that the court will not narrowly construe the Act to the exact language used. The issue in Priest v. Housing Authority, 275 C.A.2d 751, 754 (2nd Dist.,1969) was whet clearing a lot after the buildings on it were burned constituted "demolition" so as to come under § 1720. The contractors and housing authority argued that it was "removal" rather than"demolition" and thus out of the coverage of the Act. The court held that it was not "co cerned with the meaning attached by the parties to the term 'demolition' but only with the nature of the work d The court noted that "demolition" had not been defined i the code or by court decision and held that it should no defined narrowly as "removal" to exclude this activity, to do so would place a limitation that the leislature di not impose (p.756). The same was held true for the word "alteration", which could also be applied to the work ac vity at issue in the case.

D. Further judicial interpretation of the type of work acti vity covered by the public works.

Judicial interpretation in one case has striven to exten the applicability of the prevailing wage rate, even thou a similar federal case decided under the Davis-Bacon Act had held that a similar activity was not covered. The court in Sansone Co. v. Dept. of Transportation, 55 3d 434 (2nd Dist., 1976) held that truck drivers who del ed aggreggate subbase to a construction site for imme-diate use on the highway construction were to be cov The court's rationale was that the materials were use immediately on the construction site and were functional related to the construction. Further, the court noted th the goods were not purchased from a standard commercial supplier or from the State of California, but were especially contracted for and the deliveror were subcontract Also, they were delivered from a site adjacent to and est blished exclusively to service the project site. The California court distiguished the case from one interpreting the Davis-Bacon Act (H.B. Zachry Co. v. U.S., 344 F 2d 352 (1965) as the materials used were standard commer materials not especially designed for the project and la a materialman rather than a contractor, and looked to a Wisconsin case holding that truck drivers dumping materi on the roadbed for immediate distribution were functiona related to the process of construction, and hence were subject to prevailing wage rates under Wisconsin law (Gr v. Jones, 23 Wis.2d 551) (Sansone, supra , p.444).

E. Remedy

A temporary restraining order will not be granted until parties exhaust administrative remedy for review and det mination as to prevailing wages. Hoffman v. Pedley Scho Dist., 26 Cal.Rptr.109 (4th Dist., 1963)

II. Arguments for narrow construction of prevailing wage rates:

A. Limitation of the Act

1. Off site construction is exempt (and some limitation over coverage of truckers)

2. Maintenance work was exempt until 1974 (discussed in Sansone, supra.)

3. Local entity work by force work is exempt (only public works contracts are covered)
(Bishop v. City of San Jose, 1 Cal.3d 56 (1969) in whi the court refused to extend the Act and the legislatur then amended section 1771 to reflect the court's decis The court held that prevailing wages in § 1771 can nc be applied under the home rule provisions of Article X of the California Constitution which provides that a county, city, town or township can make all regulations for itself not in conflict with general laws. If a ci claims home rule, it is exempt from general laws of th state unless the intent of the legislature was to pre-empt all such laws. The court held that the legislat did not intend to preempt the field in the area of prevailing wages, and force account work was held exe in Beckwith v. County of Stanislaus, 175.Cal.App.2d 4((1959).

The dissent by Justice Peters contended that the legislature did not intend to allow local governments to be exempt for force account work but intended to preempt the area, especially when viewe in light of Section 1720 which includes force account work and was m to include all public works regardless of their nature, and further that the Attorney General recognized that improvements by county employees would be subject to prevailing rates under 1720(c). (35 Op. Atty Gen. 1,2), (see Atty. Gen. Op., Apr. 17, 1940) -

B. Davis-Bacon Act as narrow model

1. Installation is not normally covered unless there is substantial construction, or integral part of construction. Solicitor of Labor's opinions, No. DB-B, Nov. 6, 1961 and DB 16, Nov. 30, 1961.

2. Material men are not covered.

   See Sansone, supra, p. 442-443.

3. Test is wording of the contract rather than the natur of the work. 40 Op.Comp.Gen. 565 (1961).

C. Final interpretation of the Act of the Court

1. Interpretation of the coverage of the Act is finally a matter of law.

1.5 Bond

Party appealing from labor commissioner's determination in arbitration proceeding under Artists' Managers Act was required to file bond in order to stay enforcement of award although award had not been reduced to judgment by judicial confirmation, even though this section specifying bond referred to bond in sum not exceeding twice amount of "judgment." Buchwald v. Katz (1972) 105 Cal.Rptr. 368, 503 P.2d 1376, 8 C.3d 493.

On appeal from labor commissioner's determination in arbitration proceeding under Artists' Managers Act, superior court may only require bond in order to stay award and erred in requiring bond in order to prosecute appeal and abused discretion in dismissing appeal for failure to post bond. Id.

1.6 Failure to file bond

Where party appealing from labor commissioner's determination in arbitration proceeding under Artists' Managers Act did not file bond, other party was free to enforce commissioner's money award; proper procedure is first to apply to superior court for judicial confirmation and to enforce ensuing judgment. Buchwald v. Katz (1972) 105 Cal.Rptr. 368, 503 P.2d 1376, 8 C.3d 493.

1.7 Notice of appeal

Notice of appeal from determination of labor commissioner in arbitration proceeding under Artists' Managers Act was not required to allege ground for review. Buchwald v. Katz (1972) 105 Cal.Rptr. 368, 503 P.2d 1376, 8 C.3d 493.

2. Review

Superior court on appeal from labor commissioner's determination in proceeding under Artists' Managers Act may call up pleadings or other papers or documents by which parties presented their claims and defenses before commissioner or may require parties to present such claims and defenses in more formal pleadings. Buchwald v. Katz (1972) 105 Cal.Rptr. 368, 503 P.2d 1376, 8 C.3d 493.

This section entitles appealing party to complete new trial that is in no way a review of prior proceedings, rather than to review only by writ of mandate. Id.

The suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act (40 U.S.C.A. § 276a), by the president of the United States does not suspend the operation of California's prevailing wage law (Labor C. § 1720 et seq.), on federally-assisted construction projects subject to the Davis-Bacon Act. 54 Ops.Atty.Gen. 31, 3-23-71.

§ 1720.2 Public works defined

For the limited purposes of Article 2 (commencing with Section 1770) of this chapter, "public works" also means any construction work done under private contract when all of the following conditions exist:

(a) The construction contract is between private persons.

(b) The property subject to the construction contract is privately owned, but, upon completion of the construction work, more than 50 percent of the assignable square feet of the property is leased to the state or a political subdivision for its use.

1. In general

The right to public use of a highway while road work is being done is subordinated to the right of the public authorities to make improvements in the public interest. Gibson v. State (1962) 25 Cal. Rptr. 234, 209 C.A.2d 468.

Maintenance of public highway is a "governmental activity", to which rule of sovereign immunity applies, as distinguished from a mere ministerial function. Zeppi v. State (1959) 345 P.2d 33, 174 C.A.2d 481.

Where railroad had granted easement to counties to use upper deck of bridge, agreement by which state undertook to make structural changes because of changed conditions due to increased traffic, requiring additional policing, was merely in recognition of state's statutory authority to make structural changes in interest of safety, and did not indicate be lief of parties that railroad had obligation under agreement to make any change in structure over which easement was granted. Whalen v. Hultz (1953) 259 P.2d 457, 40 C.2d 294.

City was not required to remedy dangerous portion of state highway situated within city or to post warnings of dangerous condition, and was not liable, because of failure to do so, for deaths of driver and occupants of automobile which went off highway and fell to bottom of embankment, because of alleged dangerous condition of highway. Gillespie v. City of Los Angeles (1951) 225 P.2d 522, 36 C.2d 553.

A city cannot be liable for a dangerous or defective condition of a public street or highway unless it has authority to remedy the condition. Id.

Duty to maintain highway in condition safe for travel is on municipal subdivision which holds highway open to public for travel, which duty includes not only duty to maintain surface of highway in condition reasonably safe for travel, but duty of warning traveling public of any other condition which endangers travel. Galiano v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1937) 67 P.2d 988, 20 C.A.2d 531.

Irrespective of who originally constructed bridge or culvert, and irrespective of whether the bridge or the road was first constructed, the county is liable for maintenance of the bridge or culvert once it has been accepted by the county. 26 Ops.Atty.Gen. 282, 12-13-60.

Special road maintenance district in subdivided, unincorporated territory can be formed for the sole purpose of providing street lights in such area and for payment of maintenance and operation thereof by taxation in the district when the board of supervisors determines that lights are necessary for public safety in the area. 14 Ops.Atty.Gen. 115.

RE: Request for Extension of Time
Prevailing Wage Rate, 01-TC-28
Clovis Unified School District, Claimant

Dear Ms. Higashi:

I am the attorney of record in this matter and represent the Department of Finance.

The comments to the above-named test claim are currently due on January 15, 2003. A prior extension was granted to Department of Finance in November 2002.

I hereby request for an extension of time through January 30, 2003 to file the comments for the client I represent in this matter.

The reason for the extension of time is my schedule, other assignments and the size of the claim. The Clovis prevailing wage test claim is 141 pages long and involves 28 code sections and regulations.

I have not been able to devote the necessary time to the test claim because I am currently working on objections to the proposed writ and judgment in Plastic Pipe and Fittings Association v. Building Standards Commission, et al., Los Angeles Superior Court No. BS 076413 that were due on January 13, 2003. The Attorney General represents six agencies in this matter the preparation and review of the objections and counter judgment and counter writ required a substantial amount of time.

Additionally, I have had not been able to complete the comments on the Prevailing Wage Mandate Claim because of the need to prepare for the January 15, 2003 meeting of the California

Building Standards Commission.

Therefore I request an extension of time of 15 days until January 30, 2003 to submit comments for the Department of Finance regarding this test claim.

This request is made in good faith for the reason stated here and not for the purpose of delay.

I therefore request an extension of time to file the comments in the above-named test claim until January 15, 2003.

Thank you for your attention and consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

Ramon de la Guardia

or other place where visitors might be. It was, in short, located in a place where it was relatively safe from public intrusion, or so the occupant could reasonably believe. The trash can cannot logically be distinguished from the marijuana plants.

This case does not deal with "open fields," but with the yard adjacent to a private residence. (Compare Hester v. United States (1924) 265 U.S. 57, 44 S.Ct. 445, 68 L.Ed. 898.) The resident cannot reasonably expect privacy in those portions of the yard open to the public, or if not to the public, at least to a substantial number of people. (Compare People v. Terry, supra, 71 A.C. 101, 77 Cal.Rptr. 460, 454 P.2d 36, permitting a search in the common garage of a large apartment building.) Nor can he expect privacy for things in plain sight from such public areas. (People v. Terry, supra, 71 A.C. 101, 77 Cal.Rptr. 460, 454 P.2d 36; People v. Willard, supra, 238 Cal.App.2d 292, 47 Cal.Rptr. 734.) But he can reasonably, and probably does, expect privacy for the remainder of the property. No evidence in this case shows that the marijuana plants could be seen until the officer left the area open to the public and approached to a point approximately one foot from the plants. Consequently, the evidence must be excluded.

[56] Charles BISHOP, Plaintiff and Appellant,
v.
CITY OF SAN JOSE et al., Defendants and Respondents.

S. F. 22677.

Supreme Court of California,
In Bank.

Oct. 30, 1969.

Rehearing Denied Nov. 26, 1969.

Action wherein plaintiff, who filed suit as a resident and taxpayer of defendant city, as business agent of labor union local, and as assignee of certain union members employed by the city as electricians, alleged, inter alia, that the city had failed to pay its electricians the prevailing rate of per diem wages for their craft, pursuant to the prevailing wage law. The Santa Clara County Superior Court, O. Vincent Bruno, J., entered judgment against plaintiff, and he appealed. The Supreme Court, Burke, J., held that the setting and payment of salaries for the city's own year-round, full-time, civil service employees were purely municipal affairs to which the prevailing wage law as set forth in the Labor Code was inapplicable.

Judgment affirmed.

Peters, Mosk and Sims, JJ., dissented.

Opinion, Cal.App., 76 Cal.Rptr. 308, vacated.

1. Municipal Corporations ⇐79

As to matters which are of statewide concern, home rule charter cities remain subject to and controlled by applicable general state laws regardless of the provisions of their charters, if it is the intent and purpose of such general laws to occupy the field to the exclusion of municipal regulation. West's Ann.Const. art. 11, §§ 6, 8, 8(j), 11; West's Ann.Labor Code, §§ 1770 et seq., 1771 et seq.; St.1957, p. 4344; St.1965, p. 5122.

2. Municipal Corporations ⇐57, 64, 78, 79

Local governments, whether chartered or not, do not lack the power, nor are they constitutionally forbidden, to legislate on matters not of a local nature, nor is the legislature forbidden to legislate with respect to local municipal affairs of a home rule municipality; rather, in the event of conflict between state and local regulations, or if state legislation discloses an intent to preempt field, the question becomes one of predominance or superiority as between general state laws and local regulations. West's Ann.Const. art. 11, §§ 6, 8, 8(j), 11; West's Ann.Labor Code, §§ 1770 et seq., 1771 et seq.; St.1957, p. 4344; St.1965, p. 5122.

3. Counties ⇐21½
Municipal Corporations ⇐592(1)

In exercising judicial function of deciding whether matter is a municipal affair or of statewide concern, courts will give great weight to legislative purpose in enacting general laws which disclose intent to preempt field to exclusion of local regulation; however, mere fact that legislature has attempted to deal with particular subject on statewide basis is not determinative, nor does it impair the constitutional authority of a home rule city or county to enact and enforce its own regulations to the exclusion of general laws should the subject be held by courts to be a municipal affair; disapproving In re Hubbard (1964) 62 Cal.2d 119, 127–128, 41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 809, and City of Redwood City v. Moore (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 563, 580–581, 42 Cal.Rptr. 72.

4. Labor Relations ⇐1130

Setting and payment of salaries for city's own year-round, full-time, civil service employees were purely municipal affairs to which the prevailing wage law as set forth in the Labor Code was inapplicable. West's Ann.Const. art. 11, §§ 6, 8, 8(j), 11; West's Ann.Labor Code, §§ 1770 et seq., 1771 et seq.,; St.1957, p. 4344; St.1965, p. 5122.

5. Labor Relations ⇐1129

Labor Code section providing that "Not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed * * * shall be paid to all workmen employed in public works exclusive of maintenance work" applies only to work performed under contract, and is not applicable to work carried out by a public agency with its own forces. West's Ann.Labor Code, § 1771.

6. Statutes ⇐212.1

Statutes are to be interpreted by assuming that the Legislature was aware of the existing judicial decisions.

7. Statutes ⇐220

Failure to make changes in a given statute in a particular respect when the subject is before the legislature, and changes are made in other respects, is indicative of an intention to leave the law unchanged in that respect.

8. Injunction ⇐22

An injunction would not be issued enjoining defendant city from failing to seek competitive bids for improvement and construction projects involving an expenditure in excess of $2,500, in view of evidence that the city had instituted and was following workable and effective procedures to guard against any violations of its charter requirements with respect to the necessity of competitive bids for projects involving expenditures exceeding $2,500, and in view of evidence that the city intended in good faith to comply with such charter requirements.

[1]BURKE, Justice. [1]59

Plaintiff appeals from a judgment declaring the prevailing wage provisions found in certain sections of the Labor

Code to be inapplicable to the employees of defendant city, and denying relief sought by way of injunction and damages.[1] As hereinafter appears, we have concluded that the trial court ruled correctly with respect to the prevailing wage law, that no other ground for reversal has been shown, and that the judgment should be affirmed.

[60] Plaintiff contends that from 1958 to 1966 defendant city unlawfully failed to pay its electricians the prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character, pursuant to the prevailing wage law (Lab. Code, § 1770 et seq.), and also failed to seek competitive bids for certain improvement and construction projects, pursuant to provisions of the city charter.

The city is a freeholders' charter city organized under the Constitution and laws of this state. Until May 1965 the city operated under its 1915 charter, as amended, and since 1965 it has operated under its 1965 charter, as amended. Both charters contain "home rule" provisions (Cal.Const., art. XI, §§ 6, 8, subd. (j)), and provisions requiring that all public buildings and works costing more than a specified amount shall be done by contract and let to the lowest responsible bidder.[2] Neither charter contains any provisions relating to prevailing wages; however, the city council periodically enacts prevailing wage ordinances.

Plaintiff's assignors are among some 17 electricians employed by the city who work under the city electrician and have performed additions, modification, [61] maintenance and repair of city electrical facilities, buildings and equipment, including street lights, traffic signals, fire alarm boxes

1. Plaintiff instituted this action as a resident and taxpayer of defendant city, as the business agent of a labor union local, and as the assignee of certain union members employed by the city as electricians.

2. 1915 charter, section 89: "All public buildings and works, when the expenditure therefor shall exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000.00), shall be done by contract and shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder, after advertising * * *." (Stats.1957, p. 4344.)

1965 charter, section 1217: "Except as hereinafter otherwise provided, each purchase of supplies and materials the expenditure for which exceeds One Thousand Dollars ($1,000), each purchase of equipment and expenditure for which exceeds Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000) and each specific 'public works project,' hereinafter defined, the expenditure for which (excluding the cost of any materials which the City may have already lawfully acquired therefor) exceeds the amount which a general law City of the State of California may legally expend for a public project (as defined by State law) without a contract let to a lowest responsible bidder after notice, shall be contracted for and let to the lowest responsible bidder after notice; provided, however, that in no event shall the above apply to any specific 'public works project' the expenditure for which (excluding the cost of any materials which the City may have already lawfully acquired therefor) does not exceed Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($2,500).

"For purposes of this Section, 'public works project' shall be deemed to mean and is hereby defined as a project for the construction, erection, improvement or demolition of any public building, street, bridge, drain, ditch, canal, dam, tunnel, sewer, water system, fire alarm system, electrical traffic control system, street lighting system, parking lot, park or playground; provided and excepting that 'public works project' shall not be deemed to mean or include the maintenance of any of said things, or any repairs incidental to such maintenance, * * *. Also, the provisions of this Section shall not apply to any of the following: * * * (b) the purchase of any supplies, materials or equipment which can be obtained from only one vendor or manufacturer; * * * (f) work involving highly technical or professional skill where the peculiar technical or professional skill or ability of the person selected to do such work is an important factor in his selection; (g) expenditures deemed by the Council to be of urgent necessity for the preservation of life, health or property, provided the same are authorized by resolution of the Council adopted by the affirmative vote of at least five (5) members of the Council and containing a declaration of the facts constituting the urgency; and (h) situations where solicitation of bids would for any reason be an idle act." (Stats.1965, pp. 5122, 5159.)

and systems, etc. The electricians are civil service employees of the city, and since 1958 have been paid monthly salaries on a year-round, full-time basis,[3] plus extra pay for overtime and holiday work, and plus various other benefits such as holidays, vacation and sick leave, health insurance and retirement benefits. In 1963 the work of the city electricians was approximately 40 percent new construction, but at the time of trial (1965–1966) the workload was only some 16 percent construction with maintenance taking up the other 84 percent.

Plaintiff's complaint focuses on four kinds of work[4] done by the city electricians between 1958 and 1966, assertedly in violation of the prevailing wage law and of the respective $1,000 and $2,500 project limits of the 1915 and the 1965 city charters. (Fn. 2, ante.) The trial court ruled, among other things, that both the four kinds of work and the setting and payment of salaries for the city's own year-round, full-time, civil service employees are purely municipal affairs to which, under the home rule provisions of article XI of the California Constitution, the prevailing wage provisions of Labor Code sections 1771 et seq., relied upon by plaintiff, cannot be applied; that in any event the prevailing wage law does not as a matter of statutory construction apply to the setting of such salaries. The court also found that the city at all times acted in the good faith belief that the prevailing wage provisions do not apply to the salaries paid to its own employees.

At all times since adoption of the Constitution in 1879, section 11 of article XI has specified that "Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws." (Italics added.) In 1896 section 6 of article XI was amended to provide a limited amount of autonomy for freeholders' charter cities, and in 1914 sections 6 and 8 of article XI were amended to permit such cities, by appropriate charter amendments, to acquire autonomy with respect to all municipal affairs. A city which adopted such "home rule" amendments thereby gained exemption, with respect to its municipal affairs, from the "conflict with general laws" restrictions of section 11 of article XI.

[1] As to matters which are of statewide concern, however, home rule charter cities remain subject to and controlled by applicable general state laws regardless of the provisions of their charters, if it is the intent and purpose of such general laws to occupy the field to the exclusion of municipal regulation (the preemption doctrine). (Pac. Tel. & Tel. Co. v. City & County of San Francisco (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 766, 768–769, 336 P.2d 514; Pipoly v. Benson (1942) 20 Cal.2d 366, 369–370, 125 P.2d 482, 147 A.L.R. 515.) 162

[2] As is made clear in the leading case of Pipoly v. Benson, supra, local governments (whether chartered or not) do not lack the power, nor are they forbidden by the Constitution, to legislate upon matters which are not of a local nature, nor is the Legislature forbidden to legislate with respect to the local municipal affairs of a home rule municipality. Instead, in the event of conflict between the regulations of state and of local governments, or if the state legislation discloses an intent to preempt the field to the exclusion of local regulation, the question becomes one of predominance or superiority as between general state laws on the one hand and the local regulations on the other. (See also e. g. Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 A.C. 905, 910–920, 76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930; Abbott v. City of Los Angeles (1960) 53 Cal.2d 674, 681–684, 3 Cal.Rptr.

3. The pre-1958 earnings of the electricians are not in issue here, but were apparently based on a union scale.

4. The four kinds of work: (1) fire alarm system; (2) overhead traffic signals; (3) IBM project; (4) miscellaneous electrical work at the municipal airport, in a park, and inside the city hall.

158, 349 P.2d 974, 82 A.L.R.2d 385;[5] Chavez v. Sargent (1959) 52 Cal.2d 162, 176–177, 339 P.2d 801; Agnew v. City of Los Angeles (1958) 51 Cal.2d 1, 5, 330 P.2d 385; Wilson v. Beville (1957) 47 Cal.2d 852, 856–861, 306 P.2d 789; Eastlick v. City of Los Angeles (1947) 29 Cal.2d 661, 665–666, 177 P.2d 558, 170 A.L.R. 225; Southern California Roads Co. v. McGuire (1934) 2 Cal.2d 115, 123, 39 P.2d 412.)

If resolution of that question requires a determination as to whether the matter regulated is a state or a municipal affair, then, as declared in Professional Fire Fighters, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1963) 60 Cal.2d 276, 294, 32 Cal.Rptr. 830, 841, 384 P.2d 158, 169, "Because the various sections of article XI fail to define municipal affairs, it becomes necessary for the courts to decide, under the facts of each case, whether the subject matter under discussion is of municipal or statewide concern." In other words, "No exact definition of the term 'municipal affairs' can be formulated, and the courts have made no attempt to do so, but instead have indicated that judicial interpretation is necessary to give it meaning in each controverted case. The comprehensive nature of the power is, however, conceded in all the decisions, * *." (Butterworth v. Boyd (1938) 12 Cal.2d 140, 147, 82 P.2d 434, 438, 126 A.L.R. 838; see also City of Pasadena v. Charleville (1932) 215 Cal. 384, 392, 10 P.2d 745 [5].)

163 Further, the "constitutional concept of municipal affairs * * * changes with the changing conditions upon which it is to operate. What may at one time have been a matter of local concern may at a later time become a matter of state concern controlled by the general laws of the state. [Citations.]" Pac. Tel. & Tel. Co. v. City & County of San Francisco, supra, 51 Cal.2d 766, 771, 775–776, 336 P.2d 514, 517; Butterworth v. Boyd, supra.

[3] In exercising the judicial function of deciding whether a matter is a municipal affair or of statewide concern, the courts will of course give great weight to the purpose of the Legislature in enacting general laws which disclose an intent to preempt the field to the exclusion of local regulation (see Ex parte Daniels (1920) 183 Cal. 636, 639–640, 192 P. 442, 21 A.L.R. 1172), and it may well occur that in some cases the factors which influenced the Legislature to adopt the general laws may likewise lead the courts to the conclusion that the matter is of statewide rather than merely local concern. However, the fact, standing alone, that the Legislature has attempted to deal with a particular subject on a statewide basis is not determinative of the issue as between state and municipal affairs, nor does it impair the constitutional authority of a home rule city or county to enact and enforce its own regulations to the exclusion of general laws if the subject is held by the courts to be a municipal affair rather than of statewide concern; stated otherwise, the Legislature is empowered neither to determine what constitutes a municipal affair nor to change such an affair into a matter of statewide concern.[6]

5. That the statement appearing in Abbott (p. 681 [5] of 53 Cal.2d, p. 163 of 3 Cal.Rptr., p. 979 of 349 P.2d) that "A city has no power to legislate upon matters which are not of a local nature" was improvident is made clear by the later opinion of the same author, in Galvan v. Superior Court, supra, 70 A.C. 905, 910–920, 76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930. (Italics added.)

6. Any statements to the contrary found in In re Hubbard (1964) 62 Cal.2d 119, 127–128, 41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 809, were not only unnecessary to the decision there but are overruled if they be deemed authoritative. In City of Redwood City v. Moore (1965) 231 Cal.App.2d 563, 580–581, 42 Cal.Rptr. 72, the court was misled into contrary statements by overemphasis on the comment in Professional Fire Fighters, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles, supra, 60 Cal.2d 276, 294, 32 Cal.Rptr. 830, 841, 384 P.2d 158, 169, that the question as to whether a matter is of municipal or statewide concern "must be determined [by the courts] from the legislative purpose in each individual instance." As we have noted, the courts will give great weight to the legislative purpose and may be influenced by the

[4] In the present case it clearly appears from the provisions of the prevailing wage law here involved that the Legislature did not intend that that law apply to the setting of the salaries of employees of a city, whether chartered or not.

[5] Section 1771 of the Labor Code,[7] relied upon by plaintiff, is found in chapter 1 of part 7.[8] Part 7 is entitled "Public 164 Works and Public Agencies." Chapter 1 deals with "Public Works" and commences with section 1720. Section 1720 defines public works[9] as used in chapter 1, and section 1724 defines the expression "Locality in which public work is performed."[10] Inasmuch as section 1771 directs that the wage to be paid is that prevailing in the "locality in which the public work is performed," and section 1724 states that that expression encompasses only situations in which a contract to do public work has been awarded, it becomes at once apparent that section 1771 is by its own terms applicable only to work performed under contract, and is not applicable to work carried out by a public agency with its own forces.

Plaintiff also points to the clause in section 1773 directing that the "body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, * * *." shall ascertain the prevailing wage rate.[11] (Plaintiff's emphasis.) Again, however, as is clear from the entire provision, from which plaintiff has extracted a portion out of context, the direction to ascertain the prevailing wage not only is tied to the "locality" definition (see fn. 10, ante) and thus to the area in which the contracted work is to be performed, but the direction of section 1773 is that after such wage has been ascertained it shall be specified in the call for bids for the contract and in the contract. Accordingly, nothing found in section 1773 lends a scintilla of support to plaintiff's contention that the prevailing wage law was intended by the Legislature to apply to other than public work let out to contract. No useful purpose would be served by here undertaking to detail other sections of the prevailing wage law as set forth in chapter 1 of part 7 of the Labor Code, but it is appropriate to note that the entire tenor thereof discloses a legislative purpose to deal only with contracted public work, and not with work done by a municipality by force account. (See, e. g., §§ 1773.3, 1773.4, 1774, 1775, 1776.)

[6, 7] Additionally, the court so construed the law in Beckwith v. County of Stanislaus (1959) 175 Cal.App.2d 40, 48, 345 P.2d 363, 369, with the declaration that same factors as was the Legislature; but the view expressed in Moore, supra, that the Legislature has "the power to change a municipal affair into a matter of statewide concern," is disapproved.

7. Section 1771, in pertinent part: "Not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, * * * shall be paid to all workmen employed on public works exclusive of maintenance work." (Italics added.)

8. Subsequent section references herein are to the Labor Code, unless otherwise stated.

9. For purposes of this opinion it may be assumed, without deciding, that the four kinds of work on which plaintiff's complaint focuses (see fn. 4, ante) fall within the section 1720 definition of public works.

10. Section 1724: " 'Locality in which public work is performed' means the county in which the public work is done in cases in which the contract is awarded by the State, and means the limits of the political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is awarded in other cases." (Italics added.)

It is also noted that as used in chapter 1, "Political subdivision" is defined by section 1721 to include "any" city.

11. The full sentence of section 1773 from which plaintiff has quoted reads in pertinent part: "The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed * * * and shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, * * * and in the contract itself, what the general prevailing rate of * * * wages * * * in the locality is * * *." (Italics added.)

"The prevailing wage and competitive bidding statutes have no application to work undertaken by force account or day labor." Since Beckwith the statute has remained unchanged in any aspect material here, although amended in other respects.[12] "Statutes are to be interpreted by assuming that the Legislature was aware of the existing judicial decisions. [Citation.] Moreover, failure to make changes in a given statute in a particular respect when the subject is before the Legislature, and changes are made in other respects, is indicative of an intention to leave the law unchanged in that respect." (Williams v. Industrial Acc. Commission (1966) 64 Cal.2d 618, 620, 51 Cal.Rptr. 277, 278, 414 P.2d 405, 406, and cases there cited; Alter v. Michael (1966) 64 Cal.2d 480, 482, 50 Cal.Rptr. 553, 413 P.2d 153; Kusior v. Silver (1960) 54 Cal.2d 603, 618, 7 Cal.Rptr. 129, 354 P.2d 657.)

[8] With respect to the project limitations of $1,000 and $2,500 specified, respectively, in the 1915 and 1965 charters (fn. 2, ante), the trial court found and concluded, among other things, that the city has instituted and is following workable and effective procedures to guard against any violations of the requirements of section 1217 of the 1965 charter and intends in good faith to comply with such requirements. Plaintiff has thus shown no impropriety in the denial by the trial court of injunctive relief.

Other than plaintiff's claim that his assignors as city employees would have received higher earnings under the prevailing wage law, which we hold did not apply, plaintiff does not suggest that he made any showing which would controvert the trial court's ruling that neither plaintiff, his assignors, his union, nor members of his union have suffered any loss or damage by reason of the work done by the city's own employees. Accordingly, it is unnecessary in this opinion to attempt to weigh the four kinds of work as against the charter project limitations. Ample preventive remedies are available to taxpayers and citizens in the event of any attempt or threat to violate the public bidding requirements of the charter. We in no way condone any past evasion of those provisions, as public bidding serves many sound governmental purposes. However, in our view plaintiff's requested remedy by way of award for the benefit of his assignors is neither a proper remedy after the event nor a desirable preventive measure, and would fail to reach the real issue of possible violations of the charter.

The judgment is affirmed.

TRAYNOR, C. J., McCOMB, J., and DRAPER, J. pro tem.*, concur.

PETERS, Justice (dissenting).

I disagree with the majority in three fundamental respects: (1) as to the effect to be given to the "home rule" provisions of article XI of the California Constitution; (2) as to the proper construction of section 1720 et seq. of the Labor Code; and (3) as to the effect to be given to the violations of the city's own charter.

I

I cannot agree with the statements in the majority opinion that a city which adopted "home rule" amendments to its charter pursuant to sections 6 and 8 of article XI of the California Constitution "thereby gained exemption, with respect to its municipal affairs, from the 'conflict with general laws' restrictions of section 11 of article XI," that "in the event of conflict between the regulations of state and of local governments, or if the state legislation discloses an intent to preempt the field to the exclusion of local regulation, the question becomes one of predominance or superiority as between general state laws on the one hand and the local regulations on the other," and that in "[e]xercising the judicial function of deciding whether a matter is a municipal affair or of statewide concern, the courts will of course give great weight to the purpose of the Legislature in enacting general laws which disclose an intent to preempt the field to the exclusion of local regulation (see Ex parte Daniels (1920) 183 Cal. 636, 639–640, 192 P. 442, 21 A.L.R. 1172), and it may well occur that in some cases the factors which influenced the Legislature to adopt the general laws may likewise lead the courts to the conclusion that the matter is of statewide rather than merely local concern. However, the fact, standing alone, that the Legislature has attempted to deal with a particular subject on a statewide basis is not determinative of the issue as between state and municipal affairs, nor does it impair the constitutional authority of a home rule city or county to enact and enforce its own regulations to the exclusion of general laws if the subject is held by the courts to be a municipal affair rather than of statewide concern; stated otherwise, the Legislature is empowered neither to determine what constitutes a municipal affair nor to change such an affair into a matter of statewide concern." (pp. 468–469; footnote omitted.)

I cannot agree that in cases where there is a conflict between local and state law or where there is a legislative intent to preempt the field, the problem is whether the subject matter is a municipal rather than state concern. The proper rule is that set forth in Professional Fire Fighters, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles, 60 Cal.2d 276, 292, 32 Cal.Rptr. 830, 840, 384 P.2d 158, 168, "general law prevails over local enactments of a chartered city, even in regard to matters which would otherwise be deemed to be strictly municipal affairs, where the subject matter of the general law is of statewide concern." In other words, in cases of conflict and preemption, the inquiry ends once a statewide concern is found, and there is no need to weigh the state and municipal concerns or to determine which should predominate.

We applied the principle in Professional Fire Fighters where we recognized that the statutory provisions permitting unionization of firemen "may impinge" upon local control but held that since the statutory provisions were part of a scheme of legislation to create uniform fair labor practices throughout the state they were a matter of state concern. (60 Cal.2d at pp. 294–295, 32 Cal.Rptr. 830, 384 P.2d 158.) Twenty-two cases were cited in the Professional Fire Fighters opinion "all dealing with various phases of municipal affairs held to be subject to general laws on the basis of statewide concern." (60 Cal.2d at pp. 293–294, 32 Cal.Rptr. at p. 841, 384 P.2d at p. 169.)

The majority has impliedly overruled Professional Fire Fighters and these twenty-two cases. There is no justification for this grave departure from existing law. The rigid approach suggested by the majority, that matters are either a municipal affair or of state concern, ignores the basic realities of most situations. Logically, there are four categories. First is the situation where there are solely state concerns, and the subject matters of the municipal regulation and the state statute do not affect municipal affairs. Second is the situation where the subject matter of the municipal regulation and the state statute is a matter which involves both municipal and statewide concerns. Third is the situation where although the subject matter is one ordinarily subject to municipal regulations, such as relations with municipal employees, parts of the subject may also involve matters of statewide concern. Fourth is the situation where the subject matter solely involves municipal affairs and no matters of statewide concern are involved.

The first situation is reflected by Wilson v. Beville, 47 Cal.2d 852, 856–857, 306 P.2d 789, where this court held that claim requirements for the taking of property by eminent domain is not a municipal affair but is a matter of statewide concern that may be regulated only by the Legislature. (See In re Hubbard, 62 Cal.2d 119, 127, 41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 809.) The court held invalid a city charter claim-filing provision insofar as it applied to actions in inverse condemnation.[1]

The second situation is reflected by In re Hubbard, supra, 62 Cal.2d 119, 127–128, 41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 809, where we recognized that the regulation of gambling is a matter of both local and statewide concern. We there held that in the absence of conflict with general law "chartered counties and cities have full power to legislate in regard to municipal affairs unless: (1) the subject matter has been so fully and completely covered by general law 168 as to clearly indicate that it has become exclusively a matter of state concern; (2) the subject matter has been partially covered by general law couched in such terms as to indicate clearly that a paramount state concern will not tolerate further or additional local action; or (3) the subject matter has been partially covered by general law, and the subject is of such a nature that the adverse effect of a local ordinance on the transient citizens of the state outweighs the possible benefit to the municipality." (62 Cal.2d at p. 128, 41 Cal. Rptr. at p. 398–399, 396 P.2d at p. 814–815.) It should be pointed out that each of the three categories mentioned in the case is dependent upon a statewide concern, which because of legislative action or the subject matter, takes precedence over municipal affairs.

The third situation is reflected by Professional Fire Fighters, where the general subject in issue is a municipal affair but there are also matters of statewide concern. There it was recognized that the relations of a municipality with its employees in general is a matter of municipal concern but that the creation of uniform fair labor practices throughout the state is a matter of state concern and that regulations of a chartered city in conflict with statutes governing labor relations of firemen were invalid. (60 Cal.2d at p. 289, 32 Cal.Rptr. 830, 384 P.2d 158 et seq.)

The fourth situation, where the subject is solely municipal affairs so that enactments of the Legislature will be held invalid as applied to chartered cities and counties, is difficult to illustrate. The only case of this court cited by the majority, and the most recent one that I have found where it was held that legislation could not be validly held applicable to a chartered city or county is City of Pasadena v. Charleville (1932) 215 Cal. 384, 10 P.2d 745, and, as will appear hereinafter, that case should be disapproved. Furthermore, the two most recent cases discussing the problem of conflict between local and state law contain language indicating that the state law must always prevail. (Galvan v. Superior Court, 70 A.C. 905, 910, 76 Cal. Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930; Bellus v. City of Eureka, 69 Cal.2d 336, 346, 71 Cal.Rptr. 135, 444 P.2d 711; see also Nat. Milk, etc., Assn. v. City, etc., of San Francisco, 20 Cal.2d 101, 110, 124 P.2d 25.)

I must confess that I find it somewhat incongruous that a chartered city may authorized conduct the state has prohibited, prohibit conduct that the state has authorized, engage in activities that the state has prohibited or refuse to comply with state law where the Legislature has clearly declared its intent that its statutes are to be applicable in and to the chartered city. Nevertheless, cases have continued to state that as to solely municipal affairs, ordinances of chartered cities will take precedence over conflicting statutes. (E.g., Professional Fire Fighters, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles, supra, 60 Cal.2d 276, 291, 32 Cal. Rptr. 830, 384 P.2d 158; Pipoly v. Benson, 20 Cal.2d 366, 369, 125 P.2d 482, 147 A.L.R. 515.)

1. The majority does not disapprove Wilson, although it does disapprove a statement in Abbott v. City of Los Angeles, 53 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 3 Cal.Rptr. 158, 163, 349 P. 2d 974, 979, 82 A.L.R.2d 385, that a "city has no power to legislate upon matters which are not of a local nature." (Ditto Opn., p. 469, fn. 5.) The next succeeding sentence of the Abbott opinion, which deals with matters which are a "mixed concern" of both municipalities and the state, makes it clear that the disapproved statement is concerned with matters solely of statewide concern. In my view, we should adhere to the statements of Abbott and Hubbard, and the holding of Wilson.

If it be assumed that there are some [69] matters so local in nature that the Legislature's power to regulate will be limited to nonchartered cities and counties, it is apparent that such matters must be very rare. Equally rare are cases coming within the first situation where there are no local concerns so that even in the absence of state regulation chartered cities and counties may not act.

Most if not all matters upon which the state or chartered cities and counties legislate fall within the second and third categories where in the absence of conflicting state statutes or state occupation of the field chartered cities and counties may properly act. When the Legislature adopts a conflicting statute or occupies the field in such a case, the ordinance or the local regulation becomes invalid. This is the basis of Professional Fire Fighters, where we held that although ordinarily labor relations of municipal employees are a matter of local concern, uniform fair labor practices are a matter of state concern, and when the Legislature adopted a statute establishing uniform fair labor practices, a matter involving statewide concerns, the statute was controlling against conflicting municipal law. In other words, in the overwhelming majority of situations, if not all situations, as stated by Justice Molinari in City of Redwood City v. Moore, 231 Cal. App.2d 563, 580–581, 42 Cal.Rptr. 72, 84, "the Legislature does have the power to change a municipal affair into a matter of statewide concern, and thus impinge upon local control, where it is the legislative purpose to deal with the particular subject matter under discussion on a statewide basis." Accordingly, I cannot agree with the majority that this language should be disapproved.

For the same reason I cannot agree with the majority's disapproval of In re Hubbard, supra, 62 Cal.2d 119, 127–128, 41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 809. Moreover, in disapproving Hubbard, the majority fails to deal with the specific problem dealt with there and leaves the law in an uncertain state as to an important problem which often arises in law enforcement. Hubbard held that the Long Beach ordinance prohibiting gambling was valid "except insofar as the ordinance may be applied to the 12 games and one class of activity prohibited by Penal Code section 330." (62 Cal.2d at p. 128, 41 Cal.Rptr. at p. 399, 396 P.2d at p. 815.) Under Hubbard violations of the Penal Code section are prosecuted under state law, and other gambling infractions under the ordinance. In overruling Hubbard the majority does not tell us whether gambling is now to be considered a matter "predominately" of local or statewide concern. I do not understand the majority to repudiate the long-standing rule that where both state and local law prohibit the same conduct, there is a conflict and only one is valid (e.g., In re Sic, 73 Cal. 142, 146–149, 14 P. 405; Ex parte Daniels, supra, 183 Cal. 636, 645, 192 P. 442, 21 A.L.R. 1172; Abbott v. City of Los Angeles, supra, 53 Cal.2d 674, 683, 3 Cal.Rptr. 158, 349 P.2d 974, 82 A.L.R.2d 385), and prosecutors and judges will be required to guess whether conduct prohibited by both state and local gambling laws should be prosecuted under the state or the local law.

Rather than weigh whether local or state- [70] wide concerns should predominate, I would adhere to the rule of Professional Fire Fighters, that even in regard to matters which would otherwise be deemed to be strictly municipal affairs, general law prevails where the subject matter of the general law is of statewide concern. The prevailing wage law clearly reflects statewide concerns. The statutes before us deal with labor relations of persons employed on public works projects and the minimum wages to be paid them. Professional Fire Fighters, as we have seen, establishes that the subject of uniform fair labor practices is a proper subject of statewide concern, and it seems clear that minimum wages for employees is also such a matter. Although municipal employment is obviously a matter of local concern, the Legislature, in view of the statewide concerns, may properly adopt and make applicable to chartered cities and counties the statutes before us.

City of Pasadena v. Charleville, supra, 215 Cal. 384, 388–393, 10 P.2d 745, which dealt with the predecessors of the statutes before us, held that the state could not properly require a chartered city to provide for prevailing wages in its call for bids for a contract for a municipal improvement. The court suggested that general minimum wage laws applicable to public and private employees might be unconstitutional under Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 43 S.Ct. 394, 67 L.Ed. 785. The Adkins case has long been repudiated, and it is now recognized that minimum wages are a proper subject of state concern. (West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish (1937) 300 U.S. 379, 57 S.Ct. 578, 81 L.Ed. 703.) City of Pasadena v. Charleville, supra, should also be overruled.

II

In concluding that the prevailing wage law as set in chapter I of part 7 of division 2 of the Labor Code deals only with contracted public work and not with work done by force account, the majority largely ignores the first section of the chapter which makes clear that the prevailing wage law is not limited to contracted work but applies also to certain work done by force account. That section, 1720, provides:

"As used in this chapter 'public works' means: (a) Construction, alteration, demolition or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, * * *.

"(b) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. 'Public work' shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, * * *.

"(c) Street, sewer or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the State, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether such political subdivision or district 171 operates under a freeholder's charter or not."

It seems clear that improvement work let by contract would come under subdivision (a) of the section and that unless subdivision (c) is read to include within the definition of "public works" improvement work done by force account, subdivision (c) is meaningless. In addition subdivision (c) expressly provides that it applies to chartered cities and counties.

Section 1771 of the Labor Code requires the payment of the prevailing rate of wages to "all workmen employed on public works exclusive of maintenance work." Section 1771 provides: "Not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed as provided in this chapter, shall be paid to all workmen employed on public works exclusive of maintenance work." (Italics added.) It seems clear to me that the scope of the prevailing wage law is set forth by the italicized matter and the definition of "public works" set forth in the first section of the chapter.

Likewise, section 1773 provides that the "body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed * * *." (Italics added.) The italicized words show that the prevailing wage law is not limited to situations where contracts are awarded.

The majority rely upon the phrase "locality in which public work is performed" appearing in sections 1771 and 1773 and defined in section 1724 as showing that the prevailing wage law is only applicable where contracts are let. Although it is true that section 1724 in defining the quoted term speaks of contracts, this, at most, can only create a conflict within the literal language of sections 1771 and 1773, and it is clear to me that the term "public works" is used in those sections to show the scope of the application of the prevailing wage law whereas the phrase relied upon by the majority is not intended to limit the scope of the law but only to establish the method of computation. In determining the legislative intent as to the scope of the statute, we should look at the language used by the Legislature in the statute to define the scope of the applicability of the prevailing wage law rather than a phrase which merely relates to the computation of the prevailing wage. When this is done, the definition of "public works" as set forth in the first section of the chapter requires the conclusion that the prevailing wage law applies to all workmen employed on public works exclusive of maintenance work whether or not the public works have been let by contract.

The majority also rely on the rule of 172 statutory construction that statutes are to be interpreted by assuming that the Legislature was aware of existing judicial decisions and that the failure to make changes in a statute in a particular respect, although making changes in other respects, is indicative of an intention to leave the law unchanged in that respect. This rule of construction in a proper case is entitled to great weight, but in the circumstances of this case it is entitled to little or no weight. The only judicial construction of the statutes is a statement made without citation of authority in Beckwith v. County of Stanislaus, 175 Cal.App.2d 40, 48, 345 P.2d 363, that the prevailing wage and competitive bidding statutes have no application to work undertaken by force account or day labor. The prevailing wage law was not directly involved in the case, and not only is there no citation to any authority for the statement but, more importantly, the opinion does not cite the prevailing wage statute or any section of the Labor Code. The headnotes of the official report of the case and of the West Publishing Company report (345 P.2d 363–364) make no mention whatsoever of the statement relied upon by the majority. The rule of construction relied upon by the majority is premised on the theory that the Legislature is aware of the judicial construction of the statute, and in the circumstances there is little reason to believe that the Legislature, when it was considering amending the statute in other respects, became aware of the statement in Beckwith.

In any event, any weight which the rule of construction relied upon by the majority might be entitled to in the present case is clearly counterbalanced because the Attorney General in two opinions reached a contrary construction of the prevailing wage law. In 1944 he expressly pointed out that construction of improvements by day labor was controlled by section 1771 of the Labor Code. (3 Ops.Cal.Atty.Gen. 399, 401.) In 1960, he pointed out that improvements by county employees, in accordance with the views expressed above, would not come under subdivision (a) of section 1720 which related solely to contracted work but would come under subdivision (c) of the section and that the prevailing wage law was applicable to such improvements. (35 Ops.Cal.Atty.Gen. 1, 2.) Unlike the opinion of the Court of Appeal relied upon by the majority, the opinions of the Attorney General both cited and analyzed the relevant code sections, and, if any weight is to be placed upon legislative inaction, it seems more reasonable to assume that the Legislature in refusing to act was more likely aware of the Attorney General's opinion than of the Court of Appeal opinion.

III

Finally, even if we assume that the prevailing wage law (Lab.Code, § 1720 et seq.), is applicable ordinarily only to contracts for improvements and is not ordinarily applicable to work done by force account, it nevertheless appears that plaintiff is entitled to recover in this action. Had the city complied with its own charter, it would, under the undisputed facts, have been required to let a substantial portion of the work by contract, and the persons who performed that work, plaintiff's assignors, would have been entitled to payment of, at least, the prevailing wage. The city should not be permitted to profit from its own wrong in violating its charter, and the workingmen who worked on the improvements should not, because of the city's wrongful violation of its charter, be deprived of the compensation they are entitled to under statute.

I would reverse the judgment.

ter recommending Wiz seek a tolling agreement. In that letter, Kronemyer told Arthur Tendler that if the court of appeal were to determine Stroock never was Wiz's attorney, it would not be possible for Wiz to assert a malpractice claim. Stroock argues a jury could infer—from this statement and from Arthur Tendler's earlier declaration that Stroock represented Wiz in connection with blue sky issues—that Kronemyer's advice was actually that the success of a malpractice claim hinged on whether the Tendlers got away with "what [they] knew was a false allegation." Stroock is mistaken, because it again confuses an erroneous legal conclusion—that Stroock represented Wiz—with "false declarations," of which there were none.[28]

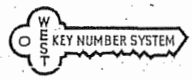
In sum, while the Rosen firm may be faulted for bringing an action based on a theory it knew or should have known was groundless, no evidence supports the claims the Tendlers failed to disclose all the facts, made false factual allegations, or otherwise acted in bad faith in following the firm's advice. Accordingly, summary judgment in their favor was appropriate.

DISPOSITION

The judgment entered in favor of the Tendlers is affirmed. The order granting Rosen's special motion to strike is reversed, and the trial court is directed to vacate its order and enter an order denying the motion. The Tendlers are to recover their costs on appeal, and Stroock is to recover from Rosen the costs attributable to its appeal of the order granting the special motion to strike.

We concur: COOPER, P.J., and RUBIN, J.

28. Stroock makes two other arguments. One is that the trial court erroneously based its rulings on expert opinions proffered by the Tendlers on probable cause, when it is well-established that expert testimony on the legal issue of probable cause is improper. Assuming the expert declarations were addressed to the issue of probable cause, which the Tendlers dispute, the argument is irrelevant, as the trial court's grant of summary judgment was explicitly based solely on the Tendlers' affirmative defense of reliance on the advice of counsel. Stroock also contends the trial court should have granted Stroock's request for a continuance to allow additional discovery, particularly depositions, under Code of Civil Procedure section 437c, subdivision (h), even though "considerable written discovery" had already been conducted. As of the date of the summary judgment hearing on November 21, 2000, Stroock had noticed no depositions, even during an unrelated six-week postponement of the hearing. We see no error in the trial court's denial of Stroock's request.



CALIFORNIA SLURRY SEAL ASSOCIATION, Plaintiff and Appellant,

v.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS et al., Defendants and Respondents, Southern California District Council of Laborers et al., Interveners and Respondents.

No. G027691.

Court of Appeal, Fourth District, Division 3.

May 21, 2002.

Association of slurry seal contractors filed petition for writ of mandate to challenge decision of Department of Industrial Relations that rescinded prevailing wage determination for slurry seal workers. The Superior Court, Orange County, No. 00CC02849, John C. Woolley, J., denied writ petition. Association appealed. The Court of Appeal, Moore, J., held that: (1) association had not failed to exhaust its administrative remedies, but (2) Department followed appropriate procedures in rescinding prevailing wage determination.

Affirmed.

1. Labor Relations ⇐1450

Under statutory provision establishing method for challenging prevailing rate specified in call for bids, to challenge rescission of prevailing wage determination by Department of Industrial Relations, association of slurry seal contractors was not required to file verified petition to review determination of rate, where there was no call for bids and association did not seek to undo any contract for public work. West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1773.4.

2. Labor Relations ⇐1451.1

Association of slurry seal contractors sufficiently exhausted its administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of decision of Department of Industrial Relations to rescind one prevailing wage determination for slurry seal workers without rescinding a second determination; association sent two letters to Department requesting review of both prevailing wages, and Department made clear that it chose not to entertain request to review second determination. West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1773.4.

3. Labor Relations ⇐1268

Authority of Department of Industrial Relations pertaining to prevailing wage determinations is quasi-legislative and it has legislative discretion with respect to such decisions.

4. Mandamus ⇐72

Mandamus cannot be applied to control discretion as to a matter lawfully entrusted to a governmental agency.

5. Mandamus ⇐12

Mandate may lie to compel an exercise of discretion but not to control it, i.e. to order its exercise in a particular manner, unless discretion can be lawfully exercised only one way under the facts.

6. Mandamus ⇐176

In granting mandamus relief, court's judicial power relative to legislative acts is severely circumscribed.

7. Labor Relations ⇐1451.1

Court independently reviews issues of law involving decisions of Department of Industrial Relations pertaining to the prevailing wage for workers; court will only overturn the Department's quasi-legislative decision if it is arbitrary or capricious or in conflict with the clear terms of the Department's statutory mandate.

8. Labor Relations ⇐1450

In rescinding prevailing wage for slurry seal workers, rather than modifying it, which resulted in requirement that entire slurry seal industry pay another prevailing wage, Department of Industrial Relations did not violate statute setting forth method for establishing prevailing rates; Department determined that there was no current collective bargaining agreement setting rates for slurry seal workers per se, and Department then considered additional data. West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1773.

9. Labor Relations ⇐1268

Statute setting forth methodology Director of Industrial Relations is required to utilize in determining prevailing wage rate for public work does not require a wage survey, but instead gives Department of Industrial Relations discretion to consider one. West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1773.9(b)(1).

10. Labor Relations ⇐1268

Though the Department of Industrial Relations must not determine a prevailing wage before considering relevant collective bargaining agreements, prevailing wages on federal projects, and other pertinent information, nothing in the statutory scheme prevents it from determining that the information provided to it is insufficient to support a wage determination, or that new information has eliminated the basis for an existing determination. OPINION

MOORE, J.

At the request of a labor organization, the Department of Industrial Relations (the Department) evaluated whether to rescind a 10–year–old prevailing wage determination for slurry seal workers. The Department rescinded the determination, upon concluding it no longer represented prevailing wage. When the Department did so, another preexisting prevailing wage determination, based on a collective bargaining agreement and previously applicable to only a small segment of the industry, became the prevailing wage determination applicable to all Southern California slurry seal workers.

An association of slurry seal contractors filed a petition for a writ of mandate to challenge the rescission. It claimed the Department abused its discretion in rescinding one prevailing wage determination when the net effect was to supplant it with a second prevailing wage determination which did not in fact represent prevailing wage. The trial court denied the writ petition, holding the Department had not abused its discretion and the association had failed to exhaust its administrative remedies.

The association appeals, reiterating that the Department abused its discretion, and contending the trial court erred in concluding otherwise and in determining the association had failed to exhaust its administrative remedies. Because we agree the Department did not abuse its discretion in rescinding the first prevailing wage determination, we affirm.

I

FACTS

In 1989, the Department issued General Prevailing Wage Determination No. SC–830–X–70–89–1 (the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination) establishing wage rates for various categories of slurry seal workers. The wage rates ranged from $7.99 to $15.15 for workers in Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties.

Subsequently, the Southern California District Council of Laborers and Laborers' International Union of North America,

Highway & Street Stripers, Local 1184, AFL–CIO (the Laborers) requested a wage determination for slurry seal workers based upon the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement. In 1995, the Department granted the request and added slurry seal work into the wage determination affecting the Laborers, then designated as No. SC–23–102–2–96–1 (the Laborers' Determination),[1] at the rate set forth in the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement. Since that time, the Department has published two distinct wage determinations for slurry seal work—the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination and the Laborers' Determination. According to the California Slurry Seal Association (the Association), the Department has periodically increased the slurry seal wage rate in the Laborers' Determination, to correspond with increases set forth in the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement. As of 1999, the slurry seal wage rate under the Laborers' Determination was $18.18.

By letter dated March 5, 1999, the Laborers requested the Department to rescind the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination. The Laborers asserted that the underpinnings of the 10–year–old determination no longer supported it for numerous reasons and the wage rates contained therein were no longer the prevailing rates. Shortly thereafter, the Association, claiming its contractor members performed nearly 98 percent of all California slurry seal work and employed approximately 95 percent of all California slurry seal workers, sent a letter to the Department, requesting it to conduct a wage survey before taking action on the Laborers' request.

The Department set a hearing on the matter. The Association then sent the Department another letter, in which it reiterated its request for a wage survey and indicated there was a need for review of not only the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, but the Laborers' Determination as well. The Association subsequently sent further correspondence to the Department in which it more clearly articulated a request for the Department to review both of the determinations. The Department chose to limit the scope of the hearing to a review of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination.

The hearing took place in December 1999. The Association and the Laborers each submitted evidence. The Association characterizes its evidence as "showing that its members were not paying the rate of $18.18 set forth in the Laborers' [ ] Determination."

In February 2000, the Department issued a 20–page memorandum of decision pursuant to which it rescinded the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination because the wage rates set forth therein were not actually prevailing rates. In the memorandum of decision, the Department stated that upon rescission of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, slurry seal work would have to be paid in accordance with the Laborers' Determination, which remained in effect. In response to the Association's argument that the Laborers' Determination did not represent prevailing wage either, the Department made several com-

1. The identifying number of the wage determination premised in relevant part on the wage rate for slurry seal work as set forth in the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement has changed from time to time. It was No. SC–23–102–2–96–1 initially and No. SC–23–102–2–99–1 at the time of the Department's decision at issue here. The California Slurry Seal Association informs us the identifier was subsequently changed to No. SC–23–102–2–2000–1. The applicable determinations shall be referred to hereinafter collectively as the "Laborers' Determination."

ments. Among other things, it stated that the accuracy of the Laborers' Determination was not the subject of the proceedings then before it, the Laborers' Determination was properly supported by a current collective bargaining agreement and a predetermined federal rate, and Labor Code section 1773 required the Department to fix a rate not less than the prevailing rate (implying a higher rate was permissible).

The Association then filed an application for an order to show cause re preliminary injunction and a petition for a writ of mandate to challenge the action of the Department and its director, Stephen J. Smith, in rescinding the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, with the effect of making the Laborers' Determination apply to the entire Southern California slurry seal industry. The Laborers filed a motion for leave to intervene, which was granted. The trial court denied both the application for a preliminary injunction and the writ petition. It found that the Department had not abused its discretion in rescinding the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination and that the Association had failed to exhaust its administrative remedies. The Association filed a notice of appeal from the judgment and related orders and rulings.

II

DISCUSSION

A. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

1. Background

In its opposition to the Association's petition for a writ of mandate, the Department said the Association sought to "attack the accuracy" of the Laborers' Determination, but had failed to exhaust its administrative remedies. It stated that the statutory scheme has provided only one method for launching the attack—the filing of a petition pursuant to Labor Code section 1773.4, and the Association had filed no such petition. In ruling on the petition, the trial court found the Association had failed to exhaust its administrative remedies.

The Association appears to interpret this finding as meaning that the trial court was precluded from reaching the merits of any portion of the petition, not just any argument that might be construed as a direct challenge to the Laborers' Determination. The Department does not view it this way. It asserts the finding pertained only to the failure to exhaust administrative remedies with respect to a challenge to the Laborers' Determination, not with respect to a challenge to the rescission of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination.

The record is unclear. The judgment gives two grounds for denying the writ petition: (1) the Association did not exhaust its administrative remedies; and (2) the Department did not abuse its discretion. It does not specify that the failure to exhaust ground applies only to issues pertaining to the Laborers' Determination itself. While that intention might seem obvious to the Department, because of the way the Department framed its opposition to the writ petition, this is not free from doubt. As the Laborers put it, "the Association presented a petition which focused on the Laborers' Determination, which was not reviewed in the underlying administrative process. As such, the trial court correctly determined that it was unable to reach the merits of the petition as it was presented by the Association." Under either interpretation, however, the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies does not bar judicial review of the matters the Association raises, as we shall explain.

2. Labor Code provisions

[1] Labor Code section 1771 [2] requires that "not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages" be paid on public works projects exceeding $1,000. "The body awarding any contract for public work ... shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, what the general rate of per diem wages is for each craft, classification, or type of worker needed to execute the contract." (§ 1773.2.) In order to correctly state the prevailing rate in the call for bids and in the bid specifications, the awarding body shall obtain the requisite information from the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations. (§ 1773.) Certain parties are permitted to challenge the prevailing rate quoted in the call for bids. (§ 1773.4.)

More particularly, section 1773.4 provides in pertinent part: "Any prospective bidder or his representative, any representative of any craft, classification or type of workman involved, or the awarding body may, within 20 days after commencement of advertising of the call for bids by the awarding body, file with the Director of Industrial Relations a verified petition to review the determination of any such rate or rates upon the ground that they have not been determined in accordance with the provision of Section 1773 of this code." This provision clearly establishes the method for challenging a prevailing rate specified in a call for bids. The Department sees the application of section 1773.4 as being even broader, applying in the case before us even when no party sought to challenge the rates set forth in a call for bids.

In support of its position, the Department cites to Hoffman v. Pedley School Dist. (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 72, 26 Cal. Rptr. 109. In Hoffman, a union representative filed a complaint to challenge the wage rate being paid under a public works contract. But he had not filed a section 1773.4 petition challenging the prevailing rate as stated in the call for bids. Rather, the representative omitted that step and simply filed a lawsuit four months after the call for bids was published and two months after a contract for the public work had been signed. His motion for a temporary restraining order to block the expenditure of public funds on the contract was denied, and the appellate court affirmed on the basis of failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Clearly, the statute was designed to protect against exactly the sort of challenge the union representative brought. (Id. at p. 75, 26 Cal.Rptr. 109.) As the court there explained, the statutory "procedure is reasonably prompt and efficacious and eliminates unconscionable delays in getting public work done." (Id. at p. 76, 26 Cal.Rptr. 109.) It sets forth a particular manner and a specific period of time in which a challenge may be made, and limits the number of days for the Department to render its decision. The purpose is for the rates as determined by the Department in response to the petition to be included in the contract, so the work thereunder can be performed promptly. (Id. at pp. 75–76, 26 Cal.Rptr. 109; § 1773.4.)

But in the case before us, there was no call for bids and the Association does not seek to undo any contract for public work. While the section 1773.4 procedures dictate the manner for challenging a wage rate quoted in a call for bids, they do not specify the procedures to be followed in a situation such as this, where the Department had already undertaken the review of the prevailing rate for slurry seal work in response to the informal request of another party. Furthermore, we observe the Department did not require the Laborers to file a section 1773.4 petition in bringing their challenge.

3. Department proceedings

[2] The Laborers are the ones who initiated these proceedings, not the Association. They are the ones who chose to challenge the prevailing rate established by the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination. They did not follow section 1773.4 in commencing that challenge. There was no call for bids at issue and the Laborers filed no petition. They sought the Department's review of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination by the simple mechanism of a two-page letter requesting rescission. The Association, playing by the same rules as the Laborers, sent the Department a letter of its own requesting the Department to conduct a wage survey before taking action on the matter. The Department, in its discretion, was receptive to the letter-writing method of challenge and notified the parties of its intent to hold a hearing.

Two weeks later, the Association sent the Department a supplemental letter, stating that a hearing limited to the issue whether to rescind the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination would not resolve the problems with the Department's prevailing wage determinations pertaining to slurry seal work. The Association noted that the apposite prevailing wage determinations included both the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination and the Laborers' Determination and that "none of the rates listed in either of those determinations correctly reflect[ed] the current prevailing wages for slurry seal workers in California." In effect, this letter was a request, made in the same form and manner as that utilized by the Laborers to challenge the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, for the Department to reevaluate the Laborers' Determination at the same time as it reevaluated the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination.

About three months later, the Department sent a formal notice rescheduling the hearing date and detailing the type of evidence the parties should be prepared to present. Absent was any indication that the Department was going to entertain the Association's request as it had the Laborers' request. Consequently, the Association sent further correspondence to the Department in which the Association requested clarification concerning the scope of the hearing "because there [were then] two prevailing wage determinations that ostensibly [applied] to slurry seal workers in Southern California"—the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination and the Laborers' Determination, the latter allegedly inapplicable to 98 percent of all slurry seal work performed in California. The Association asserted it was "not possible to make a decision on the rescission of [the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination] without consideration of whether the [Laborers' Determination] correctly [listed] the prevailing wage for slurry seal workers." The Association further claimed that "since neither of these wage determinations correctly [listed] the prevailing wage for slurry seal workers, a 'rescission' without a modification would be arbitrary and capricious."

After some discussion between the Association and the Department, the Department sent the Association a letter confirming the scope of the hearing. In its letter, the Department's hearing officer reiterated that the participants would be afforded an opportunity to address whether the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination should or should not be rescinded. He also acknowledged that the Association sought modification of that determination, rather than rescission, and stated that the Association would be allowed to present evidence and argument in support of its position. By this letter, the Department made clear that it chose not to entertain the Association's request to review the Laborers' Determination at the same time as it undertook review of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination.

No one challenges the Department's discretion in making this choice. Nonetheless, we can see no more the Association could have done to encourage the Department to consider the broader prevailing rate issues as part of the review process it had already undertaken. As an integral part of the proceedings, the Association raised the issue of modification of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, pointing out that rescission without modification could result in the Laborers' Determination becoming applicable to the entire Southern California slurry seal industry. We can see no reason why the Association would have been required to find a call for bids to challenge in order to draw this matter to the Department's attention, when the matter was, in essence, already pending before it.[3]

Moreover, before the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination was rescinded, the Association had no reason to file a petition challenging the wage rates contained in the Laborers' Determination. The Laborers' Determination was not applicable to the Association's members until the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination was rescinded without modification. Only then did the Laborers' Determination become a matter of concern to the Association. The Association tried to anticipate this result by drawing the matter to the Department's attention before the situation arose, but to no avail.

4. Issues on appeal

Perhaps more importantly, the Association is not seeking rescission or modification of the Laborers' Determination; it is attacking the Department's decision to rescind the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination without modification, under the totality of the circumstances. The Association frames one legal issue: Did the Department violate statutory mandates, and thus abuse its discretion, in rescinding the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination instead of modifying it to reflect the wage rate actually prevailing, when doing so had the effect of making the preexisting Laborers' Determination applicable to the entire Southern California slurry seal industry?

Neither the Department nor the Laborers contend judicial review of the power of the Department to rescind the Slurry Seal Worker's Determination without modification is barred by the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies. And the scope of the Department's power in this regard is the thrust of this appeal. There is no question the Association's challenge to the Department's compliance with relevant Labor Code provisions in the rescission of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination is subject to judicial review.

B. Substantive Issues

1. Introduction

[3–6] The Department's authority pertaining to prevailing wage determinations

3. Nonetheless, after it filed its petition for a writ of mandate in the proceedings below, the Association filed petitions challenging the rates for slurry seal work quoted in the calls for bids published by three separate awarding bodies. The Department denied each of those petitions. The Association then filed a petition for a writ of mandate in Riverside County Superior Court (California Slurry Seal Association v. Department of Industrial Relations (Super. Ct. Riverside County, 2001, No. RIC 350514)), challenging those three denials. The writ petition was denied by judgment filed April 9, 2001.

is quasi-legislative and it has legislative discretion with respect to such decisions. (Pipe Trades Dist. Council No. 51 v. Aubry (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1457, 1467–1468, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 208.) The Association here seeks a writ of mandate compelling the Department to exercise that discretion in a certain way. But " 'mandamus cannot be applied to control discretion as to a matter lawfully entrusted to a governmental agency. [Citation.]' " (Id. at p. 1468, 49 Cal. Rptr.2d 208.) " 'Mandate may lie to compel an exercise of discretion but not to control it, i.e. to order its exercise in a particular manner [citation], unless discretion can be lawfully exercised only one way under the facts [citation].' (Italics in original.)" (Id. at p. 1469, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 208.) Our " 'judicial power relative to legislative acts is severely circumscribed.' [Citation.]" (Ibid.)

[7] We independently review issues of law involving the Department's decision pertaining to the prevailing wage for slurry seal workers. (International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers v. Aubry (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1632, 1635–1636, 49 Cal. Rptr.2d 759.) "We will only overturn the [Department's] quasi-legislative decision if it is 'arbitrary or capricious' or in conflict with the clear terms of the [Department's] statutory mandate. [Citations.]" (Id. at p. 1636, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 759.)

2. Labor Code section 1770 et seq.

The Association claims the Department violated the applicable statutory provisions, and thus abused its discretion, when it rescinded the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination while leaving the Laborers' Determination in place to fill the void. It cites to section 1770 et seq.

Section 1770 mandates that "[t]he Director of the Department of Industrial Relations shall determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in accordance with the standards set forth in Section 1773, and the director's determination in the matter shall be final except as provided in Section 1773.4." The Association maintains that, in making the Laborers' Determination applicable to the entire Southern California slurry seal industry, the Department contravened the mandates of both section 1773 and related section 1773.9.

3. Labor Code section 1773

[8] With respect to prevailing rates, section 1773 provides in pertinent part: "In determining the rates, the Director of Industrial Relations shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and the rates that may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. Where the rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the director shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification, or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification, or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in the craft, classification, or type of work."

The Association contends the Department violated this provision by rescinding the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, rather than modifying it, and thereby requiring the entire Southern California slurry seal industry to pay the $18.18 wage rate listed in the Laborers' Determination, when that was not a prevailing wage. On a careful reading of section 1773, however, we disagree.

Section 1773 first requires the Department to "ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements...." It did so. It determined there was no current collective bargaining agreement setting rates for slurry seal workers per se, but observed that slurry seal work was included in certain broader worker classifications covered by the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement.

Assuming the Association was correct and the rates set forth in the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement did not actually prevail in the locality, or adopting the Department's viewpoint that there was no applicable collective bargaining agreement at all, section 1773 next directed the Department to consider additional data. Section 1773 continues: "Where the rates do not constitute the rates actually prevailing in the locality, the director shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned...." This is exactly what the Department did. Before the hearing, the Department sent the parties a formal notice stating they should be prepared to present information pertaining to slurry seal work, including but not limited to: (1) the name, location, owner, type and duration of each public and private project performed in the preceding 12 months in specified geographic areas; (2) peak employment data from each public and private project worked in the preceding 12 months in the specified geographic areas; (3) information regarding trust fund or employer paid benefits for employees on each project; and (4) payroll documents related to each project. In response, both parties provided their evidence to the Department and the Department considered the same. Thus, the Association has not demonstrated any failure on the part of the Department to follow the mandates of section 1773.

4. Labor Code section 1773.9

The methodology the Director of Industrial Relations is required to utilize in determining the prevailing wage rate is set forth in section 1773.9, subdivision (b). (§ 1773.9, subd. (a).) At issue is the following portion of subdivision (b): "The general prevailing rate of per diem wages includes all of the following: [¶] (1) The basic hourly wage rate being paid to a majority of workers engaged in the particular craft, classification, or type of work within the locality and in the nearest labor market area, if a majority of the workers is paid at a single rate. If no single rate is being paid to a majority of the workers, then the single rate being paid to the greatest number of workers, or modal rate, is prevailing. If a modal rate cannot be determined, then the director shall establish an alternative rate, consistent with the methodology for determining the modal rate, by considering the appropriate collective bargaining agreements, federal rates, rates in the nearest labor market area, or other data such as wage survey data."

First, the Association argues section 1773.9 "prohibit[s] the Department from maintaining wage determinations that do not reflect the wage rates that are actually being paid to a majority or the greatest number of workers performing work in any given classification." But the Association fails to recognize that section 1773.9 provides a step-by-step methodology for determining the prevailing rate and that all appearances are that the Department followed the individual steps as required.

Step one required the Department to determine whether a basic hourly wage rate was being paid to a majority of workers. It determined this was not the case. In fact, based on the certified payroll records the Association submitted, the Department found the Association's members paid their 200–plus slurry seal employees more than 100 different basic hourly rates. The Association does not challenge this finding.

Step two provided that, if no single rate was being paid to the majority of workers, then the single rate being paid to the greatest number of workers (the "modal" rate) would be the prevailing rate. The Department determined that the information provided indicated there was no statistically meaningful modal rate, either. Despite the unwieldy array of hourly rates paid by the members of the Association, the Association argues the Department abused its discretion in failing to set the prevailing wage at the rate paid to the greatest number of workers. It contends that "if there is a single wage rate that is common to as few as two or three employees, that rate could constitute a modal rate even if 100 different rates are paid to the remaining employees performing slurry seal work."

Yet the Association, on appeal, identifies no single rate common to as few as two or three employees in a given classification. It appears the Association, when making its presentation to the Department, asserted there was a determinable modal rate for shuttlepersons in certain counties and for squeegeepersons in other counties. In rejecting the assertion, the Department explained at length why the documentation presented in support of it was inconsistent and unreliable. Among other things, the Department cited the testimony of one Association member to the effect that its certified payroll records did not in fact accurately reflect the basic hourly wage paid to its employees. In addition, the Department pointed out that some of the Association's members had failed to produce records for wages paid on private projects, and some had not submitted records for the full 12–month period requested. Given these and other cited irregularities in the evidence, we cannot conclude the Department abused its discretion in determining there was no ascertainable modal rate.

Since no modal rate could be determined, the final step under section 1773.9, subdivision (b)(1) was for the Department to "establish an alternative rate ... by considering the appropriate collective bargaining agreements, federal rates, rates in the nearest labor market area, or other data such as wage survey data." It did indeed consider additional information, as required. As already stated, the Department considered whether there was any applicable collective bargaining agreement, and concluded there was none, except to the extent the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement included slurry seal workers within certain classifications. It also considered whether there were any relevant federal rates. It noted that the United States Department of Labor (DOL) did not have a separate determination for Southern California slurry seal workers, but that those workers were covered by DOL's General Decision Number CA990033. The Department further explained that General Decision Number CA990033 established the rates contained in the Laborers' collective bargaining agreement as prevailing. In addition, the Department considered the information provided by the Association and the Laborers. It fully complied with the section 1773.9 requirements concerning the consideration of information in the decision-making process.

The Association disagrees. It argues section 1773.9 required the Department to conduct a wage survey and it seeks a writ of mandate compelling the Department to perform a survey of the wages the Association's members were paying as of December 1999. The Association contends that because the collective bargaining agreement applied to only a fraction of the industry, the wage rates therein did not represent prevailing wage and the Department was not at liberty to base its prevailing wage determination thereon. The Association then leaps to the conclusion a wage survey was required because a prevailing wage determination could not be based on the collective bargaining agreement. As the Association sees it, wage surveys are mandatory when a modal rate cannot be ascertained from appropriate collective bargaining agreements.

[9] But that very simply is not what the statute says. When no modal rate can be determined, section 1773.9, subdivision (b)(1) requires the Department to consider other information, including, inter alia, collective bargaining agreements, "or other data such as wage survey data." The statute clearly uses disjunctive language, inasmuch as it contains the word "or." In other words, it does not require a wage survey, but gives the Department the discretion to consider one. (Cf. Pipe Trades Dist. Council No. 51 v. Aubry, supra, 41 Cal.App.4th at p. 1467, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 208 [language of § 1773 makes clear Department has substantial discretion as to sources it consults in determining prevailing wage].) Indeed, the Association cites no case construing the statute as requiring a wage survey.

While section 1773.9 does not require consideration of a wage survey, it encourages consideration of appropriate collective bargaining agreements. The Association, however, maintains it was unconstitutional for the Department to base its prevailing wage determination on a wage rate established by a collective bargaining agreement applicable to a fraction of the industry. As the Association views it, by doing so, the Department delegated to the Laborers its responsibility to maintain prevailing wage determinations in accordance with the applicable Labor Code provisions. (See Independent Roofing Contractors v. Department of Industrial Relations (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 345, 354, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 550. [delegation of legislative rulemaking authority to private parties with pecuniary interest may be unconstitutional].)

But as we have explained, the record indicates the Department complied with the statutory mandates in determining prevailing wage in this matter. The Department did not delegate its responsibility. Rather, it exercised its statutory discretion to consider certain information, including the collective bargaining agreement, in its evaluation process. The final determination was that of the Department, not the Laborers. (See Independent Roofing Contractors v. Department of Industrial Relations, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at pp. 354–355, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 550 [no unconstitutional delegation of authority when nothing in record suggests that Department failed to exercise legislative discretion in decision to eliminate wage determination or that private party dictated decision].)

5. Additional Arguments

The Association also contends the Department's own summary of the evidence proves the Association's point—that $18.18 was not the prevailing wage, because it was not what the Association members were paying. The Department summarized the wage information provided by each of eight Association members. As stated above, the Department found the Association's members paid their slurry seal employees more than 100 different basic hourly rates. While the Department's summary of those rates shows that the members collectively paid at many rates less than $18.18 for various worker classifications, it also shows that six out of eight of the members paid at certain rates higher than $18.18. A number of the rates were considerably higher. Indeed, one Association member paid up to $36.88 for certain unidentified classifications.

The Department considered more than 100 different basic hourly rates. As it did so, it grappled with incomplete and inconsistent evidence. At the end of the day, it concluded there was insufficient evidence upon which to base a revised determination. We can hardly substitute our judgment for that of the Department and say what figure it should have picked. (California Hotel & Motel Assn. v. Industrial Welfare Com. (1979) 25 Cal.3d 200, 212–213 & fn. 30, 157 Cal.Rptr. 840, 599 P.2d 31.)

Even though the Association does not propose a figure either, it insists the Department abused its discretion in concluding the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination was obsolete. In an effort to cast blame on the Department, the Association suggests the reason for any obsolescence was the failure of the Department to do a wage survey in the years since the adoption of the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination. Yet at the same time, it attempts to suggest that the determination was not in fact obsolete. This is a stunning suggestion considering the Association states in its opening brief that the evidence it submitted showed "most [of its] members were paying their employees wage rates that exceeded those in the Slurry Seal [Workers'] Determination." It also admitted in pre-hearing correspondence with the Department that none of the rates listed in the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination correctly reflected prevailing wage rates for California slurry seal workers. The Association's change of position on this point is untenable.

6. Conclusion

[10] "Though the Department must not determine a prevailing wage before considering relevant collective bargaining agreements, prevailing wages on federal projects, and other pertinent information, nothing in the statutory scheme prevents it from determining that the information provided to it is insufficient to support a wage determination, or that new information has eliminated the basis for an existing determination. Appellant['s] claim that the Department's act was arbitrary for failure to discover a basis for a different determination is therefore without merit." (Independent Roofing Contractors v. Department of Industrial Relations, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at p. 359, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 550 [Department's rescission of outdated prevailing wage determination upheld].)

The point of the matter is that the Department concluded the evidence clearly showed the rates set forth in the Slurry Seal Workers' Determination, then over ten years old, were no longer prevailing wage. The issue was whether to rescind that determination, and the Department exercised its discretion to do so. True, that had the effect of making $18.18 the prevailing rate, because the Laborers' Determination then became the only prevailing wage determination for Southern California slurry seal workers remaining in effect. But the Department is empowered, by section 1773, to fix a rate "for each craft, classification, or type of work [that] shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in the craft, classification, or type of work." (Italics added.) This appears to be exactly what the Department did.

The Association insists the Department violated "the statutory mandate of section 1773, which requires that the [Department] not simply accept a rate stated in a collective bargaining agreement at face value, but also determine whether the rate in question is 'actually prevailing' before authorizing it. [Citations.] [Fn. omitted.]" (International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers v. Aubry, supra, 41 Cal.App.4th at p. 1639, 49 Cal.Rptr.2d 759.) The Association overlooks two points. First, the issuance of the Laborers' Determination is not at issue. The decision to issue that determination was made years ago. Second, to the extent we construe the Laborers' Determination as newly establishing the prevailing rate, in the sense that it is being newly applied to the largest segment of the industry, it remains supported by a current collective bargaining agreement and a predetermined federal rate. Moreover, the Department considered the additional data supplied by the Association and the Laborers and followed the requisite statutory methodology in arriving at its result. The data supplied by the Association very simply did not compel the Department to select a figure other than the one contained in the Laborers' Determination. At any rate, if indeed the Association is correct and $18.18 did not represent prevailing wage at the time the Department rendered its decision, it is a result that might have been avoided had the Association provided more complete and carefully prepared documentation.

REQUESTS FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

The Association filed a request for judicial notice of certain documents prepared by the Department. The request is granted. (Evid.Code, § 452, subd. (h).) This court will take notice of the documents attached to the Association's request filed on April 13, 2001. The Department filed a request for judicial notice of the judgment filed in California Slurry Seal Association v. Department of Industrial Relations (Super. Ct. Riverside County, 2001, No. RIC 350514) and a supplemental request for judicial notice. The request as supplemented is granted. (Evid.Code, § 452, subd. (d).) This court will take notice of the document attached to the supplemental request for judicial notice the Department filed on March 8, 2002.

Feb. 19, 1987.

As Modified March 10, 1987.

Review Denied May 14, 1987.

Consolidated appeals arose from actions of the Los Angeles Superior Court, Norman L. Epstein, Jack T. Ryburn, JJ., concerning unsuccessful efforts of local agencies to secure reimbursement of state-mandated costs. The Court of Appeal, Eagleson, J., held that: (1) State waived its right to contest findings of Board of Control concerning whether costs incurred by local agencies were state-mandated; (2) State was collaterally estopped from attacking Board's findings; (3) executive orders requiring local governments to purchase protective equipment and clothing for fire fighters constituted type of "program" that was subject to constitutional imperative of subvention by State; (4) trial court order did not violate separation of powers doctrine; (5) legislature's plenary power to regulate worker safety did not affect rights of local agencies to reimbursement; and (6) claims were not time barred.

Judgment modified and as modified affirmed.

1. Estoppel ⇐52.10(2)

Waiver occurs where there is existing right, actual or constructive knowledge of its existence, and either actual intention to relinquish it, or conduct so inconsistent with intent to enforce right as to induce reasonable belief that it has been waived.

2. Estoppel ⇐52.10(4)

Doctrine of waiver applies to rights and privileges afforded by statute.

3. States ⇐184.34

State's failure to seek judicial review of State Board of Control's findings in test claim asserted by county for reimbursement for protective clothing and equipment purchased for its fire fighters, together with State's acquiescence in Board's findings by seeking appropriation to satisfy validated claims, waived State right to contest Board's findings. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. §§ 338, subd. 1, 1094.5; West's Ann.Cal.Rev. & T.Code §§ 2253.5, 2255(a) (Repealed).

4. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐501

Elements of administrative collateral estoppel are that agency acted in judicial capacity, that it resolved disputed issues properly before it, and that all parties were provided with opportunity to fully and fairly litigate their claims.

5. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐501

States ⇐123

State was collaterally estopped from attacking State Board of Control's findings in test claim asserted by county seeking reimbursement from State for protective clothing and equipment purchased by county pursuant to executive order; at time of hearings, Board proceedings were sole administrative remedy available to local agency seeking reimbursement for state-mandated costs, hearings were adversarial in nature and allowed for presentation of evidence by claimant, Department of Finance, and any other affected agency, and issues in case were fully litigated.

6. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐501

States ⇐123

For administrative collateral estoppel purposes, state agencies required by writ of mandate to reimburse county for cost of protective clothing and equipment purchased for fire fighters pursuant to executive order were in privity with those state agencies that testified before State Board of Control hearing on issue of reimbursement of costs.

7. Judgment ⇐665, 713(1), 714(1)

Prior judgment on question of law decided by court is conclusive in subsequent action between same parties where both causes involved arose out of same subject matter or transaction, and where holding judgment to be conclusive will not result in injustice.

8. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐501

Questions of law decided by administrative agency invoke collateral estoppel doctrine only when determination of conclusiveness will not work injustice.

9. Estoppel ⇐52.10(4)

Doctrine of waiver is inapplicable if litigant has no actual or constructive knowledge of his rights.

10. States ⇐123

Executive orders mandating purchase of protective clothing for fire fighters were type of "program" subject to constitutional imperative of subvention when legislature or state agency mandates new program or higher level of service on any local government. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

11. States ⇐123

Finding either that state agency has mandated program to carry out governmental functions of providing services to public, or that law has been passed which, to implement state policy, imposes unique requirement on local government and does not apply generally to all residents and entities of State, is required to trigger imperative of subvention under constitutional article that provides when legislature or state agency mandates new program or higher level of service on any local government, State shall provide subvention of funds to reimburse local government. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

12. Constitutional Law ⇐70.1(12)

Court order, directing that funds already appropriated by legislature for State Department of Industrial Relations for Prevention of Industry Injuries and Deaths of California Workers be spent to reimburse county for state-mandated costs in connection with purchase of protective clothing and equipment for fire fighters permissibly compelled performance of ministerial duty and did not violate separation of powers principles. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 3, § 3.

13. States ⇐134

Court's ability to compel satisfaction of judgment against State from current unexpended, unencumbered appropriation does not require that past administrative practice support judgment for reimbursement or that appropriations affected by court's order specifically refer to particular expenditure in question.

14. States ⇐123

Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration does not have jurisdiction over fire departments of any political subdivision of State; thus, county's obedience to executive order requiring purchase of protective clothing and equipment for its fire fighters did not fall under "federally mandated" exception to State's obligation to reimburse county for state-mandated costs. West's Ann.Cal.Rev. & T.Code § 2206.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

15. Statutes ⇐107(1), 109.7

Statutory provision violates "single subject rule," which requires that statute have only one subject matter and that subject be clearly expressed in its title, only if it does not promote main purpose of act or does not have necessary and natural connection with that purpose.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

16. Statutes ⇐107(7)

Language of special appropriations bill prohibiting State Board of Control from processing certain claims did not reasonably relate to bill's stated purpose of increasing funds available for reimbursing claims of governmental subdivisions, and therefore, was invalid under single subject rule. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 4, § 9.

17. Statutes ⇐107(7)

Annual budget bill must only concern subject of appropriations to support annual budget and may not constitutionally be used to substantially amend or change existing statutory law.

18. Constitutional Law ⇐190
States ⇐129

Budget control language of special appropriations bill was invalid as retroactive disclaimer of county's right to reimbursement for debts incurred in prior years by local agencies. St.1981, c. 1090, § 1 et seq.

19. States ⇐123

Constitutional article vesting legislature with unlimited plenary power to create and enforce complete workers' compensation system did not provide exception to obligation of State to reimburse local agency for compliance with safety orders mandated by state. West's Ann.Cal.Rev. & T.Code § 2207; § 2231 (Repealed); West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6; Art. 14, § 4.

20. States ⇐123

Claims of county for reimbursement of expenses for state-mandated protective clothing and equipment for fire fighters were reimbursable even to extent that expenses were incurred prior to effective date of constitutional amendment mandating reimbursements. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

21. Limitation of Actions ⇐66(3)

County's right of action in traditional mandamus to require State to fulfill its duty to reimburse county for expenditures incurred in supplying its fire fighters with state-mandated protective clothing and equipment did not accrue until legislation was enacted without appropriations and it became clear that State had breached its duty to reimburse; thus, mandamus action brought within three years of enactment of legislation denying appropriation, was timely. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. §§ 335, 338, subd. 1; West's Ann.Cal.Rev. & T.Code § 2255(a) (Repealed).

22. Counties ⇐209

Statute which provides that if legislature deletes from local government claims bill funding for state mandate, local agency may file action in declaratory relief to declare mandate unenforceable and enjoin enforcement was inapplicable to county seeking reimbursement for expenses incurred pursuant to executive order mandating that county furnish its fire fighters with protective clothing and equipment, where statute did not become operative until after State Board of Control had rendered its decision finding costs reimbursable, until after funding was deleted by legislature, and until after litigation was commenced by county to obtain reimbursement. West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code § 17612(b); West's Ann. Cal.Rev. & T.Code § 2207; § 2231 (Repealed); West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

23. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐229

Party is not required to exhaust remedy that was not in existence at time action was filed.

24. States ⇐193

Statute which states that if legislature deletes from local government claims bill funding for state-mandated new program, local government may file action in declaratory relief to declare mandate unenforceable and enjoin its enforcement is purely discretionary course of action and does not provide local government with only remedy available if funding is not provided. West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code § 17612(b).

25. Constitutional Law ⇐38

Constitution of State is supreme and any statute in conflict therewith is invalid.

26. Set-Off and Counterclaim ⇐8(1)

Under equitable principle of offset, either party to transaction involving mutual debts and credits can strike or balance, holding himself owing or entitled only to net difference.

27. States ⇐199

County could satisfy its claims for reimbursement from State for state-mandated programs by offsetting fines and forfeitures due State, while State could not use its statutory offset authority until county was fully reimbursed; identified fines and forfeitures were collected by county for statutory law violations, State did not come into actual possession of funds until they were transferred, and State was manifestly reluctant to reimburse county for its expenses. West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code §§ 12419.5, 17561; West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6; West's Ann.Cal.Rev. & T.Code § 2207; §§ 2231, 2231(a) (Repealed).

28. States ⇐126

Order enjoining State from directly or indirectly reverting reimbursement award sum from general fund line item accounts, and from otherwise dissipating that sum in manner that would make it unavailable to satisfy court's judgment that county was entitled to reimbursement for expenses mandated by State, did not violate Government Code section governing reversion of undisbursed balances. West's Ann.Cal. Gov.Code § 16304.1.

29. States ⇐184.10

Auditor controller of county was not indispensable party to county's action seeking reimbursement of expenses incurred in purchase of protective clothing and equipment for fire fighters mandated by state executive order; auditor controller was indirectly represented in proceedings by participation of his principal, the county, as party litigant. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. §§ 389, 389(a); West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code §§ 24000(d, e), 26880.

30. States ⇐184.10

Funds created by collection of fines and forfeitures by county were not indispensable parties to county's action seeking reimbursement from State for state-mandated expenses; action was not in rem proceeding, and ownership of particular stake was not in dispute, but rather, action was to compel ministerial obligation imposed by law. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. § 389.

31. States ⇐171

By relying on invalid budget control language, State could not avoid its obligation to pay interest to county on county's claim for reimbursement for state-mandated programs. St.1981, c. 1090 § 3; West's Ann.Cal.Civ.Code § 3287(a).

32. Appeal and Error ⇐842(8)

Appellate court is not limited by interpretation of statutes given by trial court.

33. Appeal and Error ⇐1154

Appellate court reviewing entry of money judgment against State is empowered to add directive that trial court order be modified to include charging orders against funds appropriated by subsequent Budget Acts.

These consolidated appeals arise from three separate trial court proceedings concerning the heretofore unsuccessful efforts of various local agencies to secure reimbursement of state-mandated costs.

Case No. 2d Civ. B006078 (Carmel Valley et al. case) was the first matter decided by the trial court. The memorandum of decision in that case was judicially noticed by the trial court which heard the consolidated matters in 2d Civ. B011941 (Rincon et al. case) and 2d Civ. B011942 (County of Los Angeles case). Issues common to all three cases will be discussed together [530] under the County of Los Angeles appeal, while issues unique to the other two appeals will be considered separately.

We identify the parties to the various proceedings in footnote 1.[1] For literary convenience, however, we will refer to all appellants as the "State" and all respondents as the "County" unless otherwise indicated.

APPEAL IN CASE NO. 2 CIVIL B011942

(County of Los Angeles Case)

FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

County employs fire fighters for whom it purchased protective clothing and equipment, as required by Title 8, California Administrative Code, sections 3401–3409, enacted in 1978 (executive orders). County argues that it is entitled to State reimbursement for these expenditures because they constitute a state-mandated "new program" or "higher level of service." County relies on Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231, and California Constitution, article XIII B, section 6 to support its claim.[2,3,4]

1. 2d Civ. B006078: The petitioners below and respondents on appeal are Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, City of Anaheim, Aptos Fire Protection District, Citrus Heights Fire Protection District, FairHaven Fire Protection District, City of Glendale, City of San Luis Obispo, County of Santa Barbara and Ventura County Fire Protection District.

The respondents below and appellants here are State of California, Kenneth Cory and Jesse Marvin Unruh.

2d Civ. B011941: The petitioners below and respondents on appeal are Rincon Del Diablo Municipal Water District, Twenty-Nine Palms Water District, Alpine Fire Protection District, Bonita-Sunnyside Fire Protection District, Encinitas Fire Protection District, Fallbrook Fire Protection District, City of San Luis Obispo, Montgomery Fire Protection District, San Marcos Fire Protection District, Spring Valley Fire Protection District, Vista Fire Protection District and City of Coronado.

Respondents below and appellants here are State of California, State Department of Finance, State Department of Industrial Relations, State Board of Control, Kenneth Cory, State Controller, Jesse Marvin Unruh, State Treasurer, and Mark H. Bloodgood, Auditor-Controller, County of Los Angeles.

2d Civ. B011942: The County of Los Angeles is the petitioner below and respondent on appeal. Respondents below and appellants here are State of California, State Department of Finance, State Department of Industrial Relations, Kenneth Cory, and Jesse Marvin Unruh.

All respondents on appeal are conceded to be "local agencies," as defined in Revenue and Taxation Code section 2211.

2. The pertinent parts of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 provide: "'Costs mandated by the state' means any increased costs which a local agency is required to incur as a result of the following: [¶] (a) Any law enacted after January 1, 1973, which mandates a new program or an increased level of service of an existing program, [¶] (b) Any executive order issued after January 1, 1973, which mandates a new program; [¶] (c) Any executive order issued after January 1, 1973, which (i) implements or interprets a state statute and (ii), by such implementation or interpretation, increases program levels above the levels required prior to January 1, 1973...."

3. The pertinent parts of former Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231, subdivision (a) provide: "The state shall reimburse each local agency for all 'costs mandated by the state', as defined in Section 2207." This section was repealed (Stats.1986, ch. 879, § 23), and replaced

4. See note 4 on page 800.

[531]County filed a test claim with the State Board of Control (Board) for these costs incurred during fiscal years 1978–1979 and 1979–1980.[5] After hearings were held on the matter, the Board determined on November 20, 1979, that there was a state mandate and that County should be reimbursed. State did not seek judicial review of this quasi-judicial decision of the Board.

Thereafter, a local government claims bill, Senate Bill 1261 (Stats.1981, ch. 1090, p. 4191) (S.B. 1261) was introduced to provide appropriations to pay some of County's claims for these state-mandated costs. This bill was amended by the Legislature to delete all appropriations for the payment of these claims. Other claims of County not provided for in S.B. 1261 were contained in another local government claims bill, Assembly Bill 171 (Stats.1982, ch. 28, p. 51) (A.B. 171). The appropriations in this bill were deleted by the Governor. Both pieces of legislation, sans appropriations, were enacted into law.[6]

On September 21, 1984, following these legislative rebuffs, County sought reimbursement by filing a petition for writ of mandate (Code Civ.Proc., § 1085) and complaint for declaratory relief. After appropriate responses were filed and a hearing was held, the court executed a judgment on February 6, 1985, granting a peremptory writ of mandate. A writ of mandate was issued and other findings and orders made. It is from this judgment of [532]February 6, 1985, that State appeals. The relevant portions of the judgment are set forth verbatim below.[7] by Government Code section 17561. We will refer to the earlier code section.

4. The pertinent parts of section 6, article XIII B of the California Constitution, enacted by initiative measure, provide: "Whenever the Legislature or any state agency mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government, the state shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse such local government for the costs of such program or increased level of service, except that the Legislature may, but need not, provide such subvention of funds for the following mandates: [¶].... [¶] (c) Legislative mandates enacted prior to January 1, 1975, or executive orders or regulations initially implementing legislation enacted prior to January 1, 1975." This constitutional amendment became effective July 1, 1980.

5. County filed its test claim pursuant to former Revenue and Taxation Code section 2218, which was repealed by Statutes 1986, chapter 879, section 19.

Additionally, the Board is no longer in existence. The Commission on State Mandates has succeeded to these functions. (Gov.Code, §§ 17525, 17630.)

6. The final legislation did include appropriations for other local agencies on other types of approved claims.

7. "1. The Court adjudges and declares that funds appropriated by the Legislature for the State Department of Industrial Relations for the Prevention of Industrial Injuries and Deaths of California Workers within the Department's General Fund may properly be and should be spent for the reimbursement of state-mandated costs incurred by Petitioner as established in this action.

"2. A peremptory writ of mandamus shall issue under the seal of this Court, commanding Respondent State of California, through its Department of Finance, to give notification in writing as specified in Section 26.00 of the Budget Act of 1984 (Chapter 258, Statutes of 1984) of the necessity to encumber funds in conformity [with] this order and, unless the Legislature approves a bill that would enact a general law, within 30 days of said notification that would obviate the necessity of such payment, Respondent Kenn[e]th Cory, the State Controller of the State of California, or his successors in office, if any, shall draw warrants on funds appropriated for the State Department of Industrial Relations for the 1984–85 Budget Year in account numbers 8350–001–001, 8350–001–452, 8350–001–453, and 8350–001–890 as implemented in Chapter 258 Statutes of 1984, sufficient to satisfy the claims of Petitioner, plus interest, as set forth in the motion and accompanying writ of mandamus. Said writ shall also issue against Jessie Marvin Unruh, the State Treasurer of the State of California, and his successors in office, if any, commanding him to make payment on the warrants drawn by Respondent Kenneth Cory.

"3. Pending the final disposition of this proceeding, or the payment of the applicable reimbursement claims and interest as set forth herein, Respondents, and each of of [sic] them, their successors in office, agents, servants and employees and all persons acting in concert [or] participation with them, are hereby enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly expending from the 1984–85 General Fund Budget of the State Department of Industrial Relations as is more particularly described in paragraph

[533] CONTENTIONS

State advances two basic contentions. It first asserts that the costs incurred by County are not state mandated because they are not the result of a "new program," and do not provide a "higher level of service." Either or both of these requirements are the sine qua non of reimbursement. Second, assuming a "new program" or "higher level of service" exists, portions of the trial court order aimed at assisting the reimbursement process were made in excess of the court's jurisdiction.

These contentions are without merit. We modify and affirm all three judgments.

DISCUSSION

I

ISSUE OF STATE MANDATE

The threshold question is whether County's expenditures are state mandated. The right to reimbursement is triggered when the local agency incurs "costs mandated by the state" in either complying with a "new program" or providing "an increased level of service of an existing program." [8] State advances many theories as to why the Board erred in concluding that these expenditures are state-mandated costs. One of these arguments is whether the executive orders are a "new program" as that phrase has been recently defined by our Supreme Court in County of Los Angeles number 2 hereinabove, any sums greater than that which would leave in said budget at the conclusion of the 1984–85 fiscal year an amount less than the reimbursement amounts on the aggregate amount of $307,685 in this case, together with interest at the legal rate through payment of said reimbursement amounts. Said amounts are hereinafter referred to collectively as the 'reimbursement award sum'.

"4. Pending the final disposition of this proceeding or the payment of the reimbursement award sum at issue herein, Respondents, and each of them, their successors in office, agents, servants and employees, and all persons acting in concert or participation with them, are hereby enjoined and restrained from directly or indirectly reverting the reimbursement award sum from the General Fund line-item accounts of the Department of Industrial Relations to the General Funds of the State of California and from otherwise dissipating the reimbursement award sum in a manner that would make it unavailable to satisfy this Court's judgment.

"5. In addition to the foregoing relief, Petitioner is entitled to offset amounts sufficient to satisfy the claims of Petitioner, plus interest, against funds held by Petitioner as fines and forfeitures which are collected by the local Courts, transferred to the Petitioner and remitted to Respondents on a monthly basis. Those fines and forfeitures are levied, and their distribution provided, as set forth in Penal Code Sections 1463.02, 1463.03, 14[6]3.5[a], and 1464; Government Code Sections 13967, 26822.3 and 72056, Fish and Game Code Section 13100; Health and Safety Code Section 11502 and Vehicle Code Sections 1660.7, 42004, and 41103.5.

"6. The Court adjudges and declares that the State has a continuing obligation to reimburse Petitioner for costs incurred in fiscal years subsequent to its claim for expenditures in 1978–79 and 1979–80 fiscal years as set forth in the petition and the accompanying motion for the issuance of a writ of mandate.

"7. The Court adjudges and declares that deletion of funding and prohibition against accepting claims for expenditures incurred as a result of the state-mandated program of Title 8, California Administrative Code Sections 3401 through 3409 as contained in Section 3 of Chapter 109[0], Statutes of 1981 were invalid and unconstitutional.

"8. The Court adjudges and declares that the expenditures incurred by Petitioner as a result of the state-mandated program of Title 8, California Administrative Code Sections 3401 through 3409 were not the result of any federally mandated program.

"9. A peremptory writ of mandamus shall issue under the seal of this Court commanding Respondent State Board of Control, or its successor-in-interest, to hear and approve the claims of Petitioner for costs incurred in complying with the state-mandated program of Title 8, California Administrative Code Sections 3401 through 3409 subsequent to fiscal year 1979–80.

"11. The Court adju[d]ges and declares that the State Respondents are prohibited from offsetting, or attempting to implement an offset against moneys due and owing Petitioner until Petitioner is completely reimbursed for all of its costs in complying with the state mandate of Title 8, California Administrative Code Sections 3401 through 3409."

8. This language is taken from Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. Article XIII B, section 6 refers to "higher" level of service rather than "increased" level of service. We perceive the intent of the two provisions to be identical. The parties also use these words interchangeably.

v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 46, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.

|534As we shall explain, State has waived its right to challenge the Board's findings and is also collaterally estopped from doing so. Additionally, although State is not similarly precluded from raising issues presented by the State of California case, we conclude that the executive orders are a "new program" within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6.

A. Waiver

[1, 2] We initially conclude that State has waived its right to contest the Board's findings. Waiver occurs where there is an existing right; actual or constructive knowledge of its existence; and either an actual intention to relinquish it, or conduct so inconsistent with an intent to enforce the right as to induce a reasonable belief that it has been waived. (Medico-Dental Etc. Co. v. Horton & Converse (1942) 21 Cal.2d 411, 432, 132 P.2d 457; Loughan v. Harger-Haldeman (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 495, 502–503, 7 Cal.Rptr. 581.) A right that is waived is lost forever. (L.A. City Sch. Dist. v. Landier Inv. Co. (1960) 177 Cal.App.2d 744, 752, 2 Cal.Rptr. 662.) The doctrine of waiver applies to rights and privileges afforded by statute. (People v. Murphy (1962) 207 Cal.App.2d 885, 888, 24 Cal.Rptr. 803.)

[3] State now contends to be an aggrieved party and seeks to dispute the Board's findings. However, it failed to seek judicial review of that November 20, 1979 decision (Code Civ.Proc., § 1094.5) as authorized by former Revenue and Taxation Code section 2253.5. The three-year statute of limitations applicable to such review has long since passed. (Green v. Obledo (1981) 29 Cal.3d 126, 141, fn. 10, 172 Cal.Rptr. 206, 624 P.2d 256; Code Civ. Proc., § 338, subd. (1).)

In addition, State, through its agents, acquiesced in the Board's findings by seeking an appropriation to satisfy the validated claims. (Former Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2255, subd. (a).) On September 30, 1981, S.B. 1261 became law. On February 12, 1982, A.B. 171 was enacted. Appropriations had been stripped from each bill. State did not then seek review of the Board determinations even though time remained before the three-year statutory period expired. This inaction is clearly inconsistent with any intent to contest the validity of the Board's decision and results in a waiver.

B. Administrative Collateral Estoppel

We next conclude that State is collaterally estopped from attacking the Board's findings. Traditionally, collateral estoppel has been applied to bar relitigation of an issue decided in a prior court proceeding. In order for the doctrine to apply, the issues in the two proceedings must |535be the same, the prior proceeding must have resulted in a final judgment on the merits, and the same parties or their privies must be involved. (People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal.3d 468, 484, 186 Cal.Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321.)

[4] The doctrine was extended in Sims to apply to a final adjudication of an administrative agency of statutory creation so as to preclude relitigation of the same issues in a subsequent criminal case. Our Supreme Court held that collateral estoppel applies to such prior adjudications where three requirements are met: (1) the administrative agency acted in a judicial capacity; (2) it resolved disputed issues properly before it; and (3) all parties were provided with the opportunity to fully and fairly litigate their claims. (Id. at p. 479, 186 Cal.Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321.) All of the elements of administrative collateral estoppel are present here.

[5] The Board was created by the state Legislature to exercise quasi-judicial powers in adjudging the validity of claims against the State. (County of Sacramento v. Loeb (1984) 160 Cal.App.3d 446, 452, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626.) At the time of the hearings, the Board proceedings were the sole administrative remedy available to local agencies seeking reimbursement for state-mandated costs. (Former Rev. &

Tax.Code, § 2250.) Board examiners had the power to administer oaths, examine witnesses, issue subpoenas, and receive evidence. (Gov.Code, § 13911.) The hearings were adversarial in nature and allowed for the presentation of evidence by the claimant, the Department of Finance, and any other affected agency. (Former Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2252.)

The record indicates that the state mandate issues in this case were fully litigated before the Board. A representative of the state Division of Occupational Safety and Health and the Department of Industrial Relations testified as to why County's costs were not state mandated. Representatives f the various claimant fire districts in turn offered testimony contradicting that view. The proceedings culminated in a verbatim transcript and a written statement of the basis for the Board's decision.

State complains, however, that some of the traditional elements of the collateral estoppel doctrine are missing. In particular, State argues that it was not a party to the Board hearings and was not in privity with those state agencies which did participate.

[6] "[T]he courts have held that the agents of the same government are in privity with each other, since they represent not their own rights but the right of the government. [Fn. omitted.]" (Lerner v. Los Angeles City Board of Education (1963) 59 Cal.2d 382, 398, 29 Cal.Rptr. 657, 380 P.2d 97.) As we stated in our introduction of the parties in this case, the party known 1536as "State" is merely a shorthand reference to the various state agencies and officials named as defendants below. Each of these defendants are agents of the State of California and had a mutual interest in the Board proceedings. They are thus in privity with those state agencies which did participate below (e.g., Occupational Safety and Health Division).

[7] It is also clear that even though the question of whether a cost is state mandated is one of law (City of Merced v. State of California (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 777, 781, 200 Cal.Rptr. 642), subsequent litigation on that issue is foreclosed here. A prior judgment on a question of law decided by a court is conclusive in a subsequent action between the same parties where both causes involved arose out of the same subject matter or transaction, and where holding the judgment to be conclusive will not result in an injustice. (City of Los Angeles v. City of San Fernando (1975) 14 Cal.3d 199, 230, 123 Cal.Rptr. 1, 537 P.2d 1250; Beverly Hills Nat. Bank v. Glynn (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 274, 286–287, 93 Cal.Rptr. 907; Rest.2d Judgments, § 28, p. 273.)[9]

Here, the basic issues of state mandate and the amount of reimbursement arose out of County's required compliance with the executive orders. In either forum—Board or court—the claims and the evidentiary and legal determination of their validity would be considered in similar fashion.

Furthermore, a determination of conclusiveness would not work an injustice. As we have noted, the Board was statutorily created to consider the validity of the various claims now being litigated. Processing of reimbursement claims in this manner was the only administrative remedy available to County. If we were to grant State's request and review the Board's determination de novo, we would, in any event, adhere to the well-settled principle of affording "great weight" to "the contemporaneous administrative construction of the enactment by those charged with its enforcement...." (Coca-Cola Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1945) 25 Cal.2d 918, 921, 156 P.2d 1.)

There is no policy reason to limit the application of the collateral estoppel doctrine to successive court proceedings. In City and County of San Francisco v. Ang (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 673, 679, 159 Cal.Rptr. 56, the doctrine was applied to bar relitigation in a subsequent civil proceeding on a zoning issue previously decided by a city board of permit appeals. We similarly hold that the questions of law decided by the Board are binding in all of the subsequent civil proceedings presented here. State therefore is collaterally [537]estopped to raise the issues of state mandate and amount of reimbursement in this appeal.

9. As it happened, the entire Board determination involved a question of law since the dollar amount of the claimed reimbursement was not disputed.

C. Executive Orders—A "New Program" Under Article XIII B, Section 6

[8–10] The recent decision by our Supreme Court in County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra, 233 Cal.Rptr. at p. 38, 729 P.2d at p. 202 presents a new issue not previously considered by the Board or the trial court. That question is whether the executive orders constitute the type of "program" that is subject to the constitutional imperative of subvention under article XIII B, section 6.[10] We conclude that they are.

[11] In State of California, the Court concluded that the term "program" has two alternative meanings: "programs that carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public, or laws which, to implement a state policy, impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state." (Id. 233 Cal.Rptr. at p. 43, 729 P.2d at p. 208, emphasis added.) Although only one of these findings is necessary to trigger reimbursement, both are present here.

First, fire protection is a peculiarly governmental function. (County of Sacramento v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal.3d 479, 481, 105 Cal.Rptr. 374, 503 P.2d 1382.) "Police and fire protection are two of the most essential and basic functions of local government." (Verreos v. City and County of San Francisco (1976) 63 Cal.App.3d 86, 107, 133 Cal.Rptr. 649.) This classification is not weakened by State's assertion that there are private sector fire fighters who are also subject to the executive orders. Our record on this point is incomplete because the issue was not presented below. Nonetheless, we have no difficulty in concluding as a matter of judicial notice that the overwhelming number of fire fighters discharge a classical governmental function.[11]

[538]The second, and alternative, prong of the State of California definition is also satisfied. The executive orders manifest a state policy to provide updated equipment to all fire fighters. Indeed, compliance with the executive orders is compulsory. The requirements imposed on local governments are also unique because fire fighting is overwhelmingly engaged in by local agencies. Finally, the orders do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the State but only to those involved in fire fighting.

These facts are distinguishable from those presented in State of California. There, the court held that a state-mandated increase in workers' compensation benefits did not require state subvention because the costs incurred by local agencies were only an incidental impact of laws that applied generally to all state residents and entities (i.e., to all workers and all governmental and nongovernmental employers). Governmental employers in that setting were indistinguishable from private employers who were obligated through insurance or direct payment to pay the statutory increases.

10. State is not precluded from raising this new issue on appeal. Questions of law decided by an administrative agency invoke the collateral estoppel doctrine only when a determination of conclusiveness will not work an injustice. Likewise, the doctrine of waiver is inapplicable if a litigant has no actual or constructive knowledge of his rights. Since the State of California rule had not been announced at the time of the Board or trial court proceedings herein, the doctrines of waiver and collateral estoppel are inapplicable to State on this particular issue. Both parties have been afforded additional time to brief the matter.

11. County suggests that to the extent private fire brigades exist, they are customarily part-time individuals who perform the function on a part-time basis. As such, they are excluded by the balance of the definitional term in Title 8, California Administrative Code section 3402, which provides, in pertinent part: "... The term [fire fighter] does not apply to emergency pickup labor or other persons who may perform first-aid fire extinguishment as collateral to their regular duties."

State of California only defined the scope of the word "program" as used in California Constitution, article XIII B, section 6. We apply the same interpretation to former Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231 even though the statute was enacted much earlier. The pertinent language in the statute is identical to that found in the constitutional provision and no reason has been advanced to suggest that it should be construed differently. In any event, a different interpretation must fall before a constitutional provision of similar import. (County of Los Angeles v. Payne (1937) 8 Cal.2d 563, 574, 66 P.2d 658.)

II

ISSUE OF WHETHER COURT ORDERS EXCEEDED ITS JURISDICTION

A. The Court Has Not Ordered An Appropriation In Violation Of The Separation Of Powers Doctrine

State begins its general attack on the judgment by citing the longstanding principle that a court order which directly compels the Legislature to appropriate funds or to pay funds not yet appropriated violates the separation of powers doctrine. (Cal. Const., art. III, § 3; art. XVI, § 7; Mandel v. Myers (1981) 29 Cal.3d 531, 540, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.)[12] State [539] observes (and correctly so) that the relevant constitutional (art. XIII B, § 6) and statutory (Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2207 & former § 2231) provisions are not appropriations measures. (See City of Sacramento v. California State Legislature (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 393, 398, 231 Cal.Rptr. 686.) Since State otherwise discerns no manifest legislative intent to appropriate funds to pay County's claims (City & County of S.F. v. Kuchel (1948) 32 Cal.2d 364, 366, 196 P.2d 545), it concludes that the judgment unconstitutionally compels performance of a legislative act.

State further argues that the judiciary's ability to reach an existing agency support appropriation (State Department of Industrial Relations) (fn. 7, ¶ 1, ante) has been approved in only two contexts. First, the court can order payment from an existing appropriation, the expenditure of which has been legislatively prohibited by an unconstitutional or unlawful restriction. (Committee to Defend Reproductive Rights v. Cory (1982) 132 Cal.App.3d 852, 856, 183 Cal.Rptr. 475.) Second, once an adjudication has finally determined the rights of the parties, the court may compel satisfaction of the judgment from a current unexpended, unencumbered appropriation which administrative agencies routinely have used for the purpose in question. (Mandel v. Myers, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 544, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.) State insists that these facts are not present here.

County rejoins that a writ of traditional mandate (Code Civ.Proc., § 1085) is the correct method of compelling State to perform a clear and present ministerial legal obligation. (County of Sacramento v. Loeb, supra, 160 Cal.App.3d at pp. 451–452, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626.) The ministerial obligation here is contained in California Constitution, article XIII B, section 6 and in Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. These provisions require State to reimburse local agencies for state-mandated costs.

[12] We reject State's general characterization of the judgment by noting that it only affects an existing appropriation. It declares (fn. 7, ¶ 1, ante) that only funds already "appropriated by the Legislature for the State Department of Industrial Relations for the Prevention of Industrial Injuries and Deaths of California Workers within the Department's General Fund"

12. Article III, section 3 of the California Constitution provides: "The powers of state government are legislative, executive, and judicial. Persons charged with the exercise of one power may not exercise either of the others except as permitted by this Constitution."

Article XVI, section 7 of the California Constitution provides: "Money may be drawn from the Treasury only through an appropriation made by law and upon a Controller's duly drawn warrant."

shall be spent for reimbursement of County's state-mandated costs. (Emphasis added.) There is absolutely no language purporting to require the Legislature to enact appropriations or perform any other act that might violate separation of powers principles. By simply ordering the State Controller to draw warrants and directing the State Treasurer to pay on already-appropriated funds (fn. 7, ¶ 2, ante), the judgment permissibly compels performance of a ministerial duty: "[O]nce funds have already been appropriated by legislative action, a court transgresses no constitutional principle when it orders the State Controller or other similar official to make appropriate expenditures[540] from such funds. [Citations.]" (Mandel v. Myers, supra, 29 Cal.3d at p. 540, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.)

As we will discuss in further detail below, the subject funds (fn. 7, ¶ 1, ante) were saddled with an unconstitutional restriction (fn. 7, ¶ 7, ante). However, Mandel establishes that such a restriction does not necessarily infect the entire appropriation. There, the Legislature had improperly prohibited the use of budget funds to pay a court-ordered and administratively approved attorney's fees award. The court reasoned that as long as appropriated funds were "reasonably available for the expenditures in question, the separation of powers doctrine poses no barrier to a judicial order directing the payment of such funds." (Id. at p. 542, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.) The court went on to find that money in a general "operating expenses and equipment" fund was, by both the Budget Act's terms and prior administrative practice, reasonably available to pay the attorney's fees award.

[13] Contrary to State's argument, Mandel does not require that past administrative practice support a judgment for reimbursement from an otherwise available appropriation. Although there was evidence of a prior administrative practice of paying counsel fees from funds in the "operating expenses and equipment" budget, this fact was not the main predicate of the court's holding. Rather, the decisive factor was that the budget item in question functioned as a "catchall" appropriation in which funds were still reasonably available to satisfy the State's adjudicated debt. (Id. at pp. 543–544, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.)

Another illustration of this principle is found in Serrano v. Priest (1982) 131 Cal.App.3d 188, 182 Cal.Rptr. 387. Plaintiffs in that case secured a judgment against the State of California for $800,000 in attorney's fees. The judgment was not paid, and subsequent proceedings were brought against State to satisfy the judgment. The trial court directed the State Controller to pay the $800,000 award, plus interest, from funds appropriated by the Legislature for "operating expenses and equipment" of the Department of Education, Superintendent of Public Instruction and State Board of Education. (Id. at p. 192, 182 Cal.Rptr. 387.) This court affirmed that order even though there was no evidence that the agencies involved had ever paid court-ordered attorney's fees from that portion of the budget. Relying on Mandel, we concluded that funds were reasonably available from appropriations enacted in the Budget Act in effect at the time of the court's order, as well as from similar appropriations in subsequent Budget Acts.

State also incorrectly asserts that the appropriations affected by the court's order must specifically refer to the particular expenditure in question in order to be available. This notion was summarily dismissed in Mandel v. Myers, supra, 29 Cal.3d at pp. 543–544, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935. Likewise, in Committee to Defend[541] Reproductive Rights v. Cory, supra, 132 Cal.App.3d at pp. 857–858, 183 Cal.Rptr. 475, the court decreed that payments for Medi-Cal abortions could properly be ordered from monies appropriated for other Medi-Cal services, even though this use had been specifically prohibited by the Legislature.

Applying these various principles here, we note that the judgment (fn. 7, ¶ 2, ante) identified funds in account numbers 8350–001–001, 8350–001–452, 8350–001–453 and 8350–001–890 as being available for reimbursement. Within these 1984–85 account appropriations for the Department of Industrial Relations were monies for Program 40, the Prevention of Industrial Injuries and Deaths of California Workers. The evidence clearly showed that the remaining balances on hand would cover the cost of reimbursement. Since it is conceded that the fire fighting protective clothing and equipment in this case was purchased to prevent deaths and injuries to fire fighters, these funds, although not specifically appropriated for the reimbursement in question, were generally related to the nature of costs incurred by County and are therefore reasonably available for reimbursement.

B. Legislative Disclaimers, Findings And Budget Control Language Are No Defense To Reimbursement

As a general defense against the order to reimburse, State insists that the Legislature has itself concluded that the claimed costs are not reimbursable. This determination took the combined form of disclaimers, findings and budget control language. State interprets this self-serving legislation, as well as the legislative and gubernatorial deletions, as forever sweeping away State's obligation to reimburse the state-mandated costs at issue. Consequently, any order that ignores these restrictions on payment would amount to a court-ordered appropriation. As we shall conclude, these efforts are merely transparent attempts to do indirectly that which cannot lawfully be done directly.

The seminal legislation that gave rise to the 1978 executive orders was enacted by Statutes 1973, chapter 993, and is labeled the California Occupational Safety and Health Act (Cal/OSHA). It is modeled after federal law and is designed to assure safe working conditions for all California workers. A legislative disclaimer appearing in section 106 of that bill reads: "No appropriation is made by this act ... for the reimbursement of any local agency for any costs that may be incurred by it in carrying on any program or performing any service required to be carried on...." The stated reason for this decision not to appropriate was that the cost of implementing the Act was "minimal on a statewide basis in relation to the effect on local tax rates." (Stats.1973, ch. 993, § 106, p. 1954.)

[1,2] Again, in 1974, the Legislature stated: "Notwithstanding Section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, there shall be no reimbursement pursuant to this section, nor shall there be an appropriation made by this act, because the Legislature finds that this act and any executive regulations or safety orders issued pursuant thereto merely implement federal law and regulations." (Stats.1974, ch. 1284, § 106, p. 2787.) This statute amended section 106 of Statutes 1973, chapter 993, and was a post facto change in the stated legislative rationale for not providing reimbursement.

Presumably because of the large number of reimbursement claims being filed, the Legislature subsequently used budget control language to confirm that compliance with the executive orders should not trigger reimbursement. Some of this legislation was effective September 30, 1981, as part of a local agency and school district reimbursement bill. The control language provided that "[t]he Board of Control shall not accept, or submit to the Legislature, any more claims pursuant to ... Sections 3401 to 3409, inclusive, of Title 8 of the California Administrative Code." (Stats. 1981, ch. 1090, § 3, p. 4193.) [13]

Further control language was inserted in the 1981, 1983 and 1984 Budget Acts. (Stats.1981, ch. 99, § 28.40, p. 606; Stats. 1983, ch. 324, § 26.00, p. 1504; Stats.1984, ch. 258, § 26.00.) This language prohibits encumbering appropriations to reimburse costs incurred under the executive orders, except under certain limited circumstances.

State first challenges the trial court's finding that expenditures mandated by the executive orders were not the result of a federally mandated program (fn. 7, ¶ 8, ante), despite the legislative finding in Statutes 1974, chapter 1284, section 106. We agree with the court's decision that there was no federal mandate.

13. When Governor Brown deleted the appropriations from A.B. 171, he stated that he was relying on the pronouncements in Statutes 1974, chapter 1284 and Statutes 1981, chapter 1090.

The significance of this no-federal-mandate finding is revealed by examining past changes in the statutory definition of state-mandated costs. As thoroughly discussed in City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal.App.3d 182, 196–197, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258 disapproved on other grounds in County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra, 233 Cal.Rptr. at p. 44, fn. 10, 729 P.2d at p. 208, fn. 10, the concept of federally mandated costs has provided local agencies with a financial escape valve ever since passage of the "Property Tax Relief Act of 1972." (Stats.1972, ch. 1406, § 1, p. 2931.) That act limited local governments' power to levy property taxes, while requiring that they be reimbursed by the State for providing compulsory increased levels of service or [543] new programs. However, under Revenue and Taxation Code section 2271, "costs mandated by the federal government" were not subject to reimbursement and local governments were permitted to levy taxes in addition to the maximum property tax rate to pay such costs.

On November 6, 1979, the limitation on local government's ability to raise property taxes, and the duty of the State to reimburse for state-mandated costs, became a part of the California Constitution through the initiative process. Article XIII B, section 6, enacted at that time, directs state subvention similar in nature to that required by the pre-existing provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. As a defense against this duty to reimburse local agencies, the Legislature began to insert disclaimers in bills which mandated costs on local agencies. It also amended Revenue and Taxation Code section 2206 to expand the definition of nonreimbursable "costs mandated by the federal government" to include the following: "costs resulting from enactment of a state law or regulation where failure to enact such law or regulation to meet specific federal program or service requirements would result in substantial monetary penalties or loss of funds to public or private persons in the state."

In applying this definition here, State offers nothing more than the bare legislative finding contained in Statutes 1974, chapter 1284, section 106. State contends that a federally mandated cost cannot, by definition, be a state-mandated cost. Therefore, if the cost is federally mandated, local agency reimbursement is not required. Although State's argument is correct in the abstract, neither the facts nor federal law support the underlying assumption that there is a federal mandate.[14]

Both the Board and the court had in evidence a letter from a responsible official of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). The letter emphasizes the independence of state and federal OSHA standards: "OSHA does not have jurisdiction over the fire departments of any political subdivision of a state whether the state has elected to have its own state plan under the OSHA act or not.... [¶] More specifically, in 1978, the State of California promulgated standards applicable to fire departments in California. Therefore, California standards, rather than [544] federal OSHA standards, are applicable to fire departments in that state...." This theme is also reflected in a section of

14. We address this subject only because the trial court found that the costs were not federally mandated. Actually, State cannot raise this issue on appeal because of the waiver and administrative collateral estoppel doctrines. We note, however, where there is a quasi-judicial finding that a cost is state mandated, there is an implied finding that the cost is not federally mandated; the two concepts are mutually exclusive.

Moreover, our task is aided by the fact that interpretation of statutory language is purely a judicial function. Legislative declarations are not binding on the courts and are particularly suspect when they are the product of an attempt to avoid financial responsibility. (City of Sacramento v. State of California, supra, 156 Cal.App.3d at pp. 196–197, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258.)

OSHA which expressly disclaims jurisdiction over local agencies such as County. (29 U.S.C. § 652, subd. (5).) Accordingly, as a matter of law, there are no federal standards for local government structural fire fighting clothing and equipment.

[14] In short, while the Legislature's enactment of Cal/OSHA to comply with federal OSHA standards is commendable, it certainly was not compelled. Consequently, County's obedience to the 1978 executive orders is not federally mandated.

The trial court also properly invalidated the budget control language in Statutes 1981, chapter 1090, section 3 (fn. 7, ¶ 7, ante) because it violated the single subject rule.[15] This legislative restriction purported to make the reimbursement provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231 unavailable to County.

[15] The single subject rule essentially requires that a statute have only one subject matter and that the subject be clearly expressed in the statute's title. The rule's primary purpose is to prevent "log-rolling" in the enactment of laws. This disfavored practice occurs where a provision unrelated to a bill's main subject matter and title is included in it with the hope that the provision will remain unnoticed and unchallenged. By invalidating these unrelated clauses, the single subject rule prevents the passage of laws which otherwise might not have passed had the legislative mind been directed to them. (Planned Parenthood Affiliates v. Swoap (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 1187, 1196, 219 Cal.Rptr. 664.) However, in order to minimize judicial interference in the Legislature's activities, the single subject rule is to be construed liberally. A provision violates the rule only if it does not promote the main purpose of the Act or does not have a necessary and natural connection with that purpose. (Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Marquardt (1963) 59 Cal.2d 159, 172–173, 28 Cal.Rptr. 724, 379 P.2d 28.)

The stated purpose of chapter 1090 is to increase funds available for reimbursing certain claims. It describes itself as an "act making an appropriation to pay claims of local agencies and school districts for additional reimbursement for specified state-mandated local costs, awarded by the State Board of Control, and declaring the urgency thereof, to take effect immediately." (Stat.1981, ch. 1090, p. 4191.) There is nothing in this introduction[545] alerting the reader to the fact that the bill prohibits the Board from entertaining claims pursuant to the Cal/OSHA executive orders. The control language does not modify or repeal these orders, nor does it abrogate the necessity for County's continuing compliance therewith. It simply places County's claims reimbursement process in limbo.

[16, 17] This special appropriations bill is similar in kind to appropriations in an annual budget act. Observations that have been made in connection with the enactment of a budget bill are appropriate here. "[T]he annual budget bill is particularly susceptible to abuse of [the single subject] rule. 'History tells us that the general appropriation bill presents a special temptation for the attachment of riders. It is a necessary and often popular bill which is certain of passage. If a rider can be attached to it, the rider can be adopted on the merits of the general appropriation bill without having to depend on its own merits for adoption.' [Citation.]" (Planned Parenthood Affiliates v. Swoap, supra, 173 Cal.App.3d at p. 1198, 219 Cal.Rptr. 664.) Therefore, the annual budget bill must only concern the subject of appropriations to support the annual budget and may not constitutionally be used to substantively amend or change existing statutory law. (Association for Retarded Citizens v. Department of Developmental Services (1985) 38 Cal.3d 384, 394, 211 Cal.Rptr. 758, 696 P.2d 150.) We see no reason to apply a less stringent standard to a special appropriations bill. Because the language in chapter 1090 prohibiting the Board from processing claims does not reasonably relate to the bill's stated purpose, it is invalid.

15. Article IV, section 9 of the California Constitution reads: "A statute shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in its title. If a statute embraces a subject not expressed in its title, only the part not expressed is void. A statute may not be amended by reference to its title. A section of a statute may not be amended unless the section is re-enacted as amended."

[18] The budget control language in chapter 1090 is also invalid as a retroactive disclaimer of County's right to reimbursement for debts incurred in prior years. This legislative technique was condemned in County of Sacramento v. Loeb, supra, 160 Cal.App.3d at p. 446, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626. There, the Legislature had enacted a Government Code section which prohibited using appropriations for any purpose which had been denied by any formal action of the Legislature. The State attempted to use this code section to uphold a special appropriations bill which had deleted County's Board-approved claims for costs which were incurred prior to the enactment of the code section. The court held that the code section did not apply retroactively to defeat County's claims: "A retroactive statute is one which relates back to a previous transaction and gives that transaction a legal effect different from that which it had under the law when it occurred.... 'Absent some clear policy requiring the contrary, statutes modifying liability in civil cases are not to be construed retroactively.'" (Id. at p. 459, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626, quoting Robinson v. Pediatric Affiliates Medical Group, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 907, 912, 159 Cal.Rptr. 791.) Similarly, the control language in chapter 1090 does not apply retroactively to County's prior, Board-approved claims.

[19] Finally, the control language in section 28.40 of the 1981 Budget Act and section 26.00 [16] of the 1983 and 1984 Budget Acts does not work to defeat County's claims. (Stats.1981, ch. 99, § 28.40, p. 606; Stats.1983, ch. 324, § 26.00, p. 1504; Stats. 1984, ch. 258, § 26.00.) This section is comprised of both substantive and procedural provisions. We are concerned primarily with those portions that purport to exonerate State from its constitutionally and statutorily imposed obligation to reimburse County's state-mandated costs.

The writ of mandate directed compliance with the procedural provisions of these sections and is not a point of dispute on appeal. Subsection (a) affords the Legislature one last opportunity to appropriate funds which are to be encumbered for the purpose of paying state-mandated costs, an invitation repeatedly rejected. Subsection (b) directs that the Department of Finance notify the chairpersons of the appropriate committees in each house and chairperson of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee of the need to encumber funds. Presumably, the objective of this procedure is to give the Legislature another opportunity to amend or repeal substantive legislation requiring local agencies to incur state-mandated costs. Again, the Legislature declined to act. Legislative action pursuant to subsection (b) could arguably ameliorate the plight of local agencies prospectively, but would be of no practical assistance to a local agency creditor seeking reimbursement for costs already incurred.

The first portion of each section, however, imposes a budgetary restriction on encumbering appropriated funds to reimburse for state-mandated costs arising out of compliance with the executive orders, absent a specific appropriation pursuant to subparagraph (b). For the reasons stated above, this substantive language is invalid under the single subject rule. It attempts to amend existing statutory law and is unrelated to the Budget Acts' main purpose of appropriating funds to support the annual budget. (Association for Retarded Citizens v. Department of Developmental Services, supra, 38 Cal.3d at p. 394, 211 Cal.Rptr. 758, 696 P.2d 150.) Now unfettered by invalid restrictions, the appropriations involved in this case are reasonably available for reimbursement.

16. Each of these sections contains the following language: "No funds appropriated by this act shall be encumbered for the purpose of funding any increased state costs or local governmental costs, or both such costs, arising from the issuance of an executive order as defined in section 2209 of the Revenue and Taxation Code or subject to the provisions of section 2231 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, unless (a) such funds to be encumbered are appropriated for such purpose, or (b) notification in writing of the necessity of the encumbrance of funds available to the state agency, department, board, bureau, office, or commission is given by the Department of Finance, at least 30 days before such encumbrance is made, to the chairperson of the committee in each house which considers appropriations and the Chairperson of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee, or such lesser time as the chairperson of the committee, or his or her designee, determines."

|547C. The Legislature's Plenary Power To Regulate Worker Safety Does Not Affect The Right To Reimbursement

[19] State contends that article XIV, section 4 of the California Constitution vests the Legislature with unlimited plenary power to create and enforce a complete workers' compensation system. It postulates that the Legislature may determine that the interest in worker safety and health is furthered by requiring local agencies to bear the costs of safety devices. This non sequitur is advanced without citation of authority.

Article XIV, section 4 concerns the power to enact workers' compensation statutes and regulations. It does not focus on the issue of reimbursement for state mandated costs, which is covered by Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231, and article XIII B, section 6. Since these latter provisions do not effect a pro tanto repeal of the Legislature's plenary power over workers' compensation law (see County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra, 233 Cal.Rptr. at p. 38, 729 P.2d at p. 202), they do not conflict with article XIV, section 4.

Moreover, even though the reimbursement issue has come before the Legislature repeatedly since 1972, no law has been enacted to exempt compliance with workers' compensation executive orders from the mandatory reimbursement provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. Likewise, article XIII B, section 6 does not provide an exception to the obligation to reimburse local agencies for compliance with these safety orders.

D. Pre–1980 Claims Are Reimbursable Under Article XIII B, Section 6, Effective July 1, 1980

[20] State further argues that to the extent County's claims for fiscal years 1978–79 and 1979–80 are predicated on the subvention provisions of article XIII B, section 6, they fall within a "window period" of nonreimbursement. This assertion emanates from section 6, subdivision (c), which states that the Legislature "[m]ay, but need not," provide reimbursement for mandates enacted before January 1, 1975. State reasons that because the constitutional amendment did not become effective until July 1, 1980, claims for costs incurred between January 1, 1975 and June 30, 1980, need not be reimbursed.

This notion was rejected in City of Sacramento v. State of California, supra, 156 Cal.App.3d at p. 182, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258 on behalf of local agencies seeking reimbursement of unemployment insurance costs mandated by a 1978 statute. Basing its decision on well-settled principles of constitutional interpretation |548and upon a prior published opinion of the Attorney General, the court interpreted section 6, subdivision (c) as follows: "[T]he Legislature may reimburse mandates enacted prior to January 1, 1975, and must reimburse mandates passed after that date, but does not have to begin such reimbursement until the effective date of article XIII B (July 1, 1980)." (Id. at p. 191, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258, emphasis in original.) In other words, the amendment operates on "window period" mandates even though the reimbursement process may not actually commence until later.

We agree with this reasoning and find costs incurred by County under the 1978 executive orders subject to reimbursement under the Constitution.

E. Claims Under Revenue And Taxation Code Section 2207 And Former Section 2231 Are Not Time-Barred

State collaterally asserts that to the extent County bases its claims on Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231, they are barred by Code of Civil Procedure sections 335 and 338, subdivision (1). This omnibus challenge to the order directing payment has no merit.

Code of Civil Procedure section 335 is a general introductory section to the statute of limitations for all matters except recovery of real property. Code of Civil Procedure section 338, subdivision (1) requires "[a]n action upon a liability created by statute" to be commenced within three years.

[21] A claimant does not exhaust its administrative remedies and cannot come under the court's jurisdiction until the legislative process is complete. (County of Contra Costa v. State of California (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 62, 77, 222 Cal.Rptr. 750.) Here, County pursued its remedy before the Board and prevailed. Thereafter, as required by law, appropriate legislation was introduced. Both the Board hearings and the subsequent efforts to secure legislative appropriations were part of the legislative process. (Former Rev. & Tax. Code, § 2255, subd. (a).) It was not until the legislation was enacted sans appropriations on September 30, 1981 (S.B. 1261) and February 12, 1982 (A.B. 171) that it became unmistakably clear that this process had ended and State had breached its duty to reimburse. At these respective moments of breach, County's right of action in traditional mandamus accrued. County's petition was filed on September 21, 1984, within the three-year statutory period.[17] (Lerner v. Los Angeles City Board of Education, supra, 59 Cal.2d at p. 398, 29 Cal. Rptr. 657, 380 P.2d 97.)

1549F. Government Code Section 17612's Remedy For Unfunded Mandates Does Not Supplant The Court's Order

State continues its general attack on the order directing payment by arguing that the Legislature has "defined" the remedy available to a local agency if a mandate is unfunded. That remedy is found in Government Code section 17612, subdivision (b) and reads: "If the Legislature deletes from a local government claims bill funding for a mandate, the local agency ... may file in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento an action in declaratory relief to declare the mandate unenforceable and enjoin its enforcement." (Emphasis added.) (See also former Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2255, subd. (c), eff. October 1, 1982.)

State hints that this procedure is the only remedy available to a local agency if funding is not provided. At oral argument, State admitted that this declaration of enforceability and injunction against enforcement would be prospective only. This remedy would provide no relief to local agencies which have complied with the executive orders.

[22, 23] We conclude that section 17612, subdivision (b) is inapplicable here because it did not become operative until January 1, 1985. It was not in place when the Board rendered its decision on November 20, 1979; when funding was deleted from S.B. 1261 (September 30, 1981) and A.B. 171 (February 12, 1982); or when this litigation commenced on September 21, 1984. A party is not required to exhaust a remedy that was not in existence at the time the action was filed. (Ross v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal.3d 899, 912, fn. 9, 141 Cal.Rptr. 133, 569 P.2d 727.) To abide by this post facto legislation now would condone legislative interference in a specific controversy already assigned to the judicial branch for resolution. (Serrano v. Priest, supra, 131 Cal.App.3d at p. 201, 182 Cal.Rptr. 387.)

[24, 25] Also, this remedy is purely a discretionary course of action. By using the permissive word "may," the Legislature did not intend to override article XIII B, section 6 and Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. These constitutional and statutory imprimaturs each impose upon the State an obligation to reimburse for state-mandated

17. Technically, State has waived the statute of limitations defense because it was not raised in its answer. (Ventura County Employees' Retirement Association v. Pope (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 938, 956, 151 Cal.Rptr. 695.)

costs. Once that determination is finally made, the State is under a clear and present ministerial duty to reimburse. In the absence of compliance, traditional mandamus lies. (Code Civ.Proc., § 1085.) [18]

[550] G. The Court's Order Properly Allows County The Right Of Offset

As the first in a series of objections to portions of the judgment which assist in the reimbursement process, State argues that the court has improperly authorized County to satisfy its claims by offsetting fines and forfeitures due to State. (Fn. 7, ¶ 5, ante.) The fines and forfeitures are those found in Penal Code sections 1463.02, 1463.03, 1463.5a and 1464; Government Code sections 13967, 26822.3 and 72056; Fish and Game Code section 13100; Health and Safety Code section 11502; and Vehicle Code sections 1660.7, 42004 and 41103.5.[19]

Broadly speaking, these statutes require County to periodically transfer all or part of the fines and forfeitures collected by it for specified law violations to the State Treasury. They are to be held there "to the credit" of various state agencies, or for payment into specific funds. State contends that since these statutes require mandatory, regular transfers and do not expressly permit diversion for other purposes, the court had no power to allow County to offset. State cites no authority for this contention.

[26] The right to offset is a long-established principle of equity. Either party to a transaction involving mutual debits and credits can strike or balance, holding himself owing or entitled only to the net difference. (Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank (1974) 11 Cal.3d 352, 362, 113 Cal.Rptr. 449, 521 P.2d 441.) Although this doctrine exists independent of statute, its governing principle has been partially codified (Code Civ. Proc., § 431.70) (limited to cross-demands for money).

The doctrine has been applied in favor of a local agency against the State. In County of Sacramento v. Lackner (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 576, 159 Cal.Rptr. 1, for example, the court of appeal upheld a trial court's decision to grant a writ of mandate that ordered funds awarded the County under a favorable judgment to be offset against its current liabilities to the State under the Medi-Cal program. The court stated that such an order does not interfere with the "Legislature's control over the 'submission, approval and enforcement of budgets. . . .' " (Id. at p. 592, 159 Cal.Rptr. 1, quoting Cal. Const., art. IV, § 12, subd. (e).)

[27] The order herein likewise does not impinge upon the Legislature's exclusive power to appropriate funds or control budget matters. The identified [551] fines and forfeitures are collected by the County for statutory law violations. Some of these funds remain with the County, while others are transferred to the State. State's portions are uncertain as to amount and date of transfer. State does not come into actual possession of these funds until they are transferred. State's holding of these funds "to the credit" of a particular agency, or for payment to a specific fund, does not commence until their receipt. Until that time, they are unencumbered, unrestricted and subject to offset.

H. State's Use Of Its Statutory Offset Authority Was Properly Enjoined

State further contends that the trial court exceeded its jurisdiction by enjoining

18. We leave undecided the question of whether this type of legislation could ever be held to override California Constitution, article XIII B, section 6. The Constitution of the State is supreme. Any statute in conflict therewith is invalid. (County of Los Angeles v. Payne, supra, 8 Cal.2d at p. 574, 66 P.2d 658.)

Similarly, former Revenue and Taxation Code section 2255, subdivision (c) cannot abrogate the constitutional directive to reimburse.

19. At oral argument, County conceded that the order authorizing offset of Fish and Game Code section 13100 fines and forfeitures is inappropriate. These collected funds must be spent exclusively for protection, conservation, propagation or preservation of fish, game, mollusks, or crustaceans, and for administration and enforcement of laws relating thereto, or for any such purpose. (Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 9; 20 Ops.Atty.Gen. 110.)

the exercise of State's statutory offset authority until County is fully reimbursed. (Fn. 7, ¶ 11, ante.)[20] This order complimented that portion of the order discussed, infra, which allowed County to temporarily offset fines and forfeitures as an aid in the reimbursement process.

State correctly observes that it has not unlawfully used its offset authority during the course of this dispute. However, State has not needed to do so because it has adopted other means of avoiding payment on County's claims. In view of State's manifest reluctance to reimburse, and its otherwise unencumbered statutory right of offset, the trial court was well within its authority to prevent this method of frustrating County's collection efforts from occurring. (See County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 568, 200 Cal.Rptr. 394.)

I. The Injunction Against Reversion Or Dissipation Of Undisbursed Appropriations Is Proper

[28] State continues that the order (fn. 7, ¶ 4, ante) enjoining it from directly or indirectly reverting the reimbursement award sum from the general fund line item accounts, and from otherwise dissipating that sum in a manner that would make it unavailable to satisfy this court's judgment violates Government Code section 16304.1.[21] This section reverts undisbursed[552] balances in any appropriation to the fund from which the appropriation was made. No authority is cited for State's proposition. To the contrary, County of Sacramento v. Loeb, supra, 160 Cal.App.3d at pp. 456–457, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626 expressly confirms this type of ancillary remedy as a legitimate exercise of the court's authority to assist in collecting on an adjudicated debt, the payment of which has been delayed all too long.

That portion of the order restraining reversion is particularly innocuous because it only affects undisbursed balances in an appropriation. At the time of reversion, it is crystal clear that these remaining funds are unneeded for the primary purpose for which appropriated; otherwise, they would not exist. Moreover, that portion of the order restraining dissipation of the reimbursement award sum in a manner that would make it unavailable to satisfy a court's judgment is similarly a proper exercise of the court's authority. By not reimbursing County for the state-mandated costs, State would be contravening its constitutional and statutory obligations to subvent. To the extent it is not reimbursed, County would be compelled, contrary to law, to bear the cost of complying with a state-imposed obligation.

J. The Auditor Controller And The Specified Funds Are Not Indispensable Parties

State next contends that the Auditor Controller of Los Angeles County and the "specified" fines and forfeitures County was allowed to offset are indispensable

20. Government Code section 12419.5 provides: "The Controller may, in his discretion, offset any amount due a state agency from a person or entity, against any amount owing such person or entity by any state agency. The Controller may deduct from the claim, and draw his warrants for the amounts offset in favor of the respective state agencies to which due, and, for any balance, in favor of the claimant.... The amount due any person or entity from the state or any agency thereof is the net amount otherwise owing such person or entity after any offset as in this section provided." (See also Tyler v. State of California (1982) 134 Cal.App.3d 973, 975–976, 185 Cal.Rptr. 49.)

21. Government Code section 16304.1 provides: "Disbursements in liquidation of encumbrances may be made before or during the two years following the last day an appropriation is available for encumbrance.... Whenever, during [such two-year period], the Director of Finance determines that the project for which the appropriation was made is completed and that a portion of the appropriation is not necessary for disbursements, such portion shall, upon order of the Director of Finance, revert to and become a part of the fund from which the appropriation was made. Upon the expiration of two years ... following the last day of the period of its availability, the undisbursed balance in any appropriation shall revert to and become a part of the fund from which the appropriation was made...."

parties. Failure to join them in the action or to serve them with process purportedly renders the trial court's order void as in excess of its jurisdiction.[22] State cites only the general statutory definition of an indispensable party (Code Civ.Proc., § 389) to support this assertion.

[29] The Auditor Controller is an officer of the County and is subject [553]to the direction and control of the County Board of Supervisors. (Gov.Code, §§ 24000, subds. (d), (e), 26880; Los Angeles County Code, § 2.10.010.) He is indirectly represented in these proceedings because his principal, the County, is the party litigant. Additionally, he claims no personal interest in the fines and forfeitures and his pro forma absence in no way impedes complete relief.

[30] The funds created by the collected fines and forfeitures also are not indispensable parties. This is not an in rem proceeding, and the ownership of a particular stake is not in dispute. Rather, this is an action to compel a ministerial obligation imposed by law. Complete relief may be afforded without including the specified funds as a party.

K. County Is Entitled To Interest

[31] State insists that an award of interest to County unfairly penalizes State for not paying claims which it was prohibited by law from paying under Statutes 1981, chapter 1090, section 3. This argument is unavailing.

Civil Code section 3287, subdivision (a) allows interest to any person "entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation." Interest begins on the day that the right to recover vests in the claimant. By its own terms, this section applies to any judgment debtor, "including the state ... or any political subdivision of the state."

The judgment orders interest at the legal rate from September 30, 1981, for reimbursement funds originally contained in S.B. 1261, and from February 12, 1982, for the funds originally contained in A.B. 171. These are the respective dates that the bills were enacted without appropriations. As we concluded earlier, County's cause of action did not arise and its right to recover did not vest until this legislative process was complete. County offers no authority to suggest that any other vesting date is appropriate.

Furthermore, State cannot avoid its obligation to pay interest by relying on the invalid budget control language in Statutes 1981, chapter 1090, section 3. "An invalid statute voluntarily enacted and promulgated by the state is not a defense to its obligation to pay interest under Civil Code section 3287, subdivision (a)." (Olson v. Cory (1983) 35 Cal.3d 390, 404, 197 Cal. Rptr. 843, 673 P.2d 720.)

APPEAL IN CASE NO. 2
CIVIL B011941

(Rincon et al. Case)

The procedural history and legal issues raised in the Rincon et al. appeal are essentially similar to those discussed in the County of Los Angeles matter.

[554]County, although not a party to this underlying trial court proceeding, filed a test claim with the Board. All parties agree that County represented the interests of the named respondents here.

The Board action resulted in a finding of state-mandated costs. It further found that Rincon et al. were entitled to reim-

22. Code of Civil Procedure section 389, subdivision (a) provides: "A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action shall be joined as a party in the action if (1) in his absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties or (2) he claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his absence may (i) as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest or (ii) leave any of the persons already parties subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of his claimed interest. If he has not been so joined, the court shall order that he be made a party."

bursement in the amount of $39,432. After the Legislature and the Governor, respectively, deleted the funding from the two appropriations bills, S.B. 1261 and A.B. 171, Rincon et al. filed a petition for writ of mandate and declaratory relief. This action was consolidated for hearing in the trial court with the action in B011942 (County of Los Angeles matter). The within judgment was also signed, filed and entered on February 6, 1985. The reimbursement order was directed against the 1984–85 budget appropriations. State appeals from that judgment.

The court here included a judicial determination that the Board, or its successors, hear and approve the claims of certain other respondents for costs incurred in connection with the state-mandated program. (Fn. 7, ¶ 9, ante.) This special directive was necessary because the claims of these respondents (petitioners below) have not yet been determined.[23] Since we have ruled that State is barred by the doctrines of waiver and administrative collateral estoppel from raising the state mandate issue, the validity of these claims becomes a question of law susceptible to but one conclusion, and mandamus properly lies. (County of Sacramento v. Loeb, supra, 160 Cal.App.3d at p. 453, 206 Cal.Rptr. 626.) This portion of the order also underscores, for the Board's edification, the determination that the statutory restriction on the Board authority to proceed is invalid.[24]

Once again, our determinations and conclusions in the County of Los Angeles matter are equally applicable here.

APPEAL IN CASE NO. 2
CIVIL B006078

(Carmel Valley et al.)

Again, the procedural history and legal issues raised in this appeal are essentially similar to those discussed in the County of Los Angeles matter.

County filed a test claim with the Board. All parties agree that the County represented the interests of the named respondents here.

[555]On December 17, 1980, the Board found that a state mandate existed and that specific amounts of reimbursement were due several respondents totalling $159,663.80. Following the refusal of the Legislature to appropriate funds for reimbursement, Carmel Valley et al. filed a petition for writ of mandate and declaratory relief on January 3, 1983. Judgment was entered on May 23, 1984. The reimbursement order was directed against 1983–84 budget appropriations.

The judgment differs from the other two because it does not decree a specific reimbursement amount. The trial court determined that even though the Board had approved the claims, the State was not precluded from contesting that determination. The court's reasons were that the State, in its answer, had denied that the money claimed was actually spent, and that Board approval had not been implemented by subsequent legislation. The court concluded that the reimbursement process, of which the Board action was an intrinsic part, was "aborted."

We disagree with this portion of the court's analysis. The moment S.B. 1261 and A.B. 171 were enacted into law without appropriations, Carmel Valley et al. had exhausted their administrative remedies and were entitled to seek a writ of mandate. At the time of trial, State was barred by the doctrines of waiver and administrative collateral estoppel from contesting the state mandate issue or the amount of reimbursement. The trial court therefore should have rendered a judgment for the amount of reimbursement. Having failed to do so, this fact-finding responsibility falls upon this court. Although we ordinarily are not equipped to handle this function, the writ of mandate in this case identifies the amount of the approved claims as $159,663.80. We accordingly will amend the judgment to reflect that amount.

23. Responding to the budget control language directing it to refuse to process these claims, the Board declined to hear these matters.

The trial court also predicated its judgment for Carmel Valley et al. solely on the basis of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 and former section 2231. In doing so, the court did not have the benefit of the decision in City of Sacramento v. State of California, supra, 156 Cal.App.3d at p. 182, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258.[25] That case held that mandates passed after January 1, 1975, must be reimbursed pursuant to article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution, but that reimbursement need not commence until July 1, 1980. In light of this rule, we conclude that the trial court's decision ordering reimbursement is also supported by article XIII B, section 6.

[556]State raises another point specific to this particular appeal. In its answer to the writ petition, State admitted that the local agency expenditures were state mandated. Consequently, the issue was not contested at the trial court level. However, State vigorously contends here that it is not bound by its trial court admissions because the state mandate issue is purely a question of law.

[32] State is correct in contending that an appellate court is not limited by the interpretation of statutes given by the trial court. (City of Merced v. State of California, supra, 153 Cal.App.3d at p. 781, 200 Cal.Rptr. 642.) However, State's victory on this point is Pyrrhic. Regardless of how the issue is characterized, State is precluded from contesting the Board findings on appeal because of the independent application of the doctrines of waiver and administrative collateral estoppel. These doctrines would also have applied at the trial court level if State's answer had raised the issue of state mandate in the first instance.

We also reject State's argument, advanced for the first time on appeal, that the executive orders of 1978 initially implement legislation enacted prior to January 1, 1975, and that state reimbursement is therefore discretionary. (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 6, subd. (c).) Again, State is barred by the doctrines of waiver and administrative collateral estoppel from arguing that costs incurred under the executive orders are not subject to reimbursement.

State continues that the Carmel Valley judgment against the Department of Industrial Relations is erroneous. Since the department was never made a party in the suit, nor served with process, the resulting judgment reflects a denial of due process and is in excess of the court's jurisdiction. (See Code Civ.Proc., § 389; fn. 22, ante.)

This assertion is but a variant of the same argument advanced in the County of Los Angeles case, supra, which we rejected as meritless. The Department is part of the State of California. (Lab.Code, § 50.) State extensively argued the Department's position and even offered into evidence a declaration from the chief of fiscal accounting of the Department. As stated earlier, agents of the same government are in privity with each other. (People v. Sims, supra, 32 Cal.3d at p. 487, 186 Cal.Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321.)

Ross v. Superior Court, supra, 19 Cal.3d at p. 899, 141 Cal.Rptr. 133, 569 P.2d 727 demonstrates how, through the notion of privity, a government agent can be held in contempt for knowingly violating a court order issued against another agent of the same government. There, a court in an earlier proceeding had decided that defendant Department of Health and Welfare must pay unlawfully withheld welfare benefits to qualified recipients. The County Board of Supervisors, [557]who were not parties to this action, knew about the court's order but refused to comply. The Supreme Court affirmed a trial court decision holding the Board in contempt for violating the order directing payment. The court reasoned that, as an agent of the Department of Health and Welfare, the Board did not collectively or individually need to be named as a party in order to be bound by a court order of which they had actual knowledge.

The determinations and conclusions in the County of Los Angeles case are likewise applicable here.

MODIFICATION OF JUDGMENTS IN ALL THREE APPEALS

The trial court judgments ordering reimbursement from specific account appropriations were entered many months ago. We will affirm these judgments and thereby validate the trial courts' determination that funds already appropriated for the State Department of Industrial Relations were reasonably available for payment at the time of the courts' orders.

Due to the passage of time, we requested State at oral argument to confirm whether the appropriations designated in the respective judgments are still available for encumbrance. State's counsel responded by rearguing that the weight of the evidence did not support the trial courts' findings that specific funds were reasonably available for reimbursement. Counsel further hinted that the funds may not actually be available.

We hope that counsel for the State is mistaken. But in order to emphasize our strong and unequivocal determination that the local agency petitioners be promptly reimbursed, we will take judicial notice of the enactment of the 1985–86 Budget Act (Stats.1985, ch. 111) and the 1986–87 Budget Act (Stats.1986, ch. 186). (Serrano v. Priest, supra, 131 Cal.App.3d at p. 197, 182 Cal.Rptr. 387.) Both acts appropriate money for the State Department of Industrial Relations and fund the identical account numbers referred to in the trial courts' judgments. They are:

Account Numbers	1985–86 Budget Act	1986–87 Budget Act
8350–001–001	$94,673,000	$106,153,000
8350–001–452	2,295,000	2,514,000
8350–001–453	2,859,000	2,935,000
8350–001–890	16,753,000	17,864,000

[33] An appellate court is empowered to add a directive that the trial court order be modified to include charging orders against funds appropriated by subsequent Budget Acts. (Serrano v. Priest, supra, 131 Cal.App.3d at pp. 198 & 201, 182 Cal. Rptr. 387.) We do so here with respect to all three judgments.

Plaintiffs and Appellants,

v.

COMMISSION ON STATE MANDATES, Defendant and Respondent;

Department of Finance, Real Party in Interest and Respondent.

No. C025631.

Court of Appeal, Third District.

July 27, 2000.

Rehearing Denied Aug. 23, 2000.

Review Denied Nov. 1, 2000.*

City petitioned for writ of administrative mandate, challenging decision of Commission on State Mandates which denied its claim for state reimbursement for funds redevelopment agency was required to pay to local school districts. The Superior Court, Sacramento County, No. 95CS02704, Cecily Bond, J., denied petition, and city appealed. The Court of Appeal, Scotland, P.J., held that: (1) Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund (ERAF) legislation, shifting a portion of redevelopment agency funds to local schools, did not create a reimbursable state mandate, and (2) city received fair hearing before Commission.

Affirmed.

1. States ⇐111

Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund (ERAF) legislation, shifting a portion of redevelopment agency funds to local schools, did not create a reimbursable state mandate for purposes of constitutional provision requiring state to provide subvention of funds to reimburse local governments for costs of new programs or additional services mandated by state law. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6; West's Ann.Cal.Health & Safety Code §§ 33020, 33678, 33681.

2. States ⇐111

A reimbursable state mandate under constitutional provision requiring state to provide subvention of funds to reimburse local governments for costs of new programs or additional services mandated by state law is not commensurate with any "additional costs" that a local government may be required to bear; additional expense to a local agency arising as an incidental impact of a law that applies generally to all entities is not the type of expense that the voters had in mind when they adopted provision. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

3. States ⇐111

A reimbursable mandate is created, for purposes of constitutional provision requiring state to provide subvention of funds to reimburse local governments for costs of new programs or additional services mandated by state law, only when the state imposes on a local government a new program or an increased level of service under an existing program. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

4. States ⇐111

Decision of Commission on State Mandates satisfied requirement that an adjudicative decision set forth findings to bridge the analytic gap between the raw evidence and the ultimate decision or order, where decision addressed pure question of law, and fully discussed the issues and agency's resolution of them.

5. States ⇐111

City was not prejudiced by alleged failure of Commission on State Mandates to hear city's claim for state reimbursement within a reasonable time, or by Commission's acceptance of position papers from Department of Finance that were allegedly submitted late and were not properly served upon city, where issue considered by Commission was one of law, not of fact, and Commission resolved issue correctly. SCOTLAND, P.J.

In this appeal from the trial court's denial of a petition for writ of administrative mandate, we are called upon to determine whether legislation requiring local redevelopment agencies to contribute to a local Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund (ERAF) constituted a reimbursable state mandate under article XIII B, section 6 of California's Constitution.

As we shall explain, we agree with the trial court that the legislation did not constitute a reimbursable state mandate and that plaintiffs were accorded a fair hearing before the Commission on State Mandates. Accordingly, we shall affirm the judgment.

The Legislature has "found and declared that there exist in many communities blighted areas which constitute physical and economic liabilities, requiring redevelopment in the interest of the health, safety, and general welfare of the people of these communities and of the state." (Health & Saf.Code, § 33030.) Thus, it is the policy of our state to utilize all appropriate means to promote the sound development and redevelopment of blighted areas. (Health & Saf.Code, § 33037.) To that end, the Legislature enacted the Community Redevelopment Law. (Health & Saf.Code, § 33000 et seq.)

The redevelopment process begins when a community forms a redevelopment agency and, after appropriate proceedings, designates an area as a redevelopment or project area. (See Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 24, 27, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788.) The agency then must formulate a redevelopment plan that is adopted by the local government body. (Ibid.) The agency has broad powers to implement the redevelopment plan, but lacks the authority to impose a tax to finance its efforts. (Ibid.) In this respect, a redevelopment agency is permitted to accept financial or other assistance from any public or private source, may borrow money, and may issue bonds. (Ibid.; Health & Saf.Code, §§ 33600–33602.)

The most important method of financing employed by a redevelopment agency is what is known as tax increment financing. (See Health & Saf.Code,[270] § 33670 et seq.) This method of financing is explicitly authorized by article XVI, section 16 of our state Constitution. Tax increment financing presupposes that redevelopment will increase property values, and hence increase the tax base, of properties in the project area. Pursuant to a tax increment financing plan, the taxing agencies that are entitled to an allocation of taxes paid upon properties in a redevelopment area continue to receive an allocation based upon the assessment roll last equalized prior to the effective date of the ordinance approving the redevelopment plan. (Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 16, subd. (a).) Tax receipts in excess of that amount are paid into a special fund of the redevelopment agency for the payment of "the principal of and interest on loans, moneys advanced to, or indebtedness (whether funded, refunded, assumed or otherwise) incurred by the redevelopment agency to finance or refinance, in whole or in part, the redevelopment project." (Cal. Const., art. XVI, § 16, subd. (b).) In other words, the taxing agency receives the same amount of money it would have received under the assessed valuation of the project area in the absence of redevelopment, and the redevelopment agency receives the increment attributable to new construction and revitalization. (Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at p. 27, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788.)

The Community Redevelopment Law and tax increment financing have long been a part of California law. (Brown v. Community Redevelopment Agency (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 1014, 1017, 214 Cal.Rptr. 626.) However, some uncertainty with respect to redevelopment agencies and tax increment financing arose as the result of the addition of articles XIII A and XIII B to our state Constitution, and their failure to specifically address community redevelopment. (Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at p. 29, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788.)

California Constitution, article XIII A, added in 1978 and familiarly known as Proposition 13, imposes taxing limitations upon local governments. In addition to limiting property taxes to one percent of full market value, "to be collected by the counties and apportioned according to law to the districts within the counties," article XIII A imposes a requirement of a two-thirds majority vote for the imposition of special taxes. (Cal. Const., art. XIII A, § 1, subd. (a), § 4.) Article XIII A does not preclude a local government from imposing or raising special taxes, but the supermajority vote requirement makes it more difficult to do so. (Huntington Park Redevelopment Agency v. Martin (1985) 38 Cal.3d 100, 105, 211 Cal.Rptr. 133, 695 P.2d 220.) This was intended to inhibit a local government from avoiding property tax limitations by shifting the tax burden to other forms of tax. (Ibid.)

[2] California Constitution, article XIII B, added in 1979, imposes government spending limitations upon the state and local governments. With respect to local governments, the limitation is accomplished by restricting total annual appropriations to the appropriations limit for the prior year, adjusted for the change in the cost of living and the change in population, except as otherwise provided in that article. (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 1.) The essential thrust of article XIII B is to prohibit a government entity from spending more on programs funded with taxes than it spent in the prior year, adjusted for inflation and population changes. (Huntington Park Redevelopment Agency v. Martin, supra, 38 Cal.3d at p. 107, 211 Cal.Rptr. 133, 695 P.2d 220.) In view of the local tax limitations imposed by article XIII A and the spending limitations imposed upon local governments by article XIII B, article XIII B includes section 6 which, with certain exceptions, requires the state to provide a subvention of funds for the costs of any new program or higher level of service imposed upon local governments by the Legislature or any state agency. (County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 46, 61, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.)

In view of the uncertainty with respect to tax increment financing after the addition of articles XIII A and XIII B to our state Constitution, the Legislature enacted Health and Safety Code section 33678 as urgency legislation. (Added by Stats.1980, ch. 1342, § 1, pp. 4750–4751, eff. Sept. 30, 1980; amended by Stats.1993, ch. 942, § 35, pp. 5380–5381.) Subdivision (a) of that section provides: "This section implements and fulfills the intent of this article and of Article XIII B and Section 16 of Article XVI of the California Constitution. The allocation and payment to an agency of the portion of taxes specified in subdivision (b) of Section 33670 [the tax increment] for the purpose of paying principal of, or interest on, loans, advances, or indebtedness incurred for redevelopment activity, as defined in subdivision (b) of this section, shall not be deemed the receipt by an agency of proceeds of taxes levied by or on behalf of the agency within the meaning or for the purposes of Article XIII B of the California Constitution, nor shall such portion of taxes be deemed receipt of proceeds of taxes by, or an appropriation subject to limitation of, any other public body within the meaning or for purposes of Article XIII B of the California Constitution or any statutory provision enacted in implementation of Article XIII B. The allocation and payment to an agency of this portion of taxes shall not be deemed the appropriation by a redevelopment agency of proceeds of taxes levied by or on behalf of a redevelopment agency within the meaning or for purposes of Article XIII B of the California Constitution."

The constitutional validity of Health and Safety Code section 33678 was considered in Brown v. Community Redevelopment Agency, supra, 168 |272Cal.App.3d 1014, 214 Cal.Rptr. 626. There, it was contended that funds received by a redevelopment agency pursuant to a tax increment funding plan are "proceeds of taxes" subject to the appropriations limit of article XIII B. (Id. at p. 1018, 214 Cal.Rptr. 626.) The Court of Appeal disagreed, finding article XIII B to be vague and uncertain with respect to tax increment financing, and finding the legislative clarification in Health and Safety Code section 33678 to be neither arbitrary and unreasonable, nor repugnant to the literal language of article XIII B. (Id. at p. 1020, 214 Cal.Rptr. 626.) The same conclusion was reached by another Court of Appeal in a virtually contemporaneous decision. (Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at pp. 33–34, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788; see also Redevelopment Agency v. Commission on State Mandates (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 976, 987, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 270.)

It was upon this background that, in 1992, the Legislature enacted what the parties refer to as the ERAF legislation. (Stats.1992, chs. 699, 700.) ERAF stands for Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund. The ERAF legislation, which was enacted in response to a shortfall in state revenues and a period of severe fiscal difficulty brought about by the well-known economic recession of that time period (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 36, p. 3114; ch. 700, § 5, p. 3125), affected local government entities, including redevelopment agencies. Because the dispute in this case involves only the effect of the ERAF legislation on redevelopment agencies, we shall confine our discussion of it to redevelopment agencies.

In chapter 699, the ERAF legislation amended Health and Safety Code section 33020 to include, in the definition of "redevelopment," payments to school and community college districts in the 1992–1993 fiscal year. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 3, p. 3084.) Health and Safety Code section 33681 was enacted to require a redevelopment agency to make certain payments to local school and community college districts. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 7, pp. 3087–3089.) This version of Health and Safety Code section 33681, which was superseded before it became operative, would have required redevelopment agencies to pay an amount equal to 15 percent of all taxes allocated to it during the 1992–1993 fiscal year, less applicable credits, to each school and community college district that is an affected taxing entity of the agency. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 7, pp. 3087–3089.)[1] Section 33683 was added to the Health and Safety Code to provide that sums paid pursuant to |273the ERAF legislation with property tax revenues are to be deducted from the property tax dollars deemed to have been received by the agency for purposes of determining whether the tax allocation and financing limitations in the redevelopment plan (Health & Saf.Code,

1. In support of this provision, the Legislature enacted Health and Safety Code section 33680, which contains certain findings and declarations. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 7, pp. 3086–3087.) Among other things, the Legislature found that the purposes of the Community Redevelopment Law are dependent upon an adequate and financially solvent school system, that redevelopment agencies historically have provided financial assistance to schools which benefit and serve the project area, that the reduced funds available to the state made it necessary for redevelopment agencies to provide additional assistance to schools, and that the payments to be made to schools and community college districts are of benefit to redevelopment project areas.

§§ 33333.2, 33333.4), or pursuant to any agreement or court order, have been reached (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 7, pp. 3089–3090).

In chapter 699, the ERAF legislation also enacted Revenue and Taxation Code section 97.03, dealing with the allocation of property tax revenues. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 12, pp. 3093–3096.)[2] In relevant part, in subdivision (d), that provision established in each county an Educational Revenue Augmentation Fund into which certain tax receipts would be paid and then allocated to school and community college districts in the county.

In chapter 700, the ERAF legislation enacted a different version of Health and Safety Code section 33681, which superseded the one enacted in chapter 699. (Stats.1992, ch. 700, § 1.5, pp. 3115–3116.) The new version provided a formula for determining a redevelopment agency's contribution to schools and community college districts and provided for deposit of such contributions into the county ERAF fund established pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code section 97.03. The measure includes subdivision (c), which provides: "In order to make the allocation required by this section, an agency may use any funds that are legally available and not legally obligated for other uses, including, but not limited to, reserve funds, proceeds of land sales, proceeds of bonds or other indebtedness, lease revenues, interest, and other earned income. No moneys held in a low-and moderate-income fund as of July 1, 1992, may be used for this purpose." (Stats.1992, ch. 700, § 1.5, p. 3116.) Subdivision (e) declares such sums to be an indebtedness of the redevelopment project to which they relate, payable through tax increment financing. (Stats.1992, ch. 700, § 1.5, p. 3116.) This version of section 33681 added subdivision (f) to provide: "It is the intent of the Legislature, in enacting this section, that these allocations directly or indirectly assist in the [274] financing or refinancing, in whole or in part, of the community's redevelopment projects pursuant to Section 16 of Article XVI of the California Constitution."[3]

The effect of the 1992 ERAF legislation was to require redevelopment agencies to make a payment into the county ERAF fund for distribution to local school and community college districts. The City of El Monte Community Redevelopment Agency claims that, pursuant to the 1992 ERAF legislation, it was required to allocate $118,138.57 for that purpose. The City of El Monte asserts that, as a result of an agency shortfall, it was required to lend funds to the agency for payment of its ERAF contributions.[4] Pursuant to Government Code procedures (§ 17500 et seq.), El Monte filed test claim number CSM–4439 with the Commission on State Mandates (the Commission), seeking state reimbursement for these costs.

In 1993, while claim number CSM–4439 was pending, the Legislature enacted additional ERAF legislation. (Stats.1993, chs.68, 566.) The effect of the 1993 ERAF legislation was to require a redevelopment agency to make payments into the county

2. Property taxes are collected by counties and then apportioned and disbursed pursuant to legislative formulae. (Cal. Const., art. XIII A, § 1; Rev. & Tax Code, § 95 et seq.; see Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at p. 32, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788.)

3. Chapter 700 included a new and superseding version of Revenue and Taxation Code section 97.03. (Stats.1992, ch. 700, § 4, pp. 3120–3125.) With respect to redevelopment agencies, the new version was identical to the version in chapter 699.

4. Although the ERAF legislation also required cities, counties, and other taxing entities to contribute to the local ERAF fund, the City of El Monte does not contest any direct effect upon it in this proceeding. The City of El Monte joins this litigation solely by reason of the loan of funds to its redevelopment agency. For convenience, we will adopt the nomenclature of the appellants and refer to them collectively as El Monte.

ERAF fund during the 1993–1994 and 1994–1995 fiscal years. (Stats.1993, ch. 68, §§ 1, 2, 4, amending Health & Saf.Code, §§ 33020, 33680, and adding § 33681.5.)[5] El Monte filed test claim number CSM–4465, asserting that it had incurred state mandated costs in the amount of $34,638.52 for the 1993–1994 fiscal year as the result of the 1993 ERAF legislation.

The Commission adopted a lengthy decision denying claim number CSM–4439. It subsequently adopted a decision denying claim number CSM–4465 on the same grounds. In denying the claims, the Commission concluded (1) the ERAF legislation did not impose a new program or higher level of service on redevelopment agencies; (2) tax increment revenues are not "proceeds of taxes" within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6 of the Constitution, and the provisions of article XIII B, including section 6, are not applicable to [275]tax increment financing; (3) the payments to an ERAF fund by redevelopment agencies represent an allocation of funds among local government entities rather than a shift in costs from the state to a local entity, and the decision in Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig (1988) 44 Cal.3d 830, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318 is inapplicable because in this instance long-standing educational responsibilities remain with local school districts; and (4) the ERAF legislation does not impose reimbursable costs on a redevelopment agency because, pursuant to Health and Safety Code section 33683 (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 7, pp. 3089–3090), the agency may recoup its costs by excluding such payments from its tax receipt and financing limitations.

El Monte petitioned for a writ of administrative mandate. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1094.5; Gov.Code, § 17559.) The trial court upheld the Commission's decision. The court rejected El Monte's procedural attacks upon the Commission proceedings, holding El Monte had failed to substantiate that it was denied a fair hearing or otherwise prejudiced by an irregularity. With respect to the substantive claim, the court found dispositive the Commission's conclusion that the ERAF legislation represented an allocation of taxes among local entities rather than a shift of state responsibilities to local agencies. Judgment was entered denying the petition for a writ of mandate.

DISCUSSION

I

State Mandate

[1] Before considering El Monte's substantive contentions, it will be useful to identify certain matters that are not in issue.

First, El Monte notes that in the Commission proceedings the Department of Education admitted that payments to county ERAF funds were distributed to local school and community college districts with an equal reduction of state payments to those districts. This factual admission is consistent with the ERAF legislation. In enacting this legislation, the Legislature specified that it was dealing with a current shortfall in state revenues and a period of severe fiscal difficulty. (Stats.1992, ch. 699, § 36, p. 3114; Stats.1992, ch. 700, § 5, p. 3125.) In support of the ERAF legislation, the Legislature adopted Health and Safety Code section 33680, subdivision (c), which provides among other things: "[B]ecause of the reduced funds available to the state to assist schools and community colleges which benefit and serve redevelopment project areas during the 1992–93 fiscal year, it is necessary [276]for redevelopment agencies to make additional payments to assist the programs and operations of these schools and colleges in order to ensure that the objectives stated in this section can be met." (Stats.1992, ch. 669, § 7, p. 3087.) It is undeniable that a purpose behind the ERAF legislation was to compel redevelopment agencies to provide support for schools and community colleges during a period when the state was unable to adequately provide such support. However, the validity of the state's reduction of its payments to school districts is not in issue. El Monte lacks standing to complain of the state's reduced payments to schools. (County of Los Angeles v. Sasaki (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 1442, 1449, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 103.) Moreover, article XVI, sections 8 and 8.5 of our state Constitution, added by Proposition 98 at the November 1988 General Election, upon which El Monte places heavy reliance, recognizes the historical fluidity of the fiscal relationship between local governments and schools, which we will discuss, post. Accordingly, the fact that the ERAF legislation was accompanied by a reduction of state payments to local school and community college districts is not dispositive.

5. In Chapter 566, the 1993 ERAF legislation added section 33681.3 to the Health and Safety Code to provide an equitable adjustment for certain redevelopment agencies for their payments during the 1992–1993 fiscal year. (Stats.1993, ch. 566, § 1, p. 2812.) This provision is beneficial to the agencies that qualify and is not at issue here.

Second, we are not here concerned with the validity of the ERAF legislation. As noted previously, the Legislature made certain findings and declarations in support of this legislation. (See p. 336, fn. 1, ante.) The Legislature found that it is appropriate for redevelopment agencies to provide assistance to local schools and community colleges, that such support serves the purposes of community redevelopment, and that such assistance may properly be treated as indebtedness payable through tax increment financing within the meaning of article XVI, section 16 of our state Constitution. (Health & Saf. Code, § 33680.) El Monte does not challenge the validity of those determinations or of the ERAF legislation. In fact, El Monte emphasizes that the validity of the legislation is not in issue. The sole issue presented with respect to the ERAF legislation is whether the compelled contributions constitute a state mandate for which a subvention of funds is required pursuant to article XIII B, section 6 of the Constitution.

Third, we are not concerned with the Legislature's determination, embodied in Health and Safety Code section 33678, that redevelopment agencies and tax increment financing pursuant to article XVI, section 16 of the Constitution are not subject to the local government appropriations limitations of article XIII B. As we have noted, that determination has been upheld in the Courts of Appeal. (Bell Community Redevelopment Agency v. Woosley, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at pp. 33–34, 214 Cal.Rptr. 788; Brown v. Community Redevelopment Agency, supra, 168 Cal.App.3d at p. 1020, 214 Cal.Rptr. 626.) El Monte does not ask us to reject those decisions and find that redevelopment agencies and tax increment financing are in fact subject to the government spending limitations of article XIII B.

[277] El Monte asks only that we find the subvention requirements of section 6 of article XIII B are applicable in this instance.

California Constitution, article XIII B, section 6 provides: "Whenever the Legislature or any state agency mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government, the State shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse such local government for the costs of such program or increased level of service, except that the Legislature may, but need not, provide such subvention of funds for the following mandates: [¶] (a) Legislative mandates requested by the local agency affected; [¶] (b) Legislation defining a new crime or changing an existing definition of a crime; or [¶] (c) Legislative mandates enacted prior to January 1, 1975, or executive orders or regulations initially implementing legislation enacted prior to January 1, 1975."

In addressing the meaning and scope of this provision, we do not write on a clean slate; fortunately, we have the benefit of extensive judicial consideration of the matter. When we consider El Monte's claim in light of existing authorities, we are satisfied, on two alternative grounds, that the ERAF legislation did not constitute a reimbursable state mandate with respect to redevelopment agencies. We will discuss these grounds seriatim.

A. Allocation of Revenues

[2] A reimbursable state mandate is not commensurate with any "additional costs" that a local government may be required to bear. (County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra, 43 Cal.3d at pp. 55–57, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) The additional expense to a local agency arising as an incidental impact of a law that applies generally to all entities is not the type of expense that the voters had in mind when they adopted section 6 of article XIII B. (Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 835, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318.)

[3] A reimbursable mandate is created only when the state imposes on a local government a new program or an increased level of service under an existing program. (Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 835, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318.)

In Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, upon which El Monte places primary reliance, the Legislature had enacted a measure to require local school districts to contribute part of the costs of educating pupils from the district at state schools for the severely handicapped. Before and after the measure, the state retained complete administrative control over the special schools. Before the measure, the state had borne the entire cost of operating 1278 such schools. Under these circumstances, the Supreme Court found that the measure constituted a "new program" within the meaning of the subvention requirement because otherwise the requirement "would plainly be violated if the state could, while retaining administrative control of programs it has supported with state tax money, simply shift the cost of the programs to local government...." (Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 836, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318.) [6]

The decision in Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig turned on the dual factors that (1) before the measure, the state had borne the entire cost of the special schools, and (2) before and after the measure, the state retained administrative control over the special schools. (44 Cal.3d at p. 836, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318, especially fn. 8 [noting the decision involved the "new program" rather than "higher level of service" aspect of the subvention requirement]; see also County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal.4th 68, 99, fn. 20, 61 Cal.Rptr.2d 134, 931 P.2d 312.) As will be seen, neither of these factors is applicable in this case.

The matter of funding education is a shared responsibility between state and local taxpayers. (See, e.g., Ed.Code, § 14000.) The division of this responsibility has been in a state of flux since 1971, as the result of certain developments, including the decision in Serrano v. Priest (1971) 5 Cal.3d 584, 96 Cal.Rptr. 601, 487 P.2d 1241 holding that equal protection requires equal funding of schools, and the addition to the Constitution of article XIII A limiting local property taxation. (See California Teachers Assn. v. Hayes (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1513, 1526–1527, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 699; see also County of Los Angeles v. Sasaki, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1450–1452, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 103 [noting that by fiscal year 1991–1992, the share of local property tax revenue allocated to K–14 schools had dropped to 35 percent from the 53 percent that it had been in the

6. In Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, the Supreme Court did not decide that the measure constituted a reimbursable state mandate. The possible existence of reasonable alternatives to the use of state-operated schools left open the question whether the contributions were mandated, and the court deferred to the Commission for resolution of that issue. (Lucia Mar, supra, 44 Cal.3d at pp. 836–837, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318.)

1977–1978 fiscal year (at p. 1452, 29 Cal. Rptr.2d 103)].)

Nevertheless, it is clear that, before the enactment of the ERAF legislation, a substantial, although variable, portion of local property tax revenues were utilized for the support of schools. In this respect, a utilization of local property taxes in support of schools and community colleges is not a "new program" within the meaning of the decision in Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d 830, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318.

El Monte cites Butt v. State of California (1992) 4 Cal.4th 668, at page 681, 15 Cal.Rptr.2d 480, 842 P.2d 1240, for the proposition that education is the [279] ultimate responsibility of the state. The principle is undeniable, and indeed this court has noted and relied upon the state's plenary authority over education. (California Teachers Assn. v. Hayes, supra, 5 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1524–1525, 7 Cal.Rptr.2d 699.) However, that principle does not resolve the issue presented in this case. (See City of San Jose v. State of California (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 1802, 1814–1815, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 521.)

Only the state is sovereign and, in a broad sense, all local governments, districts, and the like are subdivisions of the state. (Allied Amusement Co. v. Bryam (1927) 201 Cal. 316, 320, 256 P. 1097; Petition East Fruitvale Sanitary Dist. (1910) 158 Cal. 453, 457, 111 P. 368.) However, it is the State of California's policy to provide for the maximum feasible degree of local autonomy. (See Cal. Const., art. XI.) Thus, the Legislature has established a policy of providing, to the extent feasible, autonomy for local school districts. (Ed. Code, § 14000; see Butt v. State of California, supra, 4 Cal.4th at p. 681, 15 Cal. Rptr.2d 480, 842 P.2d 1240.) And for a variety of purposes, school districts have been held to be separate political entities rather than "the state." (Butt v. State of California, supra, at p. 681, 15 Cal.Rptr.2d 480, 842 P.2d 1240.)

Any doubt with respect to the "local government" status of school districts under article XIII B is resolved by the article itself, which provides that, for its purposes, " 'Local government' means any city, county, city and county, school district, special district, authority, or other political subdivision of or within the State." (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 8, subd. (d).) For purposes of article XIII B, school districts are local government and not the state.

Since neither of the determinative factors in Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d 830, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318, is present here, that decision is not controlling. This, of course, does not resolve the question whether the ERAF legislation constitutes a reimbursable mandate; it merely means that Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig does not provide the answer.

The answer, we conclude, is in the decision of City of San Jose v. State of California, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th 1802, 53 Cal. Rptr.2d 521.

City of San Jose v. State of California involved a claim that legislation authorizing counties to charge cities and other local governments for the costs of booking arrestees into the county jail constituted a reimbursable state mandate. The Court of Appeal rejected a contention that counties should be considered to be agents of the state and said: "Thus for purposes of subvention analysis, it is clear that counties and cities were intended to be treated alike as part of 'local government'; both are considered local agencies or political subdivisions of the State. Nothing in article XIII B prohibits [280] the shifting of costs between local governmental entities." (City of San Jose v. State of California, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 1815, 53 Cal. Rptr.2d 521.)

The ERAF legislation was, in part, an exercise of the Legislature's authority to apportion property tax revenues. (San Miguel Consolidated Fire Protection Dist. v. Davis (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 134, 148–149, 30 Cal.Rptr.2d 343.) It was merely the most recent adjustment in the historical fluidity of the fiscal relationship between local governments and schools. (County of Los Angeles v. Sasaki, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th at p. 1457, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 103.)[7]

Pursuant to the decision in City of San Jose v. State of California, supra, 45 Cal.App.4th 1802, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 521, the shift of a portion of redevelopment agency funds to local schools did not create a reimbursable state mandate.

B. Applicability of Article XIII B, Section 6 to Redevelopment Agencies

We find a second and alternative ground for concluding that the ERAF legislation did not impose a reimbursable state mandate on redevelopment agencies.

In County of Fresno v. State of California (1991) 53 Cal.3d 482, 280 Cal.Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235, the Supreme Court held that the subvention requirement of article XIII B, section 6 must be read in light of its textual and historical context and that, when so considered, subvention is required only when the costs in question can be recovered solely from tax revenues, i.e., "proceeds of taxes." (Id. at pp. 486–487, 280 Cal.Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235; Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 8, subd. (c).)[8]

In the ERAF legislation, however, the Legislature provided that a redevelopment agency's obligations for the local ERAF fund could be paid from [281] any legally available source, including the tax increment payable to the agency under Health and Safety Code section 33670 and article XVI, section 16 of California's Constitution. Pursuant to Health and Safety Code section 33678, an agency's tax increment may not be deemed to be the proceeds of taxes within the meaning of article XIII B.

It follows that the ERAF legislation did not impose costs on redevelopment agencies that can be recovered solely from tax revenues within the meaning of article XIII B and thus, under the reasoning of County of Fresno v. State of California, supra, 53 Cal.3d at pp. 486–487, 280 Cal. Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235, the ERAF legislation did not impose a reimbursable state mandate.

Our conclusion is consistent with the holding in Redevelopment Agency v. Commission on State Mandates, supra, 55 Cal.App.4th 976, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 270. In that case, a redevelopment agency claimed the legislative requirement that a portion of its tax increment be placed into a Low and Moderate Income Housing Fund constitut-

7. The decisions in San Miguel Consolidated Fire Protection Dist. v. Davis, supra, 25 Cal.App.4th 134, 30 Cal.Rptr.2d 343, and County of Los Angeles v. Sasaki, supra, 23 Cal.App.4th 1442, 29 Cal.Rptr.2d 103, upheld the ERAF legislation against a variety of legal attacks. However, those decisions did not involve redevelopment agencies and tax increment financing peculiar to those agencies, and did not involve the question whether the ERAF legislation could constitute a reimbursable state mandate. Consequently, those decisions are not dispositive of issues presented here.

8. El Monte has asked us to take judicial notice of certain materials, including (1) the California ballot pamphlet for the November 6, 1979, Special Election, at which article XIII B was added to the Constitution, and (2) excerpts of the Journal of the Assembly for the 1975–1976 Regular Session, concerning statutory reimbursement provisions that preceded the addition of article XIII B to the Constitution. (Rev. & Tax.Code, former §§ 2207, 2231.) These materials are submitted in support of El Monte's claim that reimbursement is required for any costs a local government incurs as the result of state action. In County of Los Angeles v. State of California, supra, 43 Cal.3d at pages 55 to 57, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202, the Supreme Court considered the preexisting statutory scheme but nevertheless concluded that the constitutional subvention requirement is not implicated whenever any additional costs are imposed on a local government. In County of Fresno v. State of California, supra, 53 Cal.3d at pages 486 and 487, 280 Cal.Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235, the Supreme Court held that the constitutional provision requires a subvention only when the costs imposed can be recovered solely through tax revenues. Under principles of stare decisis, we are bound by those authorities. (Auto Equity Sales, Inc. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal.2d 450, 455, 20 Cal.Rptr. 321, 369 P.2d 937.) Thus, we deny the request for judicial notice.

ed a reimbursable state mandate. The agency maintained that, although it was exempt from the appropriation limits of article XIII B, it nevertheless was entitled to claim reimbursement for state-mandated costs pursuant to that article. The Court of Appeal disagreed, concluding the same policies which support exempting tax increment financing from the appropriations limits of article XIII B also support denying reimbursement pursuant to section 6 of that article. (Id. at p. 987, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 270.)

Under the narrow scope in which El Monte pursues this litigation, we find the reasoning of the decision in Redevelopment Agency v. Commission on State Mandates, supra, 55 Cal.App.4th at page 987, 64 Cal.Rptr.2d 270, to be compelled by the reme Court's decision in County of Fresno v. State of California, supra, 53 Cal.3d at pages 486, 280 Cal.Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235 through 487. El Monte does not challenge the validity of Health and Safety Code section 33678, which precludes a redevelopment agency's tax increment from being considered to be the proceeds of taxes for purposes of article XIII B. Absent a successful challenge to that legislative determination, the decision in County of Fresno v. State of California forecloses a reimbursable mandate. In other words, a redevelopment agency cannot accept the benefits of Health and [282] Safety Code section 33678 while asserting an entitlement to reimbursement under article XIII B, ion 6.

C. Summary

For these two, alternative reasons, we agree with the Commission and the trial court that the ERAF legislation did not impose a reimbursable state mandate upon redevelopment agencies.[9]

II

Procedural Issues

[4] El Monte argues the Commission's decision fails to meet the requirements of Topanga Assn. for a Scenic Community v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 11 Cal.3d 506, 113 Cal.Rptr. 836, 522 P.2d 12, which held that an adjudicative decision by an administrative agency must set forth findings to bridge the analytic gap between the raw evidence and the ultimate decision or order. (Id. at p. 515, 113 Cal.Rptr. 836, 522 P.2d 12.) However, as we have noted (see fn. 9, ante), the two bases for decision we have discussed present pure questions of law, to be resolved upon existing statutory, constitutional, and decisional authorities. The Commission's decision fully discussed the issues and its resolution of them, and was sufficient under the decision in Topanga Assn. for a Scenic Community v. County of Los Angeles, supra.

[5] El Monte complains the Commission failed to hear El Monte's claim within a reasonable time, as required by Government Code section 17555 as it then read (Stats.1984, ch. 1459, § 1, p. 5118), and California Code of Regulations, title 2, section 1187.1. El Monte also complains the Commission accepted position papers from the Department of Finance, over El Monte's objection that the papers were submitted late and were not properly served upon it. The Commission declined to strike the Department of Finance's submissions, reasoning that the submissions consisted of legal arguments rather than factual assertions; the Commission already was familiar with the legal arguments presented; and El Monte in fact obtained copies of the submissions and was able to respond.

9. Unlike these reasons, which are pure questions of law, the third basis relied upon by the Commission, i.e., that the ERAF legislation provided a means of recoupment, can involve certain factual considerations. (See County of Fresno v. State of California, supra, 53 Cal.3d at p. 487, 280 Cal.Rptr. 92, 808 P.2d 235 [sufficiency of recoupment alternatives was at issue]; Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 837, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318 [reasonableness of alternatives was at issue].) We need not, and do not, address the third ground relied upon by the Commission.

We agree with the trial court that El Monte has failed to show cognizable prejudice with respect to these assertions. The issue presented is one of law [283] not fact. We cannot assume the Commission would have reached an erroneous legal conclusion in the absence of the errors asserted by El Monte, and we cannot base a finding of prejudice upon the possibility the Commission would have reached an erroneous legal conclusion. To the contrary, we must affirm, regardless of procedural errors, if the decision was the legally correct resolution of the case. (Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13; Conservatorship of Fadley (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 440, 442, 446–447, 205 Cal. Rptr. 572; Stafford v. People (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 79, 81, 300 P.2d 231.) [10]

DISPOSITION

The judgment is affirmed.

[67] KIMBERLY H., Petitioner,

v.

The SUPERIOR COURT of San Diego County, Respondent;

San Diego County Health and Human Services Agency, Real Party in Interest.

No. D035464.

Court of Appeal, Fourth District, Division 1.

July 28, 2000.

At time of six-month child dependency review hearing, mother who was denied reunification services with dependent child requested a contested hearing be set on issue of substantial probability of return of the child to her custody by the 12-month date. The Superior Court, San Diego County, J510854C, Glorene Franco, Referee, denied mother's request and set hearing to terminate mother's parental rights. Mother sought review by filing petition for extraordinary relief. The Court of Appeal, Work, J., held that mother was not entitled to set a contested hearing on issue of substantial probability of return of child to her custody.

Petition denied.

1. Infants ⇐203

Mother who was denied reunification services with her child was not entitled to set contested hearing on issue of substantial probability of return of child to her custody, in absence of a motion to change, modify, or set aside court order or to terminate jurisdiction of court; if reunification services had not been provided to father, case would have been referred to termination of parental rights hearing upon denial of services to mother, and to allow mother to delay reference to such hearing without any showing of changed circumstances would defeat purpose of timely providing child with permanent and safe home. West's Ann.Cal.Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5, 366.26, 388.

2. Infants ⇐203

Parents in termination of parental rights proceedings generally have a right to a contested hearing on issues to be determined by the court; however, such a right does not apply where the court has

10. El Monte's claims of prejudice concern the burdens of bearing unreimbursed contributions to the county ERAF fund, and the difficulties in making financial projections and budget decisions prior to obtaining a decision on its claims. We recognize, as did the Commission, the frustration procedural delays may cause. However, since the Commission reached the legally correct decision, the asserted errors did not prejudice El Monte with respect to the only matter at issue here, the reimbursability of its ERAF contributions. In that sense, El Monte has failed to establish cognizable prejudice.

Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co., supra, 119 Cal.App.3d at p. 801, 174 Cal.Rptr. 348.) Defendant, to rebut plaintiff's evidence, needed to show the lack of foreseeability of plaintiff's use, not its own intentions. Again, the conduct of defendant is not in issue, but the adequacy of the product itself.

DEVELOPING TECHNOLOGY

[10] Finally, defendant claims that because car seats were a part of a "developing technology and changing state of the art," conduct of other manufacturers was relevant. Defendant contends that Grimshaw and Titus, wherein the appellate courts upheld the disallowance of custom and practice evidence and instructions, are distinguishable from the present case as the available alternative designs were well known throughout the respective industries. We disagree.

Evidence of what other manufacturers were doing would be admissible if offered to show capability; here, it was mere practice. Proof that no alternate, safer design was feasible also would be admissible in the weighing process which compares risks with benefits. The uncertain quality of an available alternate design may be relevant to punitive damages; however, admission of such evidence does not open the door to proof that others in the trade were failing to use knowledge available to them.

CONCLUSION

Erroneous admission of evidence requires reversal only when, absent error, "plaintiff would have stood a reasonable chance of obtaining a more favorable verdict. [Citations.]" (Downing v. Barrett Mobile Home Transport, Inc. (1974) 38 Cal.App.3d 579, 525, 113 Cal.Rptr. 561.) In the present case admission of several pieces of irrelevant evidence clearly disadvantaged plaintiff. With the court's imprimatur, the jury was allowed to hear and consider the prevalency of similar child carrier devices, the fact that none of these products carried a warning against use in a car, and that none of these products lacking warnings had been recalled by the federal government. The jury's attention was inexorably shifted toward the reasonableness of defendant's behavior and turned away from the design of the Infantseat.

The giving of appropriate jury instructions can reduce the prejudicial effect of erroneously admitted evidence. (See 6 Witkin, Cal.Procedure (2d ed. 1971 pt. I) Appeal, § 312, p. 4291.) Here, however, the jury instructions, combined with the judge's earlier remarks, only served to exacerbate, rather than cure the prejudice.

Because the errors flowing from the misuse of the term state of the art were so serious and almost amounted to an informal direction of a defense verdict, we need not address other claimed errors, including other instructional errors, the admission of information concerning Medi-Cal payments, and the defense comment to the jurors that plaintiff "would be taken care of" in any event.

The judgment is reversed.

OPINION

THE CASE

By its petition for writ of mandamus and its complaint for declaratory judgment plaintiff sought to compel payment of its claim against the State of California (the State) for costs of business goodwill it incurred in an eminent domain proceeding as a result of the enactment of chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975. Specifically, plaintiff asked the court to order the State Controller to pay plaintiff $71,350, plus interest, from a "State budget line item he deems appropriate" or, alternatively, to direct the State Controller to pay the amount from a line item the court deems appropriate. The trial court concluded that the State was liable to plaintiff for payment of business goodwill, but that the court could not order subvention from state funds. It therefore entered judgment denying the peremptory writ of mandamus. Plaintiff filed a timely notice of appeal.

|780 On appeal, defendants argue for the first time, as we believe they may, that plaintiff's payment for business goodwill in a condemnation proceeding it elected to pursue does not constitute a state-mandated cost. We agree and find it unnecessary to discuss the other contentions of the parties.

THE FACTS

We include only a brief statement of the undisputed facts which are essential to resolution of the pivotal legal issue involved, i.e., whether plaintiff's payment for business goodwill in the proceeding it initiated to condemn property for its use is a state-mandated cost.

On April 8, 1980, the Merced County Superior Court entered a final order of condemnation in the case entitled City of Merced v. Rodney Barbour and Thomas L. Barbour. This order required plaintiff to pay, along with other sums, $71,350 allocated to loss of goodwill pursuant to the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.510. Plaintiff applied to the State for reimbursement of that amount under the provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2201 et seq. Plaintiff's application for reimbursement was directed to the State Board of Control. That board approved plaintiff's claim. It was included, along with other similar claims, as a line item in chapter 1090, Statutes of 1981.

The Legislature deleted from chapter 1090 all claims seeking reimbursement for business goodwill under chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975 (1275 claims). Additionally, the Legislature included in chapter 1090, as amended, a direction that the Board of Control not accept, or submit to the Legislature, any more 1275 claims.

After plaintiff received notice of the above-mentioned action of the Legislature, it initiated this case.

DISCUSSION

I. The State may assert a new legal theory on appeal.

Defendants admitted in their answer to the petition for writ of mandamus that chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, mandated a new program or increased level of service under provisions of the Revenue and Taxation Code. At the hearing on the petition, defendants stipulated to the same effect and added that plaintiff had not requested that mandate. For the first time on appeal, defendants argue that in governmental-entity-initiated eminent domain proceedings payment for business goodwill pursuant to the requirements of chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, is not a state-mandated cost subject to reimbursement by the State. Defendants admit this represents a change 781 in their position but that they mistakenly took a position in the trial court inconsistent with the clear manifestation of the intent of the Legislature.

To support their position that defendants may argue on appeal at variance with their answer and admission in the trial court, defendants rely on Barton v. Owen (1977) 71 Cal.App.3d 484, 139 Cal.Rptr. 494. There the plaintiff sought medical treatment from defendant for acute sinusitis. After a series of unsuccessful treatments, plaintiff developed a brain abscess which resulted in a prefrontal lobotomy. The plaintiff tried the case on the theory that the physician was negligent in not taking a culture and sensitivity test as part of his diagnosis. He did not prevail. On appeal, plaintiff argued the trial court erred in instructing the jury on contributory negligence. Additionally, plaintiff stated a new theory that failure to take the culture and sensitivity test was negligence as a matter of law. The court allowed the new legal theory on appeal.

[1, 2] Plaintiff points to 3 Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed. 1971) Pleadings, sections 342–344, pages 2009–2011, for the general rule that an admission of fact may not be argued differently on appeal. We agree, but that is not what defendants seek to do. Here, the question of whether a cost is state-mandated is purely a question of law. This court is not limited by the interpretation of statutes by the trial court. (See In re Davis (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 919, 921, 151 Cal.Rptr. 29; Barton v. Owen, supra, 71 Cal.App.3d at p. 491, 139 Cal. Rptr. 494.) Thus defendants may argue their new legal theory on appeal.

II. Payment of goodwill is not a state-mandated cost.

By this appeal, plaintiff seeks to compel reimbursement of its payment for business goodwill in a proceeding to acquire property under its power of eminent domain. Plaintiff can succeed only if the payment for which it seeks reimbursement was a state-mandated cost. Our decision on this issue turns upon the meaning of various statutory provisions. In examining the relevant statutes we apply the basic rules of statutory construction stated by the court in Marin Hospital Dist. v. Rothman (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 495, 498–499, 188 Cal.Rptr. 828.

> "The meaning of a statute must, in the first instance, be sought in the language in which it is framed, and if that is plain the sole judicial function is to enforce it according to its terms [citation]; where the language is clear there is no room for interpretation [citation]. And courts will not determine the wisdom, desirability, or propriety of statutes enacted by the Legislature. [Citation.]
> "'Moreover, "every statute should be construed with reference to the whole system of law of which it is a part so

782 that all may be harmonized and have effect." ' (Select Base Materials v. Board of Equal. (1959) 51 Cal.2d 640, 645 [335 P.2d 672] ....) We inquire further into 'the whole system of law of which [Government Code section 26912] is a part.' " (Emphasis in original.)

[3] Also applicable in this case is the rule that administrative interpretations of statutes should be accorded great respect and followed if not clearly erroneous. (Noroian v. Department of Administration (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 651, 655, 89 Cal. Rptr. 889.) We also rely on extrinsic aids such as the history of relevant statutes, committee reports, and the legislative debates. (Ibid.)

Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231, subdivision (a), includes a direction that: "The state shall reimburse each local agency for all 'costs mandated by the state', as defined in Section 2207....", Section 2207, in turn, provides in pertinent part: " 'Costs mandated by the state' means any increased costs which a local agency is required to incur as a result of the following: [¶] (a) Any law enacted after January 1, 1973, which mandates a new program or an increased level of service of an existing program; ..."

Chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975 (Code Civ. Proc., § 1230.010 et seq.) revised and recodified the eminent domain laws of this state. The revisions included a new requirement that, upon proof of satisfaction of four stated conditions, the owner of a business conducted on the condemned property is entitled to compensation for loss of goodwill (Code Civ.Proc., § 1263.510).[1]

The costs for which plaintiff seeks reimbursement in this proceeding were incurred by reason of this newly imposed obligation to compensate for loss of business goodwill.[2] This squarely presents the issue which we conclude is dispositive of plaintiff's appeal, i.e., is the increased cost so incurred as a result of enactment of chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, a cost which plaintiff was required or mandated to incur? 783

In support of the statutory construction it urges, plaintiff points to the Board of Control's decision in March 1981 that 1275 claims were for reimbursement of state-mandated costs. Plaintiff correctly notes that such a finding by a state agency is accorded great weight unless shown to be clearly erroneous. (Noroian v. Department of Administration, supra, 11 Cal. App.3d at p. 655, 89 Cal.Rptr. 889.)

Defendants counter that the Legislature declared its intent that 1275 claims not be considered state-mandated by rejecting the line item of the budget providing funds for payment of 1275 claims and by directing that the Board of Control not approve or submit to the Legislature any more 1275 claims. (Ch. 1090, Stats.1981.) Defendants rely on Tyler v. State of California (1982) 134 Cal.App.3d 973, 977, 185 Cal. Rptr. 49, to support their position that, where a statute is unclear, a later expression of the Legislature bearing upon the intent of the prior statute may be properly

1. Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.510 provides:

"(a) The owner of a business conducted on the property taken, or on the remainder if such property is part of a larger parcel, shall be compensated for loss of goodwill if the owner proves all of the following:

"(1) The loss is caused by the taking of the property or the injury to the remainder.

"(2) The loss cannot reasonably be prevented by a relocation of the business or by taking steps and adopting procedures that a reasonably prudent person would take and adopt in preserving the goodwill.

"(3) Compensation for the loss will not be included in payments under Section 7262 of the Government Code.

"(4) Compensation for the loss will not be duplicated in the compensation otherwise awarded to the owner.

"(b) Within the meaning of this article, 'goodwill' consists of the benefits that accrue to a business as a result of its location, reputation for dependability, skill or quality, and any other circumstances resulting in probable retention of old or acquisition of new patronage."

2. Until enactment of chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, goodwill was not compensable in eminent domain proceedings. (See 5 Witkin, Summary of Cal.Law (8th ed. 1974) Constitutional Law, § 586, p. 3882.)

considered in determining the effect and meaning of the prior statute.

More significantly, defendants argue that the Legislature made clear the discretionary nature of acquisition of property by eminent domain by passage of Code of Civil Procedure section 1230.030. Section 1230.030 was included within chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, the same legislation that changed the law of eminent domain to require compensation for business goodwill. Section 1230.030 provides:

"Nothing in this title requires that the power of eminent domain be exercised to acquire property necessary for public use. Whether property necessary for public use is to be acquired by purchase or other means or by eminent domain is a decision left to the discretion of the person authorized to acquire the property."

[4] We agree that the Legislature intended for payment of goodwill to be discretionary. The above authorities reveal that whether a city or county decides to exercise eminent domain is, essentially, an option of the city or county, rather than a mandate of the state. The fundamental concept is that the city or county is not required to exercise eminent domain. If, however, the power of eminent domain is exercised, then the city will be required to pay for loss of goodwill. Thus, payment for loss of goodwill is not a state-mandated cost.

This construction is confirmed by subsequent legislative actions, including the enactment of Senate Bill No. 90 (Russell), 1784 1979–1980 Regular Session. Among other things, that bill (Sen. Bill No. 90) added Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207, subdivision (h):

" 'Costs mandated by the state' means any increased costs which a local agency is required to incur as the result of the following:

"(h) Any statute enacted after January 1, 1973, or executive order issued after January 1, 1973, which adds new requirements to an existing optional program or service and thereby increases the cost of such program or service if the local agencies have no reasonable alternatives other than to continue the optional program."

Senate Bill No. 90 became effective on July 1, 1981, after plaintiff incurred the cost of business goodwill for which it seeks reimbursement. Subdivision (h) appears to have been included in the bill to provide for reimbursement of increased costs in an optional program such as eminent domain when the local agency has no reasonable alternative to eminent domain. The legislative history of Senate Bill No. 90 supports the conclusion that subdivision (h) was added to Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207 to extend state liability rather than to clarify existing law. The Report of the Assembly Revenue and Taxation Committee (June 9, 1980) includes a statement:

"SB 90 further defines 'mandated costs' in Sections 4 and 5 to include the following:

"...

"e. Where a statute or executive order adds new requirements to an existing optional program, which increases costs if the local agency has no reasonable alternative than to continue that optional program." (Rep., p. 1, emphasis in original.)

Additionally, the Ways and Means Committee's Staff Analysis (Aug. 4, 1980) notes that Senate Bill No. 90:

"Expands the definition of local reimbursable costs mandated and paid by the state to include:

"...

"e. Statutes or executive orders adding new requirements to an existing optional program, which increases costs if the local agency has no reasonable alternative than to continue that optional program." (P. 2, emphasis in original.)

Both reports quoted above characterize 1785 Senate Bill No. 90 as expanding the definition of local reimbursable costs. The Legislative Analyst's Report of July 30, 1980, on Senate Bill No. 90 similarly includes a statement that the bill expands the definition of state-mandated costs. Such characterizations of the purpose of Senate Bill No. 90 are consistent only with the conclusion that, until that bill was enacted, increased costs incurred in an optional program such as eminent domain were not state-mandated. Thus the cost of business goodwill for which plaintiff was required by chapter 1275, Statutes of 1975, to pay in April 1980, was not a state-mandated cost. It follows that the trial court properly denied the petition for a writ of mandamus to compel payment of that cost. Our conclusion on this pivotal issue makes it unnecessary to consider plaintiff's contentions that article XIIIB of the California Constitution requires the State to provide a subvention of funds to reimburse state-mandated costs, that there are appropriated funds available to pay plaintiff's claim, and that a peremptory writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy in this case.

The judgment is affirmed.

Eugene Newton GRIFFITH, Defendant and Appellant.

Cr.6742./F1863.

Court of Appeal, Fifth District.

March 27, 1984.

Defendant was convicted before the Superior Court, Kern County, Walter Osborn, Jr., J., of robbery, and he was placed on probation. Following revocation of his probation and imposition of an upper term of imprisonment, defendant appealed. The Court of Appeal, Andreen, J., held that: (1) although defendant was fully protected by his Fifth Amendment privilege from disclosing burglary he committed three days prior to original sentencing hearing, he had no right to deceive court by stating through his counsel that he was a changed personality who had "finally gotten back together"; (2) rule prohibiting trial court from relying upon conduct subsequent to granting of probation in imposing term of imprisonment was not violated where trial court, in selecting upper term of imprisonment following probation revocation, considered a crime which was committed after charged offense but which was unknown to sentencing court at time defendant was admitted to probation; and (3) trial court did not abuse its discretion in selecting upper term.

The only decisional authority the majority cite is a New York trial court decision, People ex rel. Lewis v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1978) 98 Misc.2d 856, 414 N.Y.S.2d 823, but that decision in fact supports this dissent. In the New York case, the Superintendent of Insurance had prohibited two insurers from surrendering their licenses because they were obliged by statute to renew no-fault insurance policies. The court held that the superintendent could not require the insurer to renew policies and remain in business indefinitely. Since New York had no statute governing when and how companies could withdraw, the court sought to fashion a remedy itself. It concluded that the superintendent could require the insurers to service existing policies and "to renew certain other policies for a short period so that during such periods those presently insured may be able to obtain follow-up coverage[.]" (414 N.Y.S.2d at p. 830.) At the expiration of that period the insurers would be permitted to surrender their licenses. The decision thus supports the majority opinion's position on the broader issue which we need not decide—that once an insurer has withdrawn it is not statutorily required to renew policies. On the issue before us, however, its holding that an insurer may be required to renew policies after it has applied to withdraw is inconsistent with the position of the majority opinion, and consistent with the views of the Insurance Commissioner and this dissent.

My conclusion is simple: Travelers remains an admitted insurer until the commissioner permits it to withdraw and cancels its certificate. As an admitted insurer, it must obey all laws regulating such insurers. Nothing in section 1861.03, subdivision (c), makes that provision an exception to this rule. Thus, whether or not Travelers could refuse to renew once it has [16] actually withdrawn from California, it had no right to do so upon the filing of an application to withdraw. The commissioner properly found that Travelers' nonrenewal notices did not comply with California law.

This conclusion is the only one consistent with the spirit, as well as the letter, of Proposition 103. That initiative was not enacted to make it easy for insurers to terminate coverage, but to make insurance more available to Californians and to protect them against loss of coverage.

I would deny the petition for a peremptory writ of mandate.

The STATE of California et al., Defendants and Respondents.

No. S006188.

Supreme Court of California, In Bank.

Jan. 29, 1990.

City brought class action seeking subvention from state of costs incurred in providing unemployment compensation coverage for its employees. The Superior Court, Sacramento County, Darrel W. Lewis, J., granted summary judgment for State, and city appealed. The Court of Appeal, 247 Cal.Rptr. 109, reversed and remanded. The Supreme Court granted review, superseding the opinion of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court, Eagleson, J., held that state was not required to subvent costs incurred by local governments under statute mandating extension of unemployment compensation coverage to local government employer.

States ⇐111

County and municipal employers, claiming that their unemployment compensation costs were subject to state subvention, were not required to comply with administrative "tax refund" procedures prior to bringing suit; employers were statutorily authorized to bring suit to declare unenforceable State's unfunded mandate to provide unemployment compensation coverage to their employees. Generally, collateral estoppel bars party to prior action, or one in privity with him, from relitigating issues finally decided against him in earlier action; but when issue is question of law rather than of fact, prior determination is not conclusive either if injustice would result or if public interest requires that relitigation not be foreclosed.

3. States ⇐111

Under public-interest exception, State was not collaterally estopped by prior adverse decision from contesting its continuing obligation to fund unemployment compensation costs of local governmental employers.

4. States ⇐111

5. States ⇐111

Statute extending mandatory unemployment insurance coverage to local government employees imposed no "unique" obligation on local governments, nor required them to provide new or increased governmental services to public, and thus State was not required to subvent costs incurred by local governments in providing such coverage. Statute extending mandatory unemployment insurance coverage to local government employees imposed "federally mandated" costs on local governments, in that statute was adopted by state under federal coercion tantamount to compulsion, and thus local governments were not limited by constitutional and statutory tax and spending ceilings; subject to overriding limitations on tax rates, local governments could levy and spend as necessary to meet expenses of their unemployment compensation coverage obligations. [157] EAGLESON, Justice.

In response to changes in federal law, chapter 2 of the Statutes of 1978 (hereafter chapter 2/78) extended mandatory coverage under the state's unemployment insurance law to include state and local governments and nonprofit corporations. Here we consider whether, in chapter 2/78, the state "mandate[d] a new program or higher level of service" on the local agencies, and must therefore reimburse local compliance costs under article XIII B of the California Constitution and related statutes.

We conclude that the state is not required to reimburse the chapter 2/78 expenses of local governments. The obligations imposed by chapter 2/78 fail to meet the "program" and "service" standards for mandatory subvention we recently set forth in County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 46, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202 (hereafter County of Los Angeles). Chapter 2/78 imposes no "unique" obligation on local governments, nor does it require them to provide new or increased governmental services to the public. The Court of Appeal decision, finding the expenses reimbursable, must therefore be reversed.

However, our holding does not leave local agencies powerless to counter the fiscal pressures created by chapter 2/78. Though provisions of the Revenue and Taxation Code limit local property tax levies, and article XIII B itself places spending limits on both state and local governments, "costs mandated by the federal government" are expressly excluded from these ceilings. Chapter 2/78 imposes such "federally mandated" costs, because it was adopted by the state under federal coercion tantamount to compulsion. Hence, subject to overriding limitations on taxation rates (see, e.g., Cal. Const., art. XIII A), both state and local governments may levy and spend for their chapter 2/78 coverage obligations without reduction of the fiscal limits applicable to other needs and services.

I. FACTS.

In 1972, and again in 1973, the Legislature enacted comprehensive schemes for local property tax relief. Though frequently amended thereafter, these statutes retained three principal features. First, they placed a limit on the local property tax rate. Second, they required the state to reimburse local governments for their costs resulting from state laws "which mandate ... new program[s] or ... increased level[s] of service" at the local level. Finally, they allowed local governments to exceed their property taxation limits to fund certain other nondiscretionary expenses, including "costs mandated by the federal government." (Stats.1972, ch. 1406, § 14.7, pp. 2961–2967; Stats.1973, ch. 358, § 3, pp. 783–790; Rev. & Tax.Code, §§ 2206, 2260 et seq., 2271; former §§ 2164.3, 2165, 2167, 2169, 2207, 2231; Gov.Code, § 17500 et seq.)

Since adoption of the Social Security Act in 1935, federal law has provided powerful incentives to enactment of unemployment insurance protection by the individual states. In current form, the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (hereafter FUTA) (26 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq.) assesses an annual tax upon the gross wages paid by covered private employers nationwide. The tax rate, which has varied over the years, stands at 6.2 percent for calendar year 1990. (26 U.S.C. §§ 3301(1), 3306.) However, employers in a state with a federally "certified" unemployment insurance program may credit their contributions to the state system against up to 90 percent of the federal tax (currently computed at 6 percent for this purpose). (Id., §§ 3302–3304.) A "certified" state program also qualifies for federal administrative funds. (42 U.S.C. §§ 501–503.)

California enacted its unemployment insurance system "on the eve of the adoption of the Social Security Act" in 1935 (Steward Machine Co. v. Davis (1937) 301 U.S. 548, 587–588, 57 S.Ct. 883, 891, 81 L.Ed. 1279; see Stats.1935, ch. 352, § 1 et seq., p. 1226 et seq.) and has sought to maintain federal compliance ever since. Every other state has also adopted an unemployment insurance plan in response to the federal stimulus.

In 1976, Congress enacted Public Law number 94–566 (hereafter Public Law 94–566). Insofar as pertinent here, Public Law 94–566 amended FUTA to require for the first time that a "certified" state plan include coverage of the employees of public agencies. (Pub.L. No. 94–566 (Oct. 20, 1976) § 115(a), 90 Stat. 2667, 2670; 26 U.S.C. §§ 3304(a)(6)(A), 3309(a); see 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(7).) States which did not alter their unemployment compensation laws accordingly faced loss of the federal tax credit and administrative subsidy.

The Legislature thereafter adopted chapter 2/78 to conform California's system to Public Law 94–566. Among other things, chapter 2/78 effectively requires the state and all local governments, beginning January 1, 1978, to participate in the state unemployment insurance system on behalf of their employees. (Stats.1978, ch. 2, §§ 12, 24, 31, 36.5, 58–61, pp. 12–14, 16, 18, 24–27; Unemp.Ins.Code, §§ 135, subd. (a), 605, 634.5, 802–804.)

In November 1979, the voters adopted Proposition 4, adding article XIII B to the state Constitution. Article XIII B—the so-called "Gann limit"—restricts the amounts state and local governments may [59] appropriate and spend each year from the "proceeds of taxes." (§§ 1, 3, 8, subds. (a)–(c).)[1] In language similar to that of earlier statutes, article XIII B also requires state reimbursement of resulting local costs whenever, after January 1, 1975, "the Legislature or any state agency mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government,...." (§ 6.) Such mandatory state subventions are excluded from the local agency's spending limit, but included within the state's. (§ 8, subds. (a), (b).) Finally, article XIII B excludes from either the state or local spending limit any "[a]ppropriations required for purposes of complying with mandates of the courts or the federal government which, without discretion, require an expenditure for additional services or which unavoidably make the providing of existing services more costly." (§ 9, subd. (b) [hereafter section 9(b)], italics added.)

The City of Sacramento (City) and the County of Los Angeles (County) filed claims with the State Board of Control (Board) (see Rev. & Tax.Code, former § 2250 et seq.; see now Gov.Code, § 17550 et seq.) seeking state subvention of the costs imposed on them by chapter 2/78 during 1978 and portions of 1979. The Board denied the claims, ruling that chapter 2/78 was an enactment required by federal law and thus was not a reimbursable state mandate. On mandamus (Code Civ.Proc., § 1094.5; Rev. & Tax.Code, former § 2253.5, see now Gov.Code, § 17559), the Sacramento Superior Court overruled the Board and found the costs reimbursable. The court ordered the Board to determine the amounts of the City's and the County's individual claims, and also to adopt "parameters and guidelines" to be applied in determining "these ... and other claims" arising under chapter 2/78. (Rev. & Tax.Code, former § 2253.2; see now Gov.Code, §§ 17555, 17557.)[2]

In City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal.App.3d 182, 203 Cal. Rptr. 258 (hereafter Sacramento I), the Court of Appeal affirmed. Among other things, the court concluded (pp. 194–199, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258) that chapter 2/78 [60] imposed state-mandated costs reimbursable under section 6 of article XIII B, since the potential loss of federal funds and tax credits did not render Public Law 94–566 so coercive as to constitute a "[mandate] ... of the federal government" under section 9(b). (Italics added.) We denied hearing.

On remand, the Board determined the amounts due on the claims originally submitted by the City and the County. As required by the judgment, the Board also adopted "parameters and guidelines" for reimbursement of chapter 2/78 costs to all affected local agencies. However, during the 1984 session of the Legislature, no bills were introduced for reimbursement of pre–1984 costs, and bills to fund costs in and after 1984 failed passage.

1. Article XIII B is to be distinguished from article XIII A, which was adopted as Proposition 13 at the June 1978 election. Article XIII A imposes a direct constitutional limit on state and local power to adopt and levy taxes. Articles XIII A and XIII B work in tandem, together restricting California governments' power both to levy and to spend for public purposes. Moreover, to the extent "federally mandated" costs are exempt from prior statutory limits on local taxation (see ante, at p. 141), article XIII A eliminates the exemption insofar as it would allow levies in excess of the constitutional ceiling.

All further section references are to article XIII B of the California Constitution, unless otherwise indicated.

2. The claims for reimbursement were originally premised entirely on Revenue and Taxation Code section 2201 et seq. While the City's and the County's mandamus petitions were pending in superior court, article XIII B was adopted. The City and the County amended their petitions to include article XIII B as an additional basis for relief, and the case proceeded accordingly.

From and after the decision in Sacramento I, the City paid "under protest" its quarterly billings from the Employment Development Department (EDD) for unemployment compensation. Each payment included a claim for refund of unemployment taxes pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1176 et seq. EDD responded to the refund claims by referring the City to its statutory subvention remedies.

Accordingly, in July 1985, the City began returning its quarterly billings unpaid. It thereupon commenced the instant class action in Sacramento Superior Court on behalf of all local governments in the state. Named as defendants were the State of California, the Governor, EDD, the state Controller and Treasurer, and the Legislature. The complaint sought (1) injunctive and declaratory relief barring enforcement of chapter 2/78 in the absence of state subvention; (2) a writ of mandate directing that past, current, and future subvention funds be appropriated and disbursed, and/or that EDD pay local agencies' past, current, and future unemployment-insurance contributions from its own budget; and (3) damages for past failures to reimburse.

Shortly after this suit was filed, the Legislature appropriated some chapter 2/78 funds for fiscal year 1984–1985 (Stats.1985, ch. 1217, §§ 12, 17, subd. (b), pp. 4148, 4150), and it subsequently authorized limited funds in the 1986 Budget Act (Stats. 1986, ch. 186, § 2.00, p. 1006). On defendants' demurrer, the trial court later dismissed plaintiffs' claims for reimbursement for these post–1984 periods.[3] Thereafter, the trial court certified the suit as a class action and granted plaintiffs' motion for summary adjudication of issues based on Sacramento I.

[6] While the case remained pending at the trial level, we decided County of Los Angeles. There we held that article XIII B, and earlier subvention statutes, require state reimbursement only when the state compels local governments to provide new or upgraded "programs that carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public, or ..., to implement a state policy, impose[s] unique requirements on local governments [that] do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state." (43 Cal.3d at p. 56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202, italics added.)

Defendants in this case thereupon moved for summary judgment, urging that extension of unemployment insurance coverage to public employees satisfied neither reimbursement standard set forth in County of Los Angeles. The trial court agreed and awarded summary judgment.

The Court of Appeal reversed on two independent grounds. First, the court ruled that defendants were collaterally estopped by Sacramento I to relitigate the reimbursability of chapter 2/78 costs. Second, the court found that chapter 2/78 imposed "unique requirements" on local governments, within the meaning of County of Los Angeles, since the legislation was aimed solely at local agencies and subjected them to obligations from which they were previously exempt.

II. JURISDICTION; PLAINTIFFS' EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES.

[1] After we granted review, we asked the parties and amici curiae[4] to brief whether the current suit is jurisdictionally barred by any failure of plaintiffs to exhaust their remedies (see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal.2d 280, 291–295, 109 P.2d 942), or for any other reason. If so, the summary judgment for defendants against all plaintiffs was proper notwithstanding the merits of the subvention claim. In that event, the judgment of the Court of Appeal must be reversed without consideration of the substantive issues raised by the appeal.

3. The trial court also sustained the Legislature's demurrer without leave to amend and dismissed the Legislature as a party defendant. The Court of Appeal affirmed the dismissal in a separate proceeding. (See City of Sacramento v. California State Legislature (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 393, 231 Cal.Rptr. 686.)

4. Amicus curiae briefs were filed on behalf of plaintiffs by (1) the League of California Cities, the Association of California Water Agencies, and the Fire District Association of California, and (2) the County of Los Angeles and the County Supervisors Association of California.

However, we find no failure to exhaust which would bar us from reaching the merits. Defendants concede plaintiffs exhausted all administrative remedies provided by the statutes governing subvention of state-mandated costs. The concession appears correct, at least as to the City and the County. These two agencies filed timely claims for reimbursement of expenses incurred to comply with chapter 2/78. When the Board initially denied the claims, the City and the County pursued judicial remedies culminating in [62] Sacramento I. By direction of the judgment in Sacramento I, the Board ultimately upheld the City's and County's 1979 claims, determined their amount, and adopted "parameters and guidelines" for statewide reimbursement that were later included in the Board's government-claims report to the Legislature. (Rev. & Tax.Code, former §§ 2253.2, 2255, subd. (a).)

These procedures exhausted the City's and the County's administrative and judicial avenues, short of this suit, to obtain redress on the claims adjudicated in Sacramento I. Insofar as the Legislature thereafter declined to appropriate the necessary funds for disbursement by the Controller, the City and the County were authorized to bring an enforcement action. (Id., former § 2255, subd. (c); Gov.Code, § 17612, subd. (b); County of Contra Costa v. State of California (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 62, 72, 222 Cal.Rptr. 750; see Carmel Valley Fire Protection Dist. v. State of California (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 521, 548–549, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795.) [5]

Defendants urge, however, that plaintiffs essentially are seeking resolution of a "tax" question—the validity vel non of their unemployment tax contributions—but have failed to satisfy the special procedures applicable to such cases. Defendants insist that because article XIII, section 32, of the California Constitution broadly precludes any suit to enjoin or impede collection of a tax (e.g., Calfarm Ins. Co. v. Deukmejian (1989) 48 Cal.3d 805, 838–841, 258 Cal.Rptr. 161, 771 P.2d 1247; Western Oil & Gas Assn. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1987) 44 Cal.3d 208, 213, 242 Cal.Rptr. 334, 745 P.2d 1360; Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1980) 27 Cal.3d 277, 279–284, 165 Cal.Rptr. 122, 611 P.2d 463), plaintiffs' claims for declaratory and injunctive relief are barred.

The only remedy constitutionally open to plaintiffs, defendants assert, is to pay their unemployment "taxes" and then seek a "refund" under the "exclusive" procedures set forth in the Unemployment Insurance Code. (Unemp.Ins.Code, §§ 1176 et seq., 1241, subd. (a).) Insofar as plaintiffs' complaint does seek reimbursement for past contributions, defendants suggest, plaintiffs have not correctly pursued the Unemployment Insurance Code procedures.

We question, but do not decide, whether a public entity's contributions to the state unemployment insurance system can ever constitute a "tax" subject [63] to article XIII, section 32. Even if so, defendants' claim lacks merit under the circumstances presented here.

"The policy behind [article XIII,] section 32 is to allow revenue collection to continue during [tax] litigation so that essential public services dependent on the funds are not unnecessarily disrupted. [Citation.]...." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 283, 165 Cal.Rptr. 122, 611 P.2d 463.) The administrative "refund" procedures established by the unemployment insurance law are designed to ensure initial examination of unemployment tax disputes by the agency with specific expertise in that area.

However, plaintiffs attempt no challenge, direct or indirect, to the validity or application of the unemployment insurance law as such, or to the propriety of any "tax" assessed thereunder. Nor have plaintiffs bypassed the agency or procedures established to decide such disputes.

5. In 1986, the Legislature repealed sections 2250–2255 of the Revenue and Taxation Code. (Stats.1986, ch. 879, §§ 37–48, p. 3047.) The Board's functions have been transferred to the Commission on State Mandates (Commission), but the procedures for administrative and judicial determination of subvention disputes remain functionally similar. (Gov.Code, §§ 17500 et seq., 17600 et seq.)

Rather, plaintiffs claim that all their costs of affording unemployment compensation to their employees are subject to a statutory and constitutional subvention which the state refuses to make. It is incidental that these costs happen to include what might be characterized as a "tax." As the subvention statutes require, plaintiffs City and County have pursued all available remedies before the agency (formerly the Board, now the Commission) created to decide subvention issues; that agency has upheld their submitted claims in full, but the necessary appropriations have been withheld.

Under these circumstances, the Legislature has concluded that a local entity should not be forced to continue incurring the unfunded costs subject to "refund." Rather, the entity is expressly authorized to bring suit to declare such an unfunded mandate unenforceable. (Rev. & Tax. Code, former § 2255, subd. (c); Gov.Code, § 17612, subd. (b).) [6]

The importance of such a remedy stems from the fundamental legislative prerogative to control appropriations. Under the separation of powers doctrine, the Legislature cannot be compelled to appropriate or authorize the disbursement of specific funds. (Mandel v. Myers (1981) 29 Cal.3d 531, 540, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.) Since the Legislature will have demonstrated its refusal to fund a particular mandate by the time a mandamus action is filed, the literal "tax refund" process urged by defendants may often be meaningless.

Insofar as plaintiffs also seek reimbursement for past expenses, similar considerations dictate that the governing statutes are those created to resolve subvention problems rather than garden-variety disputes over the unemployment insurance tax.[7] We find nothing in the language, history, or purpose of article XIII, section 32, or of the unemployment insurance law, which bars the instant complaint. We therefore have jurisdiction to decide whether chapter 2/78 constitutes a reimbursable mandate.

III. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL; RES JUDICATA.

However, plaintiffs claim that because Sacramento I "finally" decided whether chapter 2/78 constitutes a reimbursable state mandate, the state and its agents are collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue here. The Court of Appeal agreed that the doctrine of collateral estoppel applies. Under the circumstances, we are not persuaded.

[2] Generally, collateral estoppel bars the party to a prior action, or one in privity with him, from relitigating issues finally decided against him in the earlier action. (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 874, 151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098.) "... But when the issue is a question of law rather than of fact, the prior determination is not conclusive either if injustice would result or if the public interest requires that relitigation not be foreclosed. [Citations.]...." (Consumers Lobby Against Monopolies v. Public Utilities Com. (1979) 25 Cal.3d 891, 902, 160 Cal.Rptr. 124, 603 P.2d 41.)

[3] Even if the formal prerequisites for collateral estoppel are present here, the public-interest exception governs. Whether chapter 2/78 costs are reimbursable un-

6. Indeed, when the City filed protective claims for "refund" with EDD in the wake of Sacramento I, that agency consistently disclaimed authority to decide the subvention issue presented and "suggest[ed]" that the City pursue its remedies before the Commission.

7. As we note above, courts are powerless to compel appropriations per se. However, that fact does not render a prayer for reimbursement of past costs wholly meaningless. California courts have previously recognized judicial power to fashion other appropriate reimbursement remedies. (See, e.g., Carmel Valley Fire Protection Dist., supra, 190 Cal.App.3d at pp. 550–552, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795; also cf. Mandel, supra, 29 Cal.3d at pp. 535–537, 539–552, 174 Cal.Rptr. 841, 629 P.2d 935.) Such power is especially important where subvention is constitutionally compelled.

der article XIII B and parallel statutes constitutes a pure question of law. The state was the losing party in Sacramento I, and also the only entity legally affected by that decision. Thus, strict application of collateral estoppel would foreclose any reexamination of the holding of that case. The state would remain bound, and no other person would have occasion to challenge the precedent.

Yet the consequences of any error transcend those which would apply to mere private parties. If the result of Sacramento I is wrong but unimpeachable, taxpayers statewide will suffer unjustly the consequences of the state's continuing obligation to fund the chapter 2/78 costs of local agencies. On the other hand, if the state fails to appropriate the funds to meet this 165 obligation, and chapter 2/78 therefore cannot be enforced (Rev. & Tax.Code, former § 2255, subd. (c); Gov.Code, § 17612, subd. (b)), the resulting failure to comply with federal law could cost California employers millions.[8] Under these circumstances, neither stare decisis nor collateral estoppel can permanently foreclose our ability to examine the reimbursability of chapter 2/78 costs.[9]

[4] As below, plaintiffs also argue that reconsideration of Sacramento I is precluded by res judicata. They suggest that the prior litigation resolved not only the legal issues presented by this appeal, but all claims among the current parties as well.

Of course, res judicata and the rule of final judgments bar us from disturbing individual claims or causes of action, on behalf of specific agencies, which have been finally adjudicated and are no longer subject to review. (Code Civ.Proc., § 1908 et seq.; Slater, supra, 15 Cal.3d at p. 796, 126 Cal.Rptr. 225, 543 P.2d 593; Bernhard v. Bank of America (1942) 19 Cal.2d 807, 810, 122 P.2d 892.) However, the issues presented in the current action are not limited to the validity of any such finally adjudicated individual claims. Rather, they encompass the question of defendants' subvention obligations in general under chapter 2/78. We therefore conclude that defendants may contend in this lawsuit that chapter 2/78 is not a reimbursable state mandate.[10] We turn to the merits of that issue.

166 IV. "NEW PROGRAM" OR "INCREASED SERVICE"?

[5] As below, defendants urge that by extending unemployment insurance coverage to local government employees, the Legislature did not mandate a "new program" or an "increased" or "higher level of service" on local governments. Thus,

8. For these reasons, this case is distinguishable from Slater v. Blackwood (1975) 15 Cal.3d 791, 126 Cal.Rptr. 225, 543 P.2d 593, cited by the Court of Appeal. Slater, a suit between private parties, held only that the "injustice" exception to the rule of collateral estoppel cannot be based solely on an intervening change in the law. (P. 796, 126 Cal.Rptr. 225, 543 P.2d 593.) Here, as we note, overriding public-interest issues are involved.

9. By the same token, the state has not ignored available remedies or otherwise "waived" its right to argue the issues presented by this appeal. The state immediately raised the applicability of County of Los Angeles to this suit once our decision therein became final.

Plaintiffs claim the instant trial court had no power to grant summary judgment for defendants on authority of County of Los Angeles. Plaintiffs assert that because defendants failed to seek timely mandamus review of the prior, contrary order granting summary adjudication of issues in plaintiffs' favor, the issues decided by the earlier order must be "deemed established." (See Code Civ.Proc., § 437c, subd. (f).) We disagree. Failure to challenge a summary adjudication order by the discretionary avenue of writ review cannot foreclose a party from asserting subsequent changes in law which render such a pretrial order incorrect.

10. Plaintiffs imply that because the original claims by the City and the County were filed decided as statutory "test claims" (Rev. & Tax. Code, former §§ 2218, 2253.2; see now Gov. Code, §§ 17555, 17557), the "cause of action" adjudicated therein encompasses all claims by all local agencies for all years. However, the obvious purpose of the statutory "test claim" procedure is to resolve the legal issue whether particular state legislation creates a reimbursable mandate, not to adjudicate every individual claim for reimbursement which may thereafter accrue. The "test claim" result has precedential effect for all subsequent claims, but res judicata effect only for the individual claims which were actually adjudicated.

they assert, the local costs of providing such coverage are not subject to subvention under article XIII B, section 6, or parallel statutes. (Rev. & Tax.Code, former §§ 2207, 2231, subd. (a); Gov.Code, §§ 17514, 17561, subd. (a).) The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants on this basis. Contrary to the conclusions reached by the Court of Appeal, the trial court's ruling was correct.

Our analysis is controlled by our decision in County of Los Angeles. There we determined that a general increase in workers' compensation benefits did not, when applied to local governments, constitute a reimbursable state mandate under article XIII B.

In so holding, we focused on the particular language of article XIII B, section 6, which requires state subvention of a local government's costs of any "new program" or "increased level of service" imposed upon it by the state. We dismissed the notion that, by employing the quoted phrases, the voters intended all local costs resulting from compliance with state law to be subject to mandatory reimbursement. Rather, we explained, "[t]he concern which prompted the inclusion of section 6 in article XIII B was the perceived attempt by the state to enact legislation or adopt administrative orders creating programs to be administered by local agencies, thereby transferring to those agencies the fiscal responsibility for providing services which the state believed should be extended to the public...." (43 Cal.3d at p. 56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.)

Under these circumstances, we reasoned, the electorate must have intended the undefined terms "new program" and "increased level of service" to carry their "commonly understood meanings ...—programs that carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public, or laws which, to implement a state policy, impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state." (Ibid., italics added.)

Local governments' costs of complying with a general statewide increase in the level of workers' compensation benefits do not qualify under these standards, we concluded. As we noted, "... [w]orkers' compensation is not a program administered by local agencies to provide service to the public. Although local agencies must provide benefits to [67] their employees ..., they are indistinguishable in this respect from private employers...." (Id., at p. 58, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) [11]

Similar considerations apply here. By requiring local governments to provide unemployment compensation protection to their own employees, the state has not compelled provision of new or increased "service to the public" at the local level. Nor has it imposed a state policy "unique[ly]" on local governments. Most private employers in the state already were required to provide unemployment protection to their employees. Extension of this requirement to local governments, together with the state government and nonprofit corporations, merely makes the local agen-

11. While our discussion centered on the meaning of section 6 of article XIII B, it relied heavily on the legislative history of parallel provisions of the 1972 and 1973 property tax relief statutes. When article XIII B was adopted in November 1979, the Revenue and Taxation Code already required state subvention of local "[c]osts mandated by the state," defined as "any increased costs which a local agency is required to incur as a result of ... [¶] [a]ny law enacted after January 1, 1973, which mandates a new program or an increased level of service of an existing program." (Rev. & Tax.Code, former §§ 2207 [italics added], 2231, subd. (a).) However, a further statutory definition of "increased level of service" to include any state mandate "which makes necessary expanded or additional costs to a county, city and county, city, or special district" had been repealed in 1975. (County of Los Angeles, 43 Cal.3d at p. 55, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202; see Rev. & Tax.Code, former § 2231, subd. (e), repealed by Stats.1975, ch. 486, § 6, p. 999.) We found the repealer significant to the limited meaning of the statutory term "increased level of service" as later incorporated in article XIII B. (43 Cal.3d at pp. 55–56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) Our implicit conclusion, which we now make explicit, was that the statutory and constitutional concepts of reimbursable state-mandated costs are identical.

cies "indistinguishable in this respect from private employers."

Plaintiffs nonetheless suggest there are several bases for reaching a different result here than in County of Los Angeles. None of the asserted distinctions has merit.

Plaintiffs first note the proponents' declaration in the voters' pamphlet that the purpose of article XIII B, section 6, was to prevent the state from "forcing" unfunded programs on local agencies. Plaintiffs invoke this pamphlet language for the proposition that any new cost "forced" on local governments by state law is subject to subvention.

The claim is directly contrary to our holding in County of Los Angeles. As we explained, "[i]n ... context, the [pamphlet] phrase 'to force programs on local governments' confirms that the intent underlying section 6 [of article XIII B] was to require reimbursement to local agencies for the costs involved in carrying out functions peculiar to government, not for expenses incurred by local agencies as an incidental impact of laws that apply generally to all state residents and entities.... [¶] The language of section 6 is far too vague to support an inference that ... each time the Legislature [68] passes a law of general application it must discern the likely effect on local governments and provide an appropriation to pay for any incidental increase in local costs...." (43 Cal.3d at pp. 56–57, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202, italics added.) [12]

Plaintiffs next urge the Court of Appeal's premise—that chapter 2/78 did impose a "unique" requirement on local agencies within the meaning of County of Los Angeles, since it applied only to them, and compelled costs to which they were not previously subject. Plaintiffs cite our recent decision in Lucia Mar Unified School Dist. v. Honig (1988) 44 Cal.3d 830, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318. There we held, inter alia, that by requiring each local school district to contribute part of the expense of educating its handicapped students in state-run schools—a cost previously absorbed entirely by the state—the Legislature created a "new program" subject to subvention under article XIII B, section 6. As we observed, "although the schools for the handicapped have been operated by the state for many years, the program was new insofar as [the local districts] are concerned...." (P. 835, 244 Cal.Rptr. 677, 750 P.2d 318, italics added.)

Lucia Mar is inapposite here. The education of handicapped students was clearly a traditional governmental "service to the public," and it qualified as a "program" on that basis. This function had long been performed by the state, and the only issue was whether the belated shifting of the program's costs to local governments made it "new" for subvention purposes. A negative answer to that question would have undermined a central purpose of article XIII B, section 6—to prevent the state's transfer of the cost of government from itself to the local level.

Here, the issue is whether costs unrelated to the provision of public services are nonetheless reimbursable costs of government, because they are imposed on local governments "unique[ly]," and not merely as an incident of compliance with general laws. State and local governments, and nonprofit corporations, had previously enjoyed a special exemption from requirements imposed on most other employers in the state and nation. Chapter 2/78 merely eliminated the exemption and made these previously exempted entities subject to the general rule. By doing so, it may have imposed a requirement "new" to local agencies, but that requirement was not "unique."

12. Indeed, our reasoning here was expressly foreshadowed in County of Los Angeles. There we observed: "The Court of Appeal reached a different conclusion in [Sacramento I], with respect to a newly enacted law requiring that all public employees be covered by unemployment insurance. Approaching the question as ... whether the expense was a 'state mandated cost,' rather than as whether the provision of an employee benefit was a 'program or service' within the meaning of the Constitution, the court concluded that reimbursement was required. To the extent that this decision is inconsistent with our conclusion here, it is disapproved." (43 Cal.3d at p. 58, fn. 10, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.)

[69]The distinction proposed by plaintiffs would have an anomalous result. The state could avoid subvention under County of Los Angeles standards by imposing new obligations on the public and private sectors at the same time. However, if it chose to proceed by stages, extending such obligations first to private entities, and only later to local governments, it would have to pay. This was not the intent of our recent decision.

Next, plaintiffs complain that the new costs imposed on local governments by chapter 2/78 are too great to be deemed "incidental" within the meaning of County of Los Angeles. However, our decision did not use the word "incidental" to mean merely "insignificant in amount." Rather, we declared that the state need not reimburse local governments for expenses incidentally imposed upon them by laws of general application. In County of Los Angeles, we assumed that the expenses imposed in common on the private and public sectors by such a general law—as by the across-the-board increase in workers' compensation benefits there at issue—might be substantial. Notwithstanding this possibility, we found the voters did not intend to require a state subsidy of the public sector in such cases. (43 Cal.3d at pp. 56–58, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.)

Finally, plaintiffs and their amici curiae urge us to overrule County of Los Angeles. They insist that our "program" and "unique requirement" limitations conflict with the language and purpose of article XIII B. First, they note that nonreimbursable state-mandated costs are expressly listed in subdivisions (a) through (c) of article XIII B, section 6.[13] Under the maxim inclusio unius est exclusio alterius, they reason, further exceptions may not be implied. Second, they assert, our limiting construction allows the state to "force" many costly but unfunded requirements on local governments, which the latter must absorb without relief from their own article XIII B spending limits. This, they aver, cannot have been the voters' intent.

These arguments misapprehend both the language of article XIII B, section 6, and our County of Los Angeles holding. Our reasoning in that case is not inconsistent with subdivisions (a) through (c) of section 6. Those paragraphs simply exclude certain state-imposed costs even if they would otherwise be reimbursable under the "new program" or "increased service" [70]standards. Subdivisions (a) through (c) do not purport to define what constitutes a "new program" or "increased level of service."

Moreover, the "program" and "service" standards developed in County of Los Angeles create no undue risk that the state will impose expensive unfunded obligations against local agencies' article XIII B spending limits. On the contrary, our standards require reimbursement whenever the state freely chooses to impose on local agencies any peculiarly "governmental" cost which they were not previously required to absorb.

On the other hand, as we explained in County of Los Angeles, extension of the subvention requirements to costs "incidentally" imposed on local governments would require the Legislature to assess the fiscal effect on local agencies of each law of general application. Moreover, it would subject much general legislation to the supermajority vote required to pass a companion local-government revenue bill. Each such necessary appropriation would, in turn, cut into the state's article XIII B spending limit. (§ 8, subd. (a).) We concluded that nothing in the language, history, or apparent purpose of article XIII B suggested such far-reaching limitations on

13. Article XIII B, section 6, provides that the state shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse a local agency for costs incurred by the agency "[w]henever the [state] mandates [on the agency] a new program or higher level of service ..., except that the Legislature may, but need not, provide such subvention of funds for the following mandates: [¶] (a) Legislative mandates requested by the local agency affected; [¶] (b) Legislation defining a new crime or changing an existing definition of a crime; or [¶] (c) Legislative mandates enacted prior to January 1, 1975, or executive orders or regulations initially implementing legislation enacted prior to January 1, 1975."

legitimate state power. (43 Cal.3d at pp. 56–58, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.)

We remain persuaded by this reasoning.[14] We decline to overrule County of Los Angeles. Under the teaching of that case, we hold that chapter 2/78 imposes no local costs which must be reimbursed pursuant to article XIII B, section 6, and parallel statutes.

V. "FEDERAL" MANDATE?

[6] This case proceeded through the Court of Appeal solely on the issue whether chapter 2/78 constitutes a reimbursable "state mandate," as defined in County of Los Angeles. After we granted review, and in the public interest, we also decided to reexamine a related holding contained in Sacramento I—that chapter 2/78 does not qualify as a "federal" mandate.

Proper application of the "federal mandate" concept has important implications beyond subvention. A "cost mandated by the federal government" is exempt from a local government's statutory taxation limit. (Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2271.) Moreover, an appropriation required to comply with a [7] federal mandate is excluded from the constitutional spending limit of any affected entity, state or local (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 9, subd. (b)). Accordingly, we requested supplemental briefs on this question.[15]

After due consideration, we reject Sacramento I's premise. We conclude that chapter 2/78 does impose "costs mandated by the federal government," as described in article XIII B and parallel statutes.[16]

Article XIII B, section 9(b), defines federally mandated appropriations as those "required for purposes of complying with mandates of ... the federal government which, without discretion, require an expenditure for additional services or which unavoidably make the providing of existing services more costly." (Italics added.)

As in Sacramento I, plaintiffs argue that the words "without discretion" and "unavoidably" require clear legal compulsion not present in Public Law 94–566. Defendants respond, as before, that the consequences of California's failure to comply with the federal "carrot and stick" scheme were so substantial that the state had no realistic "discretion" to refuse.[17] In Sacramento I, the Court of Appeal adopted plaintiffs' narrow view. On reflection, we disagree.

Though section 9(b) seems plain on its face, we find a latent ambiguity in context. At the time article XIII B was adopted, United States Supreme Court decisions construing the Tenth Amendment severely

14. Nor do we agree that subvention depends on whether the "benefit" of a state-imposed local requirement falls principally at the state or local level. Attempts to apply such a "benefit" test to the myriad of individual cases could easily produce debates bordering on the metaphysical. Nothing in the language or history of article XIII B, or prior subvention statutes, suggests an intent to force such debates upon the Legislature each time it considers legislation affecting local governments.

15. For the reasons expressed in part III, ante, our consideration of this issue is not foreclosed by principles of collateral estoppel.

16. In Sacramento I, both the parties and the Court of Appeal assumed that if a cost was "federally mandated," it was therefore not a "state mandated" cost subject to subvention. In other words, it was assumed, an expense could not be both "state mandated" and "federally mandated," even if imposed by the state under federal compulsion. It was in this context that Sacramento I addressed the "federal mandate" issue. (See also Carmel Valley Fire Protection Dist., supra, 190 Cal.App.3d at p. 543, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795.) We here express no view on the question whether "federal" and "state" mandates are mutually exclusive for purposes of state subvention, but leave that issue for another day. We decide only that, insofar as an expense is "federally mandated," as described in the state Constitution and statutes, it is exempt from the pertinent taxation and spending limits.

17. Ironically, the local agencies here argue against a "federal mandate," with the state in opposition to that view. An anti-"federal mandate" position seems directly contrary to the local agencies' interests, since its acceptance would mean the agencies are not eligible for exemptions from their pertinent taxing and spending limits. However, all parties appear still bound by the premise of Sacramento I that if a cost is "federally mandated," it is ineligible for state subvention. As noted above (see fn. 16, ante, at p. 150 of 266 Cal.Rptr., at p. 533 of 785 P.2d), we do not decide that issue here.

limited federal power to dictate policy or programs to the sovereign states or their subdivisions.[18] Indeed, by its early ruling that federal unemployment-insurance [72]laws did not violate state sovereignty insofar as they merely employed a "carrot and stick" to induce state compliance (Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, supra, 301 U.S. 548, 585–593, 57 S.Ct. 883, 890–894), the high court helped set the stage for two generations of pervasive federal regulation by this indirect means.[19]

Just three years before article XIII B was adopted, the court struck down, on Tenth Amendment grounds, Congress' effort to extend the minimum-wage and maximum-hour requirements of the Fair Labor Standards Act directly to local government employees. (National League of Cities v. Usery (1976) 426 U.S. 833, 96 S.Ct. 2465, 49 L.Ed.2d 245.) Overruling earlier authority (see Maryland v. Wirtz (1968) 392 U.S. 183, 88 S.Ct. 2017, 20 L.Ed.2d 1020), the court held in Usery, supra, that constitutional principles of federalism prohibit Congress from using its otherwise "plenary" commerce power against the "States as States," so as to interfere with the essential "attributes of [state government] sovereignty." (426 U.S. at pp. 840–855, 96 S.Ct. at pp. 2468–2476.) Accordingly, said the court, Congress could not "force directly upon the States its choices as to how essential decisions regarding the conduct of integral governmental functions are to be made. . . ." (Id., at p. 855, 96 S.Ct. at p. 2476.)

Usery dealt with federal efforts to regulate sovereign units of government as employers. However, the court's rationale obviously applied with equal or greater force to direct federal regulation of state and local governments as governments. Under Usery's reasoning, it seems manifest that Congress' direct power to require or prohibit substantive governmental policies or programs by state or local agencies was greatly curtailed. Such power would interfere impermissibly with "integral governmental functions" and essential "attributes of [state] sovereignty." [20]

[73]After article XIII B's adoption, both the result and the reasoning of Usery were overruled in Garcia v. San Antonio Metro. Transit Auth. (1985) 469 U.S. 528, 105 S.Ct. 1005, 83 L.Ed.2d 1016. In Garcia, a five-justice majority concluded that the political structure of the federal system, rather than rigid categories of inviolable state "sovereignty," constitutes state and local governments' primary protection against Congress' overreaching efforts to regulate them. (At pp. 547–555, 105 S.Ct. at pp. 1015–1020.)

However, this later development does not alter two crucial facts extant when article XIII B was enacted. First, the power of the federal government to impose its direct

18. The Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

19. The traditional categorical-aid provisions of the Social Security Act (e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§ 301 et seq. [old-age assistance], 601 et seq. [aid to needy families with dependent children], 1201 et seq. [aid to the blind], 1351 et seq. [aid to the permanently and totally disabled]), and statutes concerned with occupational safety and health (e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 651 et seq.), highways and mass transit (e.g., 23 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.), education (e.g., 20 U.S.C. § 241a et seq.), and air and water pollution (e.g., 33 U.S.C. § 1251 et seq., 1311 et seq.; 42 U.S.C. § 7401 et seq.) are but a few examples of federal laws imposing greater or lesser degrees of inducement to state and local compliance with federal policies and programs.

20. Hodel v. Virginia Surface Mining & Recl. Assn. (1981) 452 U.S. 264, 101 S.Ct. 2352, 69 L.Ed.2d 1 later implicitly confirmed this premise. There, Virginia mine operators challenged a federal surface-mining regulatory scheme on grounds it displaced state authority and sovereignty. The federal law imposed minimum federal standards, to be enforced by federal or state officials at the state's choice, and allowed states to take over regulation by imposing equal or higher standards of their own. (30 U.S.C. §§ 1201 et seq., 1251–1254.) The court upheld the program, noting it regulated private persons, not the "States as States." Moreover, said the court, since states were not ordered to adopt their own surface-mining standards, "there can be no suggestion that the Act commandeers the legislative processes of the States by directly compelling them to enact and enforce a federal regulatory program. [Citations.] ...." (452 U.S. at pp. 286–288, 101 S.Ct. at pp. 2365–2366.)

regulatory will on state and local agencies was then sharply in doubt. Second, in conformity with this principle, the vast bulk of cost-producing federal influence on government at the state and local levels was by inducement or incentive rather than direct compulsion.[21] That remains so to this day.

Thus, if article XIII B's reference to "federal mandates" were limited to strict legal compulsion by the federal government, it would have been largely superfluous.[22] It is well settled that "constitutional . . . enactments must receive a liberal, practical common-sense construction which will meet changed conditions and the growing needs of the people. [Citations.]. . . ." (Amador Valley Joint Union High Sch. Dist. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1978) 22 Cal.3d 208, 245, 149 Cal.Rptr. 239, 583 P.2d 1281.) While "[a] constitutional amendment should be construed in accordance with the natural and ordinary meaning of its words[,] [citation][, t]he literal language of enactments may be disregarded to avoid absurd results and to fulfill the apparent intent of the framers. [Citations.]" (Ibid.)

As the drafters and adopters of article XIII B must have understood, certain regulatory standards imposed by the federal government [74] under "cooperative federalism" schemes are coercive on the states and localities in every practical sense. The instant facts amply illustrate the point. Joint federal-state operation of a system of unemployment compensation has been a fundamental aspect of our political fabric since the Great Depression. California had afforded federally "certified" unemployment insurance protection to its workers for over 40 years by the time Public Law 94–566, chapter 2/78, and article XIII B were adopted. Every other state also operated such a system. If California failed to conform its plan to new federal requirements as they arose, its businesses faced a new and serious penalty—full, double unemployment taxation by both state and federal governments. Besides constituting an intolerable expense against the state's economy on its face, this double taxation would place California employers at a serious competitive disadvantage against their counterparts in states which remained in federal compliance.

Plaintiffs and their amici curiae suggest California could have chosen to terminate its own unemployment insurance system, thus leaving the state's employers faced only with the federal tax. However, we cannot imagine the drafters and adopters of article XIII B intended to force the state to such draconian ends.

Here, the state simply did what was necessary to avoid certain and severe federal penalties upon its resident businesses. The alternatives were so far beyond the realm of practical reality that they left the state "without discretion" to depart from federal standards. We therefore conclude that the state acted in response to a federal "mandate" for purposes of article XIII B.[23]

21. The United States Constitution includes specific limitations on the subject-matter jurisdiction of state and local governments (art. I, § 10), imposes certain direct obligations and restrictions on the "States as States" (e.g., art. I, § 2, cls. 1, 4; art. I, § 3, cls. 1, 2; art. II, § 1, cl. 2; art. IV, §§ 1, 2, cls. 1, 2; amends. XIV, XV), and grants Congress power to prevent denial of certain constitutional rights by the states (amends. XIII, XIV, XV). Obviously, however, these provisions account for only a minute portion of the costs incurred by state and local governments as a result of federal programs and regulations.

22. For this reason, federal cases cited by plaintiffs and their amici curiae for the proposition that Public Law 94–566 is not "coercive" (e.g., County of Los Angeles, Cal. v. Marshall (D.C.Cir. 1980) 631 F.2d 767; State, etc. v. Marshall (1st Cir.1980) 616 F.2d 240) are inapposite. Those decisions applied Tenth Amendment principles to determine whether Public Law 94–566 was constitutionally valid. Had Public Law 94–566 been struck down on this ground, it would not have resulted in local costs to which the "federal mandate" provisions of article XIII B might extend. Thus, applying the Tenth Amendment cases to determine whether a cost is "federally mandated" for purposes of article XIII B presents a problem in circular reasoning.

23. The dissent cites two older cases for the premise that in antidebt and antispending measures, the exception recognized for "mandatory" costs and expenditures has traditionally been limited to obligations imposed by law. Neither cited decision is dispositive or persuasive here. County of Los Angeles v. Byram (1951) 36 Cal.2d 694, 227 P.2d 4, and the cases therein

[175]Unlike the Sacramento I court, we deem significant the Legislature's persistent agreement with our construction. In 1980, after the adoption of article XIII B, it amended the statutory definition of "costs mandated by the federal government" to provide that these include "costs resulting from enactment of a state law or regulation where failure to enact such law or regulation to meet specific federal program or service requirements would result in substantial monetary penalties or loss of funds to public or private persons in the state...." (Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2206, italics added; Stats.1980, ch. 1256, § 3, p. 4247.)

In Sacramento I, the Court of Appeal declined to apply this statutory amendment "retroactively" to article XIII B. (156 Cal.App.3d at pp. 197–198, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258.) The Legislature immediately responded. In 1984 statutes enacted for the express purpose of "implement[ing]" article XIII B (see Gov.Code, § 17500), the Legislature reiterated its 1980 definition. (Id., § 17513; Stats.1984, ch. 1459, § 1, p. 5114.) [24]

Plaintiffs contend that these statutory pronouncements deserve little interpretive weight since, among other things, they are "internally inconsistent." Plaintiffs stress the proviso in Revenue and Taxation Code, section 2206, and in Government Code, section 17513, that the phrase "'[c]osts mandated by the federal government' does not include costs which are specifically reimbursed or funded by the federal or state government or programs or services which may be implemented at the option of the state, local agency, or school district." (Italics added.)

We see no fatal inconsistencies. The first clause of the proviso merely confirms, as article XIII B itself specifies, that program funds voluntarily provided by another unit of government may not be excluded from the [176]spending limits of recipient local agencies. (Compare art. XIII B, §§ 8, subd. (b), 9 subd. (b).) The second clause isolates a concern which we share—that state or local governments might otherwise claim "federally mandated costs" even where participation in a federal program, or compliance with federal "standards," is a matter of true choice. (Cf., e.g., Carmel cited, concern the constitutional provision (Cal. Const., former art. XI, § 18, see now art. XVI, § 18 (hereafter section 18)) which prohibits local governments, absent voter approval, from incurring debts or liabilities which exceed in any year the income or revenue provided for such year. Section 18 is absolute on its face and, unlike article XIII B, it contains no express exception for mandatory expenses. Though sometimes founded on contorted linguistic analyses (see, e.g., City of Long Beach v. Lisenby (1919) 180 Cal. 52, 56, 179 P. 198), the implied exceptions to section 18, as recognized in Byram and other cases, arise from a rule of necessity and despite the absolute constitutional language. Such implied exceptions must, of course, be narrowly confined.

On the other hand, County of Los Angeles v. Payne (1937) 8 Cal.2d 563, 66 P.2d 658, also cited by the dissent, construed former Political Code section 3714, which limited a local government's annual expenditures to its previously adopted budget. Section 3714 did contain an express exception for "mandatory expenses required by law." (Italics added.) Payne's adherence to the explicit terms of the statutory exception is hardly remarkable.

In contrast with the measure considered in Byram, article XIII B and the Revenue and Taxation Code do expressly exempt "federally mandated" expenses from the pertinent taxation and appropriations limits. Unlike the measure construed in Payne, neither article XIII B nor the Revenue and Taxation Code expressly limit their exemptions to obligations "required by law." Article XIII B uses the broader terms "unavoidably" and "without discretion," suggesting recognition by the drafters and voters that forces beyond strict legal compulsion may produce expenses that are realistically involuntary. The Revenue and Taxation Code explicitly includes coercive federal "carrot and stick" requirements within the federally "mandated" costs exempt from statutory property tax limits. (Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2206.)

24. Plaintiffs suggest that by reenacting this language in the wake of Sacramento I, the Legislature "acquiesced" in the Court of Appeal's narrow definition of "costs mandated by the federal government." We are not persuaded. Sacramento I did not construe the statutory language; it simply found a postdated statute irrelevant to the proper interpretation of article XIII B. By later readopting its expanded definition in statutes designed to "implement" article XIII B, the Legislature expressed its disagreement with Sacramento I, not its acquiescence. Contrary to the implications of Sacramento I, legislative efforts to resolve ambiguities in constitutional language are entitled to serious judicial consideration. (See authorities cited ante.)

Valley Fire Protection Dist., supra, 190 Cal.App.3d at pp. 542–544, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795.) [25]

Given the variety of cooperative federal-state-local programs, we here attempt no final test for "mandatory" versus "optional" compliance with federal law. A determination in each case must depend on such factors as the nature and purpose of the federal program; whether its design suggests an intent to coerce; when state and/or local participation began; the penalties, if any, assessed for withdrawal or refusal to participate or comply; and any other legal and practical consequences of nonparticipation, noncompliance, or withdrawal. Always, the courts and the Commission must respect the governing principle of article XIII B, section 9, subd. (b): neither state nor local agencies may escape their spending limits when their participation in federal programs is truly voluntary.

For reasons expressed above, we are satisfied under these standards that chapter 2/78 did implement a federal "mandate" within the meaning of article XIII B and prior statutes restricting local taxation. Hence, subject to superseding constitutional ceilings on taxation by state and local governments, an agency governed by chapter 2/78 may tax and spend as necessary to meet the expenses required to comply with that legislation. To the extent Sacramento I is inconsistent with our analysis, that decision is disapproved.

VI. CONCLUSION.

We have concluded that chapter 2/78 is a "federal mandate" which exempts affected state and local agencies from pertinent limits on their power to tax, appropriate, and spend. However, local governments' expenses[77] of complying with chapter 2/78 are not subject to compulsory state subvention, because chapter 2/78 imposed no new or increased "program or service," and no "unique" requirement, on local agencies. The contrary judgment of the Court of Appeal is reversed.

LUCAS, C.J., and MOSK, BROUSSARD, PANELLI and KENNARD, JJ., concur.

KAUFMAN, Justice, concurring and dissenting.

I concur in the judgment. Given this court's decision in County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 46, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202, I am compelled to agree that the obligation imposed on local governments by the 1978 state unemployment insurance legislation is not a "new program or higher level of service" within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6, of the California Constitution, and that for this reason the state is not constitutionally obligated to provide a subvention of funds to reimburse the unemployment insurance costs of local governments. I respectfully dissent, however, from the additional conclusion, stated in part V of the majority opinion, that these unemployment insurance costs are "mandates of ... the federal government" and therefore exempt from the state and local government appropriation limits of article XIII B and from property taxation limits imposed by statute. In reaching this additional conclusion the majority decides an issue not raised by the parties and completely outside the scope of this action. As so often happens when a court reaches beyond the confines of the case before it to render a gratuitous advisory opinion, the majority decides the issue incorrectly.

25. In the Carmel Valley case, the state claimed, among other things, that local costs of purchasing protective clothing and equipment for firefighters, as required by regulations under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act, constituted a nonreimbursable "federal mandate" because the California standards merely "implemented" federal law. However, the evidence was contrary; a letter from the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration disclaimed federal jurisdiction over California's political subdivisions and stated that state and federal standard were independent. (190 Cal.App.3d at pp. 543–544, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795.) Examination of the pertinent statutory scheme reinforces the view that compliance with federal standards in this area is "optional" with the state. Other than loss of limited federal administrative funds (29 U.S.C. § 672(g)), the only sanction for California's decision not to maintain a federally approved occupational safety and health system is that federal standards, administered by federal personnel, will then prevail within the state. (Id., § 667(b)–(h).)

All too frequently in recent years (see, e.g., S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal.3d 341, 345, fn. 1, 256 Cal.Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399) this court, in its misguided zeal to provide enlightenment, has reached out to decide an issue not tendered by the parties. The majority's failure to exercise proper judicial restraint in the instant case is another example of this trend and one I find particularly disturbing since it violates a fundamental and venerable tenet of judicial practice—i.e., "A court will not decide a constitutional question unless such construction is absolutely necessary." (Estate of Johnson (1903) 139 Cal. 532, 534, 73 P. 424; accord, People v. Williams (1976) 16 Cal.3d 663, 667, 128 Cal.Rptr. 888, 547 P.2d 1000; Palermo v. Stockton Theatres, Inc. (1948) 32 Cal.2d 53, 65, 195 P.2d 1.) The federal mandate issue which the majority here decides, because it turns on the proper construction of article XIII B, section 9, of our state Constitution, is a constitutional issue. Using this case to resolve that issue is, to my mind, indefensible.

To see just how far the majority has wandered from the issues essential to the proper resolution of this case, one need only point out that this action [178] was not brought to settle a dispute about taxation or appropriation limits, nor has this court been informed that any such dispute exists. Rather, this action was brought to enforce the holding in City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal.App.3d 182, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258 (Sacramento I), that the state is constitutionally obligated to reimburse the unemployment insurance costs of local governments. The governmental entities litigating this proceeding have not sought a judicial determination of the 1978 unemployment insurance legislation's effect on their statutory or constitutional taxing or spending limits, nor have they raised any issue regarding whether unemployment insurance costs are federally mandated for any purpose. The federal mandate issue was first injected into the case by this court when we requested additional briefing on the questions whether the unemployment insurance costs of local governments are federally mandated under article XIII B, section 9, of the state Constitution and, if so, whether this conclusion necessarily exempts the state from any obligation it might otherwise have to reimburse local governments for these costs.

The majority's federal mandate discussion does not even provide an alternative ground for the holding denying reimbursement of local governments' unemployment insurance costs, for the majority purports to decide whether unemployment insurance costs are federally mandated without deciding whether resolution of this issue has any bearing on entitlement to reimbursement (see maj. opn., ante, p. 150, fn. 16 of 266 Cal.Rptr., at p. 533, fn. 16 of 785 P.2d). The majority's only justification for deciding whether unemployment insurance costs are federally mandated is that the issue has "important implications" inasmuch as federally mandated costs are "exempt from a local government's statutory taxation limit (Rev. & Tax.Code, § 2271)" and "from the constitutional spending limit of any affected entity, state or local (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 9, subd. (b))." (Maj. opn., ante, pp. 150–151 of 266 Cal.Rptr., at pp. 533–534 of 785 P.2d.) But the present case is an inappropriate vehicle for deciding these weighty issues since neither the state nor the local entities have any reason to contest the other's exemptions from spending or taxation limits. In other words, the parties now before us are not adverse on these issues and so have not defined and argued opposing points of view with the vigor and thoroughness essential to proper judicial resolution of complex legal questions, particularly those of constitutional magnitude. Those who might have argued in favor of including unemployment insurance costs in the taxing and spending limits—for example, the proponents of the initiative measure by which article XIII B was enacted—are not represented in this proceeding.

Were the issue properly presented in this case, I would conclude that the unemployment insurance costs are not federally mandated. The text of a constitution "should be construed in accordance with the natural and ordinary meaning of its words." (Amador Valley Joint Union High Sch. Dist. v. [179] State Bd. of Equalization (1978) 22 Cal.3d 208, 245, 149 Cal.Rptr. 239, 583 P.2d 1281.) The language at issue here excludes from the definition of "appropriations subject to limitation" those appropriations "required for purposes of complying with mandates of the courts or the federal government which, without discretion, require an expenditure for additional services or which unavoidably make the providing of existing services more costly." (Cal. Const., art. XIII B, § 9, subd. (b), italics added.)

The meaning of this language is clear; to look beyond the text for some other meaning is both unnecessary and improper under accepted rules of constitutional interpretation. (See State Board of Education v. Levit (1959) 52 Cal.2d 441, 462, 343 P.2d 8; People v. Knowles (1950) 35 Cal.2d 175, 182–183, 217 P.2d 1.) A "mandate" is "an order, command [or] charge." (Xth Olympiad Com. v. American Olym. Assn. (1935) 2 Cal.2d 600, 604, 42 P.2d 1023; see also, Morris v. County of Marin (1977) 18 Cal.3d 901, 908, 136 Cal.Rptr. 251, 559 P.2d 606 ["mandatory duty" is "an obligatory duty which a governmental entity is required to perform"]; Bridgman v. American Book Co. (1958) 12 Misc.2d 63, 66, 173 N.Y.S.2d 502, 506 ["mandate" is "a command, order or direction . . . which a person is bound to obey"].) The mandates to which the constitutional provision at issue refers are those "of the courts or the federal government." The coercive force of court mandates is, of course, the force of law. That "mandates of . . . the federal government" are similarly limited to those obligations imposed by force of federal law is shown not only by the term "mandate" itself but also by the terms "without discretion" and "unavoidably," which plainly exclude any form of inducement using political or economic pressure rather than legal compulsion.

Laws limiting governmental appropriations and indebtedness have traditionally exempted two categories of expenditures: those required to meet emergencies and those required to satisfy duties or mandates imposed by law. (See, e.g., County of Los Angeles v. Byram (1951) 36 Cal.2d 694, 698–700, 227 P.2d 4; County of Los Angeles v. Payne (1937) 8 Cal.2d 563, 569–575, 66 P.2d 658; State v. City Council of City of Helena (1939) 108 Mont. 347, 90 P.2d 514, 516; Raynor v. King County (1940) 2 Wash.2d 199, 97 P.2d 696, 707.) The latter category has been interpreted as including only those obligations compelled by force of law, as opposed to economic or political necessity or expedience. (See County of Los Angeles v. Byram, supra, 36 Cal.2d at pp. 698–700, 227 P.2d 4; County of Los Angeles v. Payne, supra, 8 Cal.2d at pp. 573–574, 66 P.2d 658.) Article XIII B of the California Constitution follows the pattern of other similar laws; it provides exemptions for emergency appropriations in section 3, subdivision (c), and for legal duties or "mandates" in section 9, subdivision (b). I see no basis for concluding that the term "mandate," which in the context of government debt and appropriation limitations has traditionally [180] meant a duty imposed by force of law, has suddenly acquired a novel and more expansive meaning in section 9. On the contrary, the drafters of section 9 appear to have taken pains to avoid any such interpretation.

As stated in Sacramento I, "The concept of federal mandates . . . is defined in section 9 of article XIII B. Subdivision (b) of that section excludes from a governmental entity's appropriation limit '[a]ppropriations required for purposes of complying with mandates of . . . the federal government which, without discretion, require an expenditure' by the governmental entity. (Italics added.) As contemplated by article XIII B, section 9, a federal mandate is one pursuant to which the federal government imposes a cost upon a governmental entity, and the entity has no discretion to refuse the cost. Chapter 2 [the 1978 unemployment insurance legislation] was not a federal mandate within this constitutional definition, as the State had the discretion to participate or not in the federal unemployment insurance system." (Sacramento I, supra, 156 Cal.App.3d 182, 197, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258, italics in original.) Giving the constitutional language its usual and ordinary meaning, I agree with the Court of Appeal that federal law "mandates" an expenditure only if the expenditure is legally compelled, and not if the federal law merely provides economic or political inducements, no matter how powerful or coercive. Since it undisputed that the state was under no legal compulsion to enact the 1978 unemployment insurance legislation, the burdens of that legislation are not "mandates of ... the federal government."

In support of its contrary conclusion, the majority reasons as follows: (1) when article XIII B of the California Constitution was drafted and enacted, the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution had been construed to prohibit Congress from imposing costs on state and local governments; (2) as a result, virtually all federal laws imposing costs on state and local governments did so through "carrot and stick" incentive programs rather than by direct legal compulsion; and (3) the exemption for "mandates of ... the federal government" must be construed to encompass at least some of these incentive programs because otherwise it would be almost entirely superfluous. I find each of these points highly questionable, if not demonstratively unsound.

First, the Tenth Amendment has never been interpreted as entirely prohibiting the federal government from imposing costs on state and local government. Rather, National League of Cities v. Usery (1976) 426 U.S. 833, 96 S.Ct. 2465, 49 L.Ed.2d 245 defined an exception to the broad sweep of Congress's commerce clause authority. Under this exception, "traditional governmental functions" of state and local governments were protected from direct and intrusive federal regulation. (426 U.S. at p. 852, 96 S.Ct. at p. 2474.) As explained in Garcia v. San Antonio Metro. Transit [81] Auth. (1985) 469 U.S. 528, 538–547, 105 S.Ct. 1005, 1010–1016, 83 L.Ed.2d 1016, the result was an inconsistent patchwork of decisions upholding or striking laws depending on whether the regulated activities were perceived by the court as being traditionally associated with state or local government or constituting "attributes of state sovereignty." Thus, a significant number of laws imposing costs on state and local governments survived Tenth Amendment scrutiny even before the decision in Garcia v. San Antonio Metro. Transit Auth., supra. (See, e.g., EEOC v. Wyoming (1983) 460 U.S. 226, 103 S.Ct. 1054, 75 L.Ed.2d 18 [holding state and local government employee retirement policies subject to federal age discrimination regulations]; see generally, Skover, "Phoenix Rising" and Federalism Analysis (1986) 13 Hastings Const.L.Q. 271, 286–288.) More importantly, however, I see no reason to assume that the drafters of article XIII B intended that the federal mandate exemption would have broad application, encompassing a large number of federal programs. Rather, construing the exemption narrowly seems entirely consistent with the probable intent of those who drafted the provision.

The test proposed by the majority for identifying those incentive programs which qualify as "mandates of ... the federal government" will require an extensive factual inquiry into the practical consequenees of noncompliance with the federal law. It will be burdensome to apply and its outcome difficult to predict. Besides being wholly unnecessary to resolution of this case, and violating the probable intent of the voters who enacted article XIII B of the California Constitution,[1] the majority's discussion of the federal mandate issue is certain to generate more difficulties than it resolves.

1. Those voters no doubt will be upset to learn that their tax dollars will be dissipated in litigation to determine such metaphysical questions as whether a decision to participate in a federal program was "truly voluntary."

Finally, I also, again like Justice Reynoso, would withhold any decision on the question whether the Horse Racing Board has the statutory authority to provide compensatory relief to a person who has been injured though an intentional violation of one of the Board's regulations, by, for example, conditioning the reinstatement of a wrongdoer's license on his payment of wrongfully obtained gains to the victim. Because plaintiff never sought such relief from the Board, the question of the Board's power to afford that remedy is not presented here.

v.

FAIR OAKS FIRE PROTECTION DISTRICT et al., Defendants and Respondents.

S.F. 24919.

Supreme Court of California, In Bank.

Jan. 2, 1987.

Rehearing Denied Feb. 11, 1987.

Employee brought civil action against employer and fellow employee for intentional infliction of emotional distress which caused him total, permanent, mental and physical disability. The Superior Court, Sacramento County, Fred W. Marler, J., sustained defendants' demurrer, and plaintiff appealed. The Court of Appeal affirmed in part and reversed in part. The Supreme Court granted review, superseding opinion of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court, Broussard, J., held that: (1) an employee could not maintain a civil issue in courts for intentional infliction of emotional distress against his employer and fellow employee when conduct complained of had caused total permanent mental and physical disability compensable under workers' compensation law, and (2) employee's wife's claims for loss of consortium and intentional infliction of emotional distress were also barred.

Affirmed.

Grodin, J., concurred in judgment.

Panelli, J., filed concurring opinion.

Bird, C.J., filed dissenting opinion.

BROUSSARD, Justice.

The main issue presented is whether an employee may maintain a civil action in the courts for intentional infliction of emotional distress against his employer and fellow employee when the conduct complained of has caused total, permanent, mental and physical disability compensable under workers' compensation law. We conclude that when the employee's claim is based on conduct normally occurring in the workplace, it is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.

The trial court sustained the demurrer of defendants, Fair Oaks Fire Protection District and its assistant fire chief, without leave to amend on the ground that plaintiffs' claims came within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. The Court of Appeal affirmed as to eight of the ten causes of action alleged but reversed with directions to permit amendment of the complaint as to causes of action for defamation and for false light invasion of privacy. We granted plaintiffs' petition for review. There is no challenge to the Court of Appeal's holding that the causes of action for defamation and privacy are not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code. Plaintiffs challenge the Court of Appeal determination that their other claims are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the board.

The allegations of the complaint may be summarized as follows: [1]

[152] Leonard Cole enlisted as a volunteer firefighter in 1964 with the district, and in the next year he was appointed a full-time firefighter. In 1970 he was appointed engineer, and in 1977 he was promoted to captain. In March 1981 he was elected union representative and continued to serve in that capacity until April 1982.

In October 1981, he was diagnosed as having high blood pressure. His physician recommended rest and recreation. In February 1982 he was examined and again found to have elevated blood pressure. He was placed on medication. The elevated blood pressure was due to unreasonable stress and pressure by the assistant chief. As union representative Cole negotiated questions of contractual interpretation with management, and the assistant chief, although formerly the union representative, deliberately harassed him in the negotiations.

1. A general demurrer admits the proof of all material factual allegations in the complaint, and we are not concerned with the question of plaintiffs' ability to prove these allegations. (Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 493, 496, 86 Cal.Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216.)

On one occasion the assistant chief demanded that Cole report to a meeting for performance evaluation and possible disciplinary action and refused to excuse him to attend a funeral.

Although Cole had repeatedly received superior performance ratings, the assistant chief devised a novel personnel evaluation procedure for Cole for the purpose of punishing him for his union activities. Cole was informed by various members of the fire department that the assistant chief and members of the management intended to take punitive action against him because of his union activities.

On May 11, Cole was placed on sick leave because of his hypertension. A doctor employed by the assistant chief reported that the level of hypertension disabled Cole from performing heavy duty and that he should be restricted to light duty until his blood pressure was better controlled.

Thereafter, the assistant chief notified him by mail that he was to present himself at a disciplinary hearing on June 3, 1982. The letter falsely asserted dishonesty as one of the grounds for the hearing. It stated that Cole had stated falsely that he was on workers' compensation and that he had been told by a county safety official not to report to work.[2] The assistant chief conducted the hearing before a panel of battalion chiefs. The hearing was a "kangaroo" proceeding.

Thereafter, on June 28, 1982, Cole was demoted to engineer, and was publicly stripped of his captain's badge. The assistant chief assigned him to [1153]perform "humiliating and menial duties," and he was ordered to return to duty from sick leave and assigned to work as a dispatcher, an entry level position.

On October 18, 1982, the Board of Directors of the Fair Oaks Fire Protection District reversed Cole's demotion and reinstated him as a captain at a reduced salary and placed him on probationary status. The assistant chief continued his harassment and sometime between July and September 1982, the assistant chief filed an application with the state to force Cole to retire involuntarily.

Cole's blood pressure was elevated by the continuous harassment, and on November 8, 1982, he suffered a severe and totally disabling cerebral vascular accident. He cannot move, care for himself, or communicate other than by blinking.

I. THE STATUTES

The pertinent code sections were amended by the Legislature in 1982. The pre–1982 statutes are applicable to the instant case because Cole suffered his stroke prior to the effective date of the 1982 legislation. "It is an established canon of interpretation that statutes are not to be given a retrospective operation unless it is clearly made to appear that such was the legislative intent." (Aetna Cas. & Surety Co. v. Ind. Acc. Com. (1947) 30 Cal.2d 388, 393, 182 P.2d 159.) If substantial changes are made, even in a statute which might ordinarily be classified as procedural, the operation on existing rights would be retroactive "because the legal effects of past events would be changed, and the statute will be construed only to operate in futuro unless the legislative intent to the contrary clearly appears." (Id., at p. 394, 182 P.2d 159; DiGenova v. State Board of Education (1962) 57 Cal.2d 167, 173, 18 Cal. Rptr. 369, 367 P.2d 865.) In the absence of a showing that the Legislature intended the 1982 amendments to be applied retroactively, two Courts of Appeal have concluded that the substantive changes of the 1982 legislation do not apply retroactively. (Perry v. Heavenly Valley (1985) 163 Cal. App.3d 495, 500–505, 209 Cal.Rptr. 771; Horney v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 923, 930, fn. 4, 190 Cal.Rptr. 18.) So far as appear there is no legislative history to the contrary. While it may be true, as defendants argue, that the Legislature constitutionally could have made the 1982 amendment retroactively effective, it is unnecessary to reach that issue since under established canons of interpretation it must be presumed that the Legislature did not intend retroactive application.

[154]When Cole was injured, Labor Code section 3600 [3] provided in pertinent part: "Liability for the compensation provided by this division, in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person ... shall without regard to negligence, exist against an employer for any injury arising out of and in the course of employment...."[4]

Section 3601 provided that where the "conditions of compensation exist," the right to recover compensation is "the exclusive remedy" for injury or death of an employee against the employer or coemployee acting within the scope of employment except that an employee shall "in addition to the right of compensation against the employer, have a right to bring an action at law for damages against such other employee," when the injury is proximately caused by the willful and unprovoked "physical" act of aggression of such other employee.[5]

[155]Prior to the 1982 amendments, section 4553 provided for an increase in the amount of compensation by one-half up to $10,000, where the employee was injured by the serious and willful misconduct of the employer, the employer's managing representative, or general superintendent.[6] The employer may not insure against an award under section 4553 although an insurer may provide insurance for the cost of defending against any "suit" for serious and willful misconduct of the employer or his agent. (Ins.Code, § 11661; Mercer-

3. Unless otherwise indicated, all statutory references are to the Labor Code.

4. Section 3600 provided: "Liability for the compensation provided by this division, in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person except as provided in section 3706, shall, without regard to negligence, exist against an employer for any injury sustained by his employees arising out of and in the course of the employment and for the death of any employee if the injury proximately causes death, in those cases where the following conditions of compensation concur:

"(a) Where, at the time of the injury, both the employer and the employee are subject to the compensation provisions of this division.

"(b) Where, at the time of the injury, the employee is performing service growing out of and incidental to his employment and is acting within the course of his employment.

"(c) Where the injury is proximately caused by the employment, either with or without negligence...."

Section 3706 provided for actions for damages if the employer failed to pay compensation.

5. Section 3601 provided: "(a) Where the conditions of compensation exist, the right to recover such compensation, pursuant to the provisions of this division is, except as provided in Section 3706, the exclusive remedy for injury or death of an employee against the employer or against any other employee of the employer acting within the scope of his employment, except that an employee, or his dependents in the event of his death, shall, in addition to the right to compensation against the employer, have a right to bring an action at law for damages against such other employee, as if this division did not apply, in the following cases:

"(1) When the injury or death is proximately caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of such other employee.

"(2) When the injury or death is proximately caused by the intoxication of such other employee....

"(b) An act which will not sustain an independent action for damages against such other employee under paragraphs (1) [or] (2) ... of subdivision (a) of this section may nevertheless be the basis of a finding of serious and willful misconduct under Section 4553 or 4553.1, if (1) such other employee is established to be one through whom the employer may be charged under Section 4553; (2) such act of such other employee shall be established to have been the proximate cause of the injury or death; and (3) such act is established to have been of a nature, kind, and degree sufficient to support a finding of serious and willful misconduct under Section 4553 or 4553.1.

"(c) In no event, either by legal action or by agreement whether entered into by such other employee or on his behalf, shall the employer be held liable, directly or indirectly, for damages awarded against, or for a liability incurred by such other employee under [paragraphs] (1) [or] (2) ... of subdivision (a) of this section.

"(d) No employee shall be held liable, directly or indirectly, to his employer, for injury or death of a coemployee except where the injured employee or his dependents obtain a recovery under subdivision (a) of this section."

II. CASES INVOLVING EMPLOYER'S INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

A number of Court of Appeal cases have addressed the question whether the exclusive remedy provisions of the compensation act prior to the 1982 amendment preclude an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.[7]

Renteria v. County of Orange (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 833, 838 et seq., 147 Cal.Rptr. 447, held that an employee could maintain an action for intentional infliction against the employer where there was no physical injury[156] or disability. The court pointed out that, unless an action at law were permitted in cases where there was no physical injury or disability, the employee would be left without any remedy whatsoever for the intentional tortious conduct. (82 Cal.App.3d at p. 839, 147 Cal.Rptr. 447.) The court also reasoned that, like defamation, the action for intentional infliction of emotional distress is part of a class of civil wrongs outside the contemplation of the workers' compensation system and that the need to deter intentional wrongdoing was not met by the penalty provisions of section 4553 providing for a 50 percent surcharge because "50 percent of nothing is still nothing." (82 Cal.App.3d at p. 841, 147 Cal.Rptr. 447.) The court stated that if the essence of the tort is nonphysical and injuries are of a nonphysical sort with physical harm being at most a makeweight the action should not be barred. (82 Cal.App.3d at p. 842, 147 Cal.Rptr. 447.) A number of cases have followed Renteria in recognizing that an employee may maintain an action against the employer for intentional infliction of emotional distress. (E.g., Young v. Libby-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 1037, 214 Cal.Rptr. 400; Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 219, 229–230, 191 Cal.Rptr. 696; McGee v. McNally (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 891, 895, 174 Cal.Rptr. 253; Lagies v. Copley (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 958, 970 et seq., 168 Cal.Rptr. 368.)

However, the language of Renteria and the last cited group of cases recognize that the basis of liability in part is that the employee had no substantial remedy under the workers' compensation law and that an employer should not be permitted to engage in intentional tortious conduct with neither compensation nor damages to deter him. Three cases have refused to extend Renteria to cases where there was substantial physical injury and disability and have held that when the employee alleges physical injury and disability compensable

7. The elements of a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress were stated in Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal.3d 932, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58. A prima facie case requires (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant, (2) intention to cause or reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress, (3) severe emotional suffering and (4) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress. There is liability for conduct "'exceeding all bounds usually tolerated by a decent society, of a nature which is especially calculated to cause, and does cause, mental distress. (See Prosser, Law of Torts (4th ed. 1971) p. 54.) Ordinarily mere insulting language, without more, does not constitute outrageous conduct. The Restatement view is that liability "does not extend to mere insults, indignities, threats, annoyances, petty oppressions, or other trivialities.... There is no occasion for the law to intervene ... where some one's feelings are hurt." (Rest.2d Torts, § 46, com. d.) Behavior may be considered outrageous if a defendant (1) abuses a relation or position which gives him power to damage the plaintiff's interest; (2) knows the plaintiff is susceptible to injuries through mental distress; or (3) acts intentionally or unreasonably with the recognition that the acts are likely to result in illness through mental distress. (Prosser, Law of Torts, supra, at pp. 57–58; Rest.2d Torts, § 46, coms. e, f.; Fletcher v. Western National Life Ins. Co. [1970], supra [10 Cal.App.3d 376], at p. 397 [89 Cal.Rptr. 78] (insurance agent's threatened and actual refusals to pay; threatening communication in bad faith to settle nonexistent dispute); Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering Inc., supra [2 Cal.3d], at p. 496 [86 Cal.Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216] (supervisor shouting insulting epithets; terminating employment; humiliating plaintiff); Golden v. Dungan [1971], supra [20 Cal.App.3d 295], at p. 305 [97 Cal.Rptr. 577] (process server knowingly and maliciously banging on door at midnight).)'" (25 Cal.3d at pp. 946–947, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58.)

under that law or recovers under it, workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy of the employee. (Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal.App.3d 754, 757 et seq., 210 Cal.Rptr. 619; Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal.App.3d 196, 204–206, 155 Cal.Rptr. 486; Ankeny v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1979) 88 Cal.App.3d 531, 535–536, 151 Cal.Rptr. 828.)

We recognize that the distinction drawn by the foregoing cases presents an anomaly. Intentional infliction of emotional distress which results in physical injury and disability is ordinarily more reprehensible than intentional infliction of emotional distress which does not result in disability, but civil action is allowed only in the latter situation.

[1] Nevertheless, Renteria and the cases following it do not offer support for plaintiffs' position. Obviously, the cases permitting maintenance of an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress are factually distinguishable because they do not involve substantial physical injury or disability. |157 Because the reasoning of the cases in permitting the action is largely based on the absence of any other deterrent to intentional tortious conduct, their application where other deterrents exist, such as compensation and the additional recovery under section 4553, would be to permit the tail to wag the dog. An implied exception to a statute should not be applied where the reason for the exception is not applicable.

On the other hand, the Hollywood Refrigeration, Ankeny and Gates cases, which denied a damage action because physical injury and disability were present, are not decisive in favor of defendant. They were primarily concerned with applying the rules and reasoning of Renteria, and did not extensively consider the possibility of other bases for permitting an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.[8] We proceed to consider alternative bases for an exception to the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.[9]

III. EMPLOYER'S INTENTIONAL MISCONDUCT

In Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal.3d 465, 473 et seq. 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948, we held that an employee could state a cause of action against the employer where the employer fraudulently concealed from him, from his doctors and from the state that he was suffering from a work-related disease thereby preventing treatment and inducing him to continue working under hazardous conditions.

We considered at length the employer's liability for intentional misconduct and the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code. "First we consider cases in which the intentional acts of the employer have been held not to justify an action at law. Compensation was determined to be the exclusive remedy for injuries suffered in a case in which the employer concealed the dangers inherent in the material the employees were required to handle (Wright v. FMC Corp. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 777, 779 [146 Cal.Rptr. 740]) or made false representations in that regard (Buttner v. American Bell Tel. Co. (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 581, 584 [107 P.2d 439]). The same conclusion was reached on the basis of allegations that the employer was guilty of malicious misconduct in allowing an employee to use |158 a machine without proper instruction. (Law v. Dartt (1952) 109 Cal.App.2d 508, 509 [240 P.2d 1013].)

"The reason for the foregoing rule seems obvious. It is not uncommon for an employer to 'put his mind' to the existence of

8. Actions for intentional infliction of emotional distress against an employer were upheld in Agarwal v. Johnson, supra, 25 Cal.3d 932, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58, and Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc., supra, 2 Cal.3d 493, 86 Cal.Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216, but neither case considered the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.

9. We consider only common law causes of action. We do not decide whether the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code bar causes of action created by statute.

a danger to an employee and nevertheless fail to take corrective action. (See, e.g., Rogers Materials Co. v. Ind. Acc. Com., supra, 63 Cal.2d 717, 723 [48 Cal.Rptr. 129, 408 P.2d 737].) In many of these cases, the employer does not warn the employee of the risk. Such conduct may be characterized as intentional or even deceitful. Yet if an action at law were allowed as a remedy, many cases cognizable under workers' compensation would also be prosecuted outside that system. The focus of the inquiry in a case involving work-related injury would often be not whether the injury arose out of and in the course of employment, but the state of knowledge of the employer and the employee regarding the dangerous condition which caused the injury. Such a result would undermine the underlying premise upon which the workers' compensation system is based. That system balances the advantage to the employer of immunity from liability at law against the detriment of relatively swift and certain compensation payments. Conversely, while the employee receives expeditious compensation, he surrenders his right to a potentially larger recovery in a common law action for the negligence or willful misconduct of his employer. This balance would be significantly disturbed if we were to hold, as plaintiff urges, that any misconduct of an employer which may be characterized as intentional warrants an action at law for damages. It seems clear that section 4553 is the sole remedy for additional compensation against an employer whose employee is injured in the first instance as the result of a deliberate failure to assure that the physical environment of the work place is safe.

"Thus, if the complaint alleged only that plaintiff contracted the disease because defendant knew and concealed from him that his health was endangered by asbestos in the work environment, failed to supply adequate protective devices to avoid disease, and violated governmental regulations relating to dust levels at the plant, plaintiff's only remedy would be to prosecute his claim under the workers' compensation law.

"But where the employer is charged with intentional misconduct which goes beyond his failure to assure that the tools or substances used by the employee or the physical environment of a workplace are safe, some cases have held that the employer may be subject to common law liability." (27 Cal.3d at pp. 473–475, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.)

The court pointed out that cases had permitted action for damages by the employee for an assault by the employer, for fraudulent misrepresentations [159] made as part of a conspiracy with a third party which concealed that the industrial injury was caused by the third party against whom the employee had recourse, and for assault, battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on an insurer's deceitful investigation. Those cases relied upon the factors that the employer's and insurer's misconduct had a questionable relationship to the employment and was not considered a risk of the employment. The court concluded that the cases reflect "a trend toward allowing an action at law for injuries suffered in the employment if the employer acts deliberately for the purpose of injuring the employee or if the harm resulting from the intentional misconduct consists of aggravation of an initial work-related injury." (27 Cal.3d at p. 476, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948, italics added.) We followed Johns-Manville in the recent decision in Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 306, 310–312, 219 Cal.Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858, where we held that the action for fraudulent concealment did not require affirmative misrepresentations so long as it was shown that the employer knew of the industrial injury and that work aggravated it and concealed that knowledge from the employee.

[2] Plaintiffs urge that the reasoning of Johns-Manville permits maintenance of an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress whether or not physical injury resulted where the tortious conduct has aggravated a compensable injury. Plaintiffs' contention appears too broad. As noted above (see fn. 7), the intent element for such a cause of action may consist of an intention to cause emotional distress or reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress. To permit liability where the employer did not specifically intend to cause distress but his misconduct reflected a reckless disregard of the probability of injury would to be contrary to Johns-Manville. As there pointed out: "It is not uncommon for an employer to 'put his mind' to the existence of a danger to an employee and nevertheless fail to take corrective action.... The focus of the inquiry in a case involving work-related injury would often be not whether the injury arose out of and in the course of employment, but the state of knowledge of the employer and the employee regarding the dangerous condition which caused the injury. Such a result would undermine the underlying premise upon which the workers' compensation system is based." (27 Cal.3d at p. 474, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.) Since awareness of the danger by the employer is not a basis for liability for damages, it follows that reckless disregard of the probability of injury should not warrant exemption from the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code. In addition, recovery based on aggravation where there was no intent to injure might encourage employers to seek excuses to terminate rather than attempt to continue employment of injured persons.

[3] Nevertheless, the question remains whether the exclusive remedy provisions exclude liability in a limited class of cases of intentional infliction of emotional distress causing disability, namely, where the employer acts with the purpose of causing emotional distress. Permitting such an action would throw open the doors to numerous claims already compensable under the compensation law. An employer's supervisory conduct is inherently "intentional." In order to properly manage its business, every employer must on occasion review, criticize, demote, transfer and discipline employees. Employers are necessarily aware that their employees will feel distressed by adverse personnel decisions, while employees may consider any such adverse action to be improper and outrageous. Indeed, it would be unusual for an employee not to suffer emotional distress as a result of an unfavorable decision by his employer. (Cf. Magnuson v. Burlington Northern, Inc. (9th Cir.1978) 576 F.2d 1367, 1369 ["[e]very employee who believes he has a legitimate grievance will doubtless have some emotional anguish occasioned by his belief that he has been wronged"].)

[4, 5] We have concluded that, when the misconduct attributed to the employer is actions which are a normal part of the employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and frictions in negotiations as to grievances, an employee suffering emotional distress causing disability may not avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code by characterizing the employer's decisions as manifestly unfair, outrageous, harrassment, or intended to cause emotional disturbance resulting in disability. The basis of compensation and the exclusive remedy provisions is an injury sustained and arising out of the course of employment (former Lab. Code, §§ 3600, 3601), and when the essence of the wrong is personal physical injury or death, the action is barred by the exclusiveness clause no matter what its name or technical form if the usual conditions of coverage are satisfied. (See Larson, Nonphysical Torts and Workmen's Compensation (1975) 12 Cal. Western L.Rev. 1, 11–13.)

If characterization of conduct normally occurring in the workplace as unfair or outrageous were sufficient to avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code, the exception would permit the employee to allege a cause of action in every case where he suffered mental disability merely by alleging an ulterior purpose of causing injury. Such an exception would be contrary to the compensation bargain and unfair to the employer.

In addition, when the employer successfully defends the claim of unfairness in criticisms, reassignments, denial of promotions, or other frictions, he must pay disability benefits while the employee sues and may not recover such payments because disabilities caused by stresses in the workplace are compensable whether or not the employer was at fault. The employer also may have to pay the costs of a successful defense. Liability for intentionally inflicting injury is not insurable, and if liability can only be established due [161] to such intentional misconduct, an insurer need not furnish a defense. (Gray v. Zurich Insurance Co. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 263, 275–276, fn. 15.) Finally, there is a substantial deterrent to employer intentional misconduct since the employer must not only pay compensation but also the additional recovery under section 4553 which may not be insured.

The cases that have permitted recovery in tort for intentional misconduct causing disability have involved conduct of an employer having a "questionable" relationship to the employment, an injury which did not occur while the employee was performing service incidental to the employment and which would not be viewed as a risk of the employment, or conduct where the employer or insurer stepped out of their proper roles. (Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court, supra, 27 Cal.3d 465, 477–478, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948; Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal.3d 616, 630, 102 Cal.Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063; Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 760, 779, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621; Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal.App.2d 386, 402, 343 P.2d 787.) Such circumstances are not alleged in the complaint before us.

To the contrary, the allegations in the instant case as to the conduct of the employer and the assistant chief reflect matters which can be expected to occur with substantial frequency in the working environment. Some harrassment by superiors when there is a clash of personality or values is not uncommon. Disciplinary hearings and demotions and friction in negotiations as to grievances are also an inherent part of the employment setting as are decisions to seek disability retirement and demands to appear at meetings which interfere with personal arrangements.

IV. THE DUAL CAPACITY DOCTRINE

Prior to 1982, when the employer engaged in a relationship with the employee which was distinct from that of employer and employee and invoked a different set of obligations than the employer's duties to its employee, the employee could recover damages for breach of the latter obligations under the dual capacity doctrine. (Bell v. Industrial Vangas, Inc. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 268, 272 et seq., 179 Cal.Rptr. 30, 637 P.2d 266; D'Angona v. County of Los Angeles (1980) 27 Cal.3d 661, 664 et seq., 166 Cal.Rptr. 177, 613 P.2d 238; Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange, supra, 7 Cal.3d 616, 629–631, 102 Cal.Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063; Duprey v. Shane (1952) 39 Cal.2d 781, 789–795, 249 P.2d 8.) In Duprey, the defendant doctor undertook to treat his employee's industrial injury, and it was held that he was liable for malpractice in the treatment under the dual capacity doctrine. In D'Angona it was held that under the dual capacity doctrine an employee of a hospital could maintain [162] an action for negligence against the hospital for negligent treatment of an industrial injury. In both cases, it was reasoned that the treatment was not part of the usual employer-employee relationship but that in undertaking to treat the employees the defendants were in the same relationship as they would be in treating members of the public. In Bell, the defendant manufacturer was held liable for its defectively manufactured product used by the employee, the court pointing out that other users could recover for such injuries. In Unruh, the employer's insurer was held liable for deceitful conduct in investigating the workers' compensation action.

In all of these cases, the conduct which gave rise to the dual capacity doctrine was an act not ordinarily part of the employment. In the instant case, as we have seen, all of the acts alleged are acts which normally occur within the course and scope of employment.[10]

[6] We conclude that the dual capacity doctrine does not furnish a basis in this case to avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.

V. ADDITIONAL CAUSES OF ACTION

[7] As to the additional causes of action, plaintiff Shirley Cole challenges the Court of Appeal ruling on her causes of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress and loss of consortium. We conclude that since her husband's claims are barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code, her claims are also barred.

Section 3600 provided that liability for compensation is "in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person," and section 3601 provided that compensation was "the exclusive remedy for injury or death of an employee against the employer or against any other employee." (See fns. 3, 4.) Under these provisions the Courts of Appeal have held that claims for loss of consortium are excluded where the spouse's injury giving rise to the loss is compensable under the compensation act. (Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 898, 906, 214 Cal.Rptr. 679; Casaccia v. Green Valley Disposal Co. (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 610, 612, 133 Cal.Rptr. 295; Williams v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 116, 123, 123 Cal.Rptr. 812; Gillespie v. Northridge Hosp. Foundation (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 867, 871, 98 Cal.Rptr. 134.) Although the cause of action for loss of consortium is not merely derivative or collateral to the spouse's cause of action (Rodriguez v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 382, 1168 115 Cal.Rptr. 765, 525 P.2d 669), it is based on the physical injury or disability of the spouse, and is precluded by the broad language of the Labor Code sections. (Casaccia v. Green Valley Disposal Co., supra, 62 Cal.App.3d 610, 612–613, 133 Cal.Rptr. 295; Williams v. State Compensation Ins. Fund, supra, 50 Cal.App.3d 116, 123, 123 Cal.Rptr. 812.)

In Williams v. Schwartz (1976) 61 Cal.App.3d 628, 631 et seq., 131 Cal.Rptr. 200, the court, relying on consortium cases, held that action for infliction of emotional distress for negligence of the spouse's employer in injuring the spouse was precluded by the broad language of the exclusive remedy provisions limiting the employer's liability. Where the employee's action for physical or mental injury is barred by the exclusive remedy provisions, there is no sound basis for distinguishing between negligent and intentional misconduct which causes emotional distress to the employee's spouse when the distress is due to the employee's injury.

The judgment of the Court of Appeal is affirmed.

MOSK, REYNOSO and LUCAS, JJ., concur.

GRODIN, J., concurs in the judgment.

PANELLI, Justice, concurring.

I concur.

The narrow question presented is whether an employee's court action is barred by Labor Code section 3600 et seq. (workers' compensation), as they read prior to 1982, where his injury is otherwise compensable under those statutes. Here the specific tort alleged by the employee-plaintiff is intentional infliction of emotional distress. However, the facts underlying the action stem from, and arise out of, the course of an employer-employee relationship; that is, the employer's conduct cannot be analyzed outside of the employment context. This allegedly tortious conduct resulted in physical injury, for which the employee-plaintiff can recover under Labor Code sections 3600 et seq.

10. Plaintiffs have not relied upon the union allegations as furnishing a basis for invoking the dual capacity doctrine. This would seem to be a tactical decision perhaps based on available evidence. Thus, the issue is not presented.

Under these circumstances, to allow the employee-plaintiff to bring an independent court action would be to allow him to circumvent the carefully crafted legislative framework for employment related injuries. Therefore, the action is preempted. Moreover, the spouse-plaintiff's action is barred because her injury stems from an injury to her husband that is compensable under Labor Code section 3600 et seq.

1164BIRD, Chief Justice, dissenting.

I respectfully dissent. Today, this court holds that an employer, who purposefully injures an employee and subjects him to a campaign of harassment and humiliation so extreme that it " 'exceed[s] all bounds usually tolerated by a decent society' " (Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal.3d 932, 946, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58, quoting Newby v. Alto Riviera Apartments (1976) 60 Cal.App.3d 288, 297, 131 Cal.Rptr. 547), is shielded from tort liability by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions.[1] The majority's rationale for limiting an employee's remedy to workers' compensation is that the employer's outrageous behavior here constitutes "actions which are a normal part of the employment relationship...." (See maj. opn., ante, at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.)[2]

I respectfully disagree. Cole alleges that the defendants "conspired to humiliate, harass and intimidate" him. Such a sustained and deliberate psychological assault designed to injure an employee is not a normal risk or condition of employment and is not "conduct normally occurring in the workplace." (See maj. opn., ante, at p. 309 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 744 of 729 P.2d.)

Calling such behavior normal tacitly condones it. I cannot join in that view. Since workers' compensation does not compensate an employee for pain and suffering (1 Larson, Workmen's Compensation Law (1986) § 2.40, p. 11) and does not allow for punitive damages (Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal.3d 465, 478, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948) it does not sufficiently deter employers from engaging in such egregious conduct. Accordingly, I would hold that an employee's action at law for intentional infliction of emotional distress, which alleges that the employer acted "deliberately for the purpose of injuring[165] the employee" (Johns-Manville, supra, at p. 476, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948), is impliedly exempted from the exclusive-remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act and is not barred.[3]

1. For the text of former Labor Code sections 3600 and 3601, which govern this case, see majority opinion at page 311, footnotes 4 and 5 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at page 746, footnotes 4 and 5 of 729 P.2d.

2. The majority hold that conduct normally occurring in the workplace, which causes an injury compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, may not serve as the basis for an action at law for intentional infliction of emotional distress. (Maj. opn. at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.) The majority apparently would not reach the question as to whether conduct that meets one but not the other of these standards is similarly barred by the act's exclusive remedy provisions.

The majority confuse the issue by noting that "when the essence of the wrong is personal physical injury or death, the action is barred by the exclusiveness clause no matter what its name or technical form...." (Maj. opn. at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.) Determining whether the "essence" of the injury is physical or nonphysical is of limited value in construing the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. California, unlike some states, provides workers' compensation benefits for both disabling-psychological and -physical injuries. (See Traub v. Board of Retirement (1983) 34 Cal.3d 793, 799, 195 Cal. Rptr. 681, 670 P.2d 335; Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 144 Cal. App.3d 72, 75, 192 Cal.Rptr. 643; Albertson's Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 131 Cal. App.3d 308, 310, 182 Cal.Rptr. 304; Baker v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 18 Cal. App.3d 852, 861, 96 Cal.Rptr. 279; Annot. (1980) 97 A.L.R.3d 161, 167, 174–176.)

3. This rule is similar to rules in other states where an employee is free to sue his employer when the employer acts deliberately to injure the employee. (See e.g., Johnson v. Kerr-McGee Oil Industries, Inc. (App.1981) 129 Ariz. 393, 397–398, 631 P.2d 548, 552–553; Serna v. Statewide Contractors, Inc. (1967) 6 Ariz.App. 12, 15, 429 P.2d 504, 507; Griffin v. George's, Inc.

The workers' compensation system represents an equitable compromise between the interests of employees and employers. "[I]t affords the exclusive remedy for the injury by the employee or his dependents against the employer and insurance carrier. This is part of the quid pro quo in which the sacrifices and gains of employees and employers are to some extent put in balance, for, while the employer assumes a new liability without fault, he is relieved of the prospect of large damage verdicts." (2A Larson, Workmen's Compensation Law, supra, § 65.11, pp. 12–1 to 12–6, fns. omitted.) As the majority note, however, the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act do not always prevail when the employer's misconduct is intentional. (See maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.)

In Johns-Manville, this court recognized that where the employee's injuries result from an unsafe workplace, the employee is generally limited to his or her workers' compensation remedy. (Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 473–474, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.) This is true even if the employer's failure to ensure a safe workplace is deliberate and "intentional or even deceitful." (Id., at p. 474, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.) However, this court has held that "where the employer is charged with intentional misconduct which goes beyond his failure to assure that the tools or substances used by the employee or the physical environment of a workplace are safe, some cases have held that the employer may be subject to common law liability." (Id., at p. 475, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.)

For example, our courts have permitted an action for damages where: 1) the employer physically assaulted an employee (Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 760, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621); 2) the employer conspired with a third party to conceal the latter's liability for the injury (Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal.App.2d 386, 400–403, 343 P.2d 787); and 3) the employer's workers' compensation insurer conducted a deceitful investigation of a claim (Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal.3d 616, 102 Cal.Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063).

[1166]In these cases, the courts characterized the employer's intentional misconduct as outside the scope of the normal risks or conditions of employment. (See Magliulo, supra, 47 Cal.App.3d at p. 779, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621; Ramey, supra, 173 Cal.App.2d at pp. 402–403, 343 P.2d 787; Unruh, supra, 7 Cal.3d at p. 630, 102 Cal.Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063; maj. opn., ante, at p. 314 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 749 of 729 P.2d.) In Johns-Manville, this court concluded that our caselaw reflects "a trend toward allowing an action at law for injuries suffered in the employment if the employer acts deliberately for the purpose of injuring the employee or if the harm resulting from the intentional misconduct consists of aggravation of an initial work-related injury." (Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 476, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948, emphasis added.)

Here, the employer's misconduct is analogous to incidents in which an employer physically assaults an employee. In Magliulo, the Court of Appeal held that an employee's action against an employer for physical assault is an implied exception to the exclusive-remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. (See Magliulo, supra, 47 Cal.App.3d at pp. 777–778, 779, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621.) The court in Magliulo noted that such activity has a "questionable relationship to the general conditions of employment." (47 Cal.App.3d at p. 779, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621.)

Magliulo was explained in Johns-Manville. "[A]lthough an employee might be willing to surrender his right to an action at common law for the ordinary type of work-related injuries, it is not equally clear that when he accepts employment he contemplates his employer might assault him or if an assault occurs he must be satisfied with the additional compensation provided by section 4553." (27 Cal.3d at p. 477, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948; Magliulo, supra, 47 Cal.App.3d at p. 778, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621.)

It is similarly inconceivable that an employee would contemplate that his employer would deliberately subject him to a campaign of extreme and outrageous psychological assault for the purpose of injuring him and that, if such an assault occurred, he would have to be satisfied with the limited compensation provided by the Workers' Compensation Act. Such an intentional course of harassment and humiliation, like a physical assault, is not a normal risk or condition of employment and the Legislature could not have intended to bar actions at law for such egregious assaults.

This conclusion is supported by an examination of the goal of the workers' compensation system. Workers' compensation is not designed to make injured workers whole, "but to keep them from becoming burdens on the community." (Note, Intentional Torts Under Workers' Compensation Statutes: A Blessing or a Burden? (1983) 12 Hofstra L.Rev. 181, 185 (hereafter Intentional Torts).) Therefore, "[t]he only injuries compensated under Workers' Compensation are those which produce disability and, thereby, affect earning power. Damages for pain and suffering are not available...." (Ibid.)

Under the workers' compensation system, the "employee relinquishes the right to recover a potentially greater award for damages" and "the employer assumes liability without fault...." (Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 219, 223, 191 Cal.Rptr. 696.) The employee receives "swift and certain compensation for injury" and the employer "is relieved of the prospect of a large civil verdict." (Ibid.)

While this bargain appears fair where the employer's conduct is negligent or even reckless, it is difficult to justify shielding the employer from "the full brunt of liability" where, as here, the employer has acted intentionally and with the purpose of injuring the employee. (Comment, Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court: The Not-So-Exclusive Remedy Rule (1981) 33 Hastings L.J. 263, 270 (hereafter The Not-So-Exclusive Remedy Rule); Tomita, The Exclusive Remedy of Workers' Compensation for Intentional Torts of the Employer: Johns-Manville Products v. Superior Court (1982) 18 Cal. Western L.Rev. 27, 45 (hereafter Tomita).)

Since the workers' compensation system shields the employer from full liability, it does not provide a deterrent sufficient to prevent employers from engaging in such egregious behavior. A workers' compensation award will normally be much smaller than a tort damages award (see Intentional Torts, supra, 12 Hofstra L.Rev. at pp. 185–186) and, at any rate, the workers' compensation award will be paid by the employer's insurance carrier. Moreover, punitive damages are not available under the Workers' Compensation Act; they are "afforded only in an action at law." (Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 478, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.)

Although section 4553 of the Labor Code provides that "[t]he amount of compensation otherwise recoverable shall be increased one-half" when the employer's misconduct is "serious and willful," this "is additional compensation and does not represent exemplary damages" (Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 478, fn. 12, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948).[4] In sum, "the

4. The majority argue that section 4553 creates a "substantial deterrent" to intentional employer misconduct because an employer cannot insure against such liability. (Maj. opn., ante, at pp. 315–316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at pp. 750–751 of 729 P.2d.) However, given the "low benefits" payable under the workers' compensation system (see The Not-So-Exclusive Remedy Rule, supra, 33 Hastings L.J. at p. 266, and fn. 20), an out-of-pocket payment of one-half of such an amount deterrent effect of large damage awards, one of the basic objectives of tort law and of any loss-distribution system, is not realized when workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for an intentional tort." (The Not-So-Exclusive Remedy Rule, supra, 33 Hastings L.J. at p. 270.)

[168]Despite the policy considerations weighing in favor of allowing an action at law where, as here, the employer acts with the purpose of causing emotional distress, the majority argue that the Legislature could not have intended such a result because "[p]ermitting such [ ] action[s] would throw open the doors to numerous claims already compensable under the compensation law." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.)

The majority contend that "[a]n employer's supervisory conduct is inherently 'intentional' " and employees may consider such conduct, at times, to be "improper and outrageous." Moreover, "demotions, promotions, criticisms of work practices, and frictions in negotiations as to grievances" are a standard part of the workplace. (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.) However, Cole does not allege merely a series of "adverse personnel decisions...." (See ibid.) He states that his employer singled him out and subjected him to an extreme and outrageous campaign of humiliation and harassment for the purpose of causing him emotional distress.

Contrary to the majority's characterization, Cole has not alleged merely "[s]ome harassment by superiors...." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.) Instead, he contends that the defendants conspired to humiliate him and, with knowledge of his hypertension, subjected him to unconscionable and unreasonable psychological pressure. Cole alleges, inter alia, that he was made to answer trumped-up charges of misconduct, was wrongly demoted, and was subjected to repeated public humiliation. He further alleges that these acts were engaged in for the purpose of causing him injury.

I cannot accept the majority's conclusion that such conduct "can be expected to occur with substantial frequency in the working environment." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.) Therefore, allowing an action at law in circumstances such as these poses no real threat to the workers' compensation system.

The majority contend that if this court were to exempt claims such as these from the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions, employees could always get into court by alleging outrageous conduct and an ulterior purpose to injure. However, under the rule that I would propose, an employee, in order to file an action at law, would have to allege: 1) intentional infliction of emotional distress, i.e., conduct that is so outrageous that it " 'exceeds all bounds usually tolerated by a decent society' " (Agarwal v. Johnson, supra, 25 Cal.3d at p. 946, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58, quoting Newby v. Alto Riviera Apartments, supra, 60 Cal.App.3d at p. 297, 131 Cal.Rptr. 547); and 2) that the employer acted [169]"deliberately for the purpose of injuring the employee" (Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 476, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948).[5] will not necessarily suffice to deter employer misconduct.

5. The second requirement would limit the number of cases that could evade the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. For example, an intentional infliction of emotional distress action based on "reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress" (Agarwal v. Johnson, supra, 25 Cal.3d at p. 946, 160 Cal.Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58, quoting Newby v. Alto Riviera Apartments, supra, 60 Cal.App.3d at p. 297, 131 Cal.Rptr. 547) does not involve purposeful conduct. (See Tomita, supra, 18 Cal.Western L.Rev. at p. 45.) Moreover, not all intentionally tortious acts are done with the purpose of causing injury. (Prosser & Keeton, Torts (5th ed. 1984) § 8, pp. 34, 35 ["intent is broader than a desire or purpose to bring about physical results. It extends not only to those consequences which are desired, but also to those which the actor believes are substantially certain to follow from what the actor does"].)

The majority apparently assume that the plaintiffs and their attorneys would allege such serious misconduct even when the charges could not be proved. However, plaintiffs cannot recover in an action at law unless they prove their claims of intentional and purposeful wrongdoing. If they cannot do so, plaintiffs or their attorneys must bear the substantial cost of prosecuting the tort action. I do not share the majority's belief that recognition of this implied exception to the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions would "be contrary to the compensation bargain and wrfair to the employer." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 315 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 750 of 729 P.2d.) [6]

Finally, the majority distinguish the situation presented here from the facts alleged in other California cases that have permitted recovery in tort for intentional misconduct by the employer. Those cases, they argue, "have involved conduct of an employer having a 'questionable' relationship to the employment, an injury which did not occur while the employee was performing service incidental to the employment and which would not be viewed as a risk of the employment, or conduct where the employer or insurer stepped out of their proper roles." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.) [1,7,10]However, the psychological assault described in Cole's complaint, like the physical assault in Magliulo, bears a "questionable relationship to general conditions of employment." (Magliulo v. Superior Court, supra, 47 Cal.3d at p. 779, 121 Cal.Rptr. 621.) Also, the employer certainly stepped out of their proper role by conspiring to injure Cole. (See Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange, supra, 7 Cal.3d at p. 630, 102 Cal.Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 [employer stepped out of proper role when it intentionally embarked on a deceitful course of conduct that injured the employee].) Like the fraud perpetrated in Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp., supra, 173 Cal.App.2d 386, 343 P.2d 787, the Legislature never intended that the conduct alleged here was a normal risk of employment (Id., at pp. 402–403, 343 P.2d 787.)

Since Cole has alleged that his employer singled him out and subjected him to an extreme and outrageous campaign of harassment for the purpose of causing him injury, his cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress is not barred by the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act.[7]

6. The majority argue that actions such as Cole's should be barred because the employer "must pay disability benefits while the employee sues and may not recover such payments because disabilities caused by stresses in the workplace are compensable whether or not the employer was at fault." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.) This argument is unpersuasive. The obligation to pay workers' compensation benefits is statutory and obviously applies even where an action at law is not filed. Allowing the employee to sue would be unfair to the employer only if the successful plaintiff were allowed to retain workers' compensation benefits received for the same injuries. Such double recovery would not occur, however, because the employer is entitled to a setoff against any damages already awarded the employee for work-related injuries. (See Johns-Manville, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 478–479, 165 Cal.Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.)

Furthermore, the majority contend that allowing an action at law in these circumstances is unfair because "[t]he employer ... may have to pay the costs of a successful defense." (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d.) However, assuming that "[l]iability for intentionally inflicting injury is not insurable," (maj. opn., ante, at p. 316 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 751 of 729 P.2d), employers may still contract with their insurers to cover the cost of defending an action alleging such misconduct. (See Gray v. Zurich Insurance Co. (1966) 65 Cal.2d 263, 277, 278, 54 Cal.Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168; The Not-So-Exclusive Remedy Rule, supra, 33 Hastings L.J. at p. 267, fn. 27; see also maj. opn., ante, at p. 312 of 233 Cal.Rptr., at p. 747 of 729 P.2d.)

7. Since Cole's claims should not be barred by the Workers' Compensation Act, I would find that his wife's claims were properly before the trial court.

The STATE of California et al., Defendants and Respondents.

CITY OF SONOMA et al., Plaintiffs and Appellants,

v.

The STATE of California et al., Defendants and Respondents.

L.A. No. 32106.

Supreme Court of California,
In Bank.

Jan. 2, 1987.

Rehearing Denied Feb. 26, 1987.

After State mandated increases in certain workers' compensation benefits, cities and counties, as self-insured employers, brought action against State for reimbursement of required increases. The Superior Court, Los Angeles County, Leon Savitch and John L. Cole, JJ., denied relief, and cities and counties appealed. The Court of Appeal, Eagleson, J., 215 Cal.Rptr. 139, affirmed in part, reversed in part, and remanded. The Supreme Court granted review, superseding the opinion of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court, Grodin, J., held that constitutional provision, requiring State to reimburse local governments for increased costs whenever legislature mandated new program or higher level of service, was not applicable to increases in workers' compensation benefits, where public and private employers were equally affected.

Court of Appeal reversed.

Mosk, J., concurred and filed opinion.

GRODIN, Justice.

We are asked in this proceeding to determine whether legislation enacted in 1980 and 1982 increasing certain workers' compensation benefit payments is subject to the command of article XIIIB of the California Constitution that local government costs mandated by the state must be funded by the state. The County of Los Angeles and the City of Sonoma sought review by this court of a decision of the Court of Appeal which held that state-mandated increases in workers' compensation benefits that do not exceed the rise in the cost of living are not costs which must be borne by the state under article XIIIB, an initiative constitutional provision, and legislative implementing statutes.

Although we agree that the State Board of Control properly denied plaintiffs' claims, our conclusion rests on grounds other than those relied upon by the Court of Appeal, and requires that its judgment be reversed. We conclude that when the voters adopted article XIIIB, section 6, their intent was not to require the state to provide subvention whenever a newly enacted statute resulted incidentally in some cost to local agencies. Rather, the drafters and the electorate had in mind subvention for the expense or [50]increased cost of programs administered locally and for expenses occasioned by laws that impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all state residents or entities. In using the word "programs" they had in mind the commonly understood meaning of the term, programs which carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public. Reimbursement for the cost or increased cost of providing workers' compensation benefits to employees of local agencies is not, therefore, required by section 6.

We recognize also the potential conflict between article XIIIB and the grant of plenary power over workers' compensation bestowed upon the Legislature by section 4 of article XIV, but in accord with established rules of construction our construction of article XIIIB, section 6, harmonizes these constitutional provisions.

I

On November 6, 1979, the voters approved an initiative measure which added article XIIIB to the California Constitution. That article imposed spending limits on the state and local governments and provided in section 6 (hereafter section 6): "Whenever the Legislature or any state agency mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government, the state shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse such local government for the costs of such program or increased level of service, except that the Legislature may, but need not, provide such subvention of funds for the following mandates: [¶] (a) Legislative mandates requested by the local agency affected; [¶] (b) Legislation defining a new crime or changing an existing definition of a crime; or [¶] (c) Legislative mandates enacted prior to January 1, 1975, or executive orders or regulations initially implementing legislation enacted prior to January 1, 1975." No definition of the phrase "higher level of service" was included in article XIIIB, and the ballot materials did not explain its meaning.[1]

The genesis of this action was the enactment in 1980 and 1982, after article XIIIB had been adopted, of laws increasing the amounts which employers,[51] including local governments, must pay in workers' compensation benefits to injured employees and families of deceased employees.

The first of these statutes, Assembly Bill No. 2750 (Stats.1980, ch. 1042, p. 3328), amended several sections of the Labor Code related to workers' compensation. The amendments of Labor Code sections 4453, 4453.1 and 4460 increased the maximum weekly wage upon which temporary and permanent disability indemnity is computed from $231 per week to $262.50 per week. The amendment of section 4702 of the Labor Code increased certain death benefits from $55,000 to $75,000. No ap-

1. The analysis by the Legislative Analyst advised that the state would be required to "reimburse local governments for the cost of complying with 'state mandates.' 'State mandates' are requirements imposed on local governments by legislation or executive orders." Elsewhere the analysis repeats: "[T]he initiative would establish a requirement that the state provide funds to reimburse local agencies for the cost of complying with state mandates...."

The one ballot argument which made reference to section 6, referred only to the "new program" provision, stating, "Additionally, this measure [¶] (1) will not allow the state government to force programs on local governments without the state paying for them."

propriation for increased state-mandated costs was made in this legislation.[2]

Test claims seeking reimbursement for the increased expenditure mandated by these changes were filed with the State Board of Control in 1981 by the County of San Bernardino and the City of Los Angeles. The board rejected the claims, after hearing, stating that the increased maximum workers' compensation benefit levels did not change the terms or conditions under which benefits were to be awarded, and therefore did not, by increasing the dollar amount of the benefits, create an increased level of service. The first of these consolidated actions was then filed by the County of Los Angeles, the County of San Bernardino, and the City of San Diego, seeking a writ of mandate to compel the board to approve the reimbursement claims for costs incurred in providing an increased level of service mandated by the state pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207.[3] They also sought a declaration that because the State of California and the board were obliged by article XIIIB to reimburse them, they were not obligated to pay the increased benefits until the state provided reimbursement.

The superior court denied relief in that action. The court recognized that although increased benefits reflecting cost of living raises were not expressly [52] excepted from the requirement of state reimbursement in section 6 the intent of article XIIIB to limit governmental expenditures to the prior year's level allowed local governments to make adjustment for changes in the cost of living, by increasing their own appropriations. Because the Assembly Bill No. 2750 changes did not exceed cost of living changes, they did not, in the view of the trial court, create an "increased level of service" in the existing workers' compensation program.

The second piece of legislation (Assem. Bill No. 684), enacted in 1982 (Stats. 1982, ch. 922, p. 3363), again changed the benefit levels for workers' compensation by increasing the maximum weekly wage upon which benefits were to be computed, and made other changes among which were: The bill increased minimum weekly earnings for temporary and permanent total disability from $73.50 to $168, and the maximum from $262.50 to $336. For permanent partial disability the weekly wage was raised from a minimum of $45 to $105, and from a maximum of $105 to $210, in each case for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1984. (Lab.Code, § 4453.) A $10,000 limit on additional compensation for injuries resulting from serious and willful employer misconduct was removed (Lab. Code, § 4553), and the maximum death benefit was raised from $75,000 to $85,000 for deaths in 1983, and to $95,000 for deaths on or after January 1, 1984. (Lab.Code, § 4702.)

Again the statute included no appropriation and this time the statute expressly acknowledged that the omission was made "[n]otwithstanding section 6 of Article XIIIB of the California Constitution and section 2231 ... of the Revenue and Taxation

2. The bill was approved by the Governor and filed with the Secretary of State on September 22, 1980. Prior to this, the Assembly gave unanimous consent to a request by the bill's author that his letter to the Speaker stating the intent of the Legislation be printed in the Assembly Journal. The letter stated: (1) that the Assembly Ways and Means Committee had recommended approval without appropriation on grounds that the increases were a result of changes in the cost of living that were not reimbursable under either Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231, or article XIIIB; (2) the Senate Finance Committee had rejected a motion to add an appropriation and had approved a motion to concur in amendments of the Conference Committee deleting any appropriation.

Legislative history confirms only that the final version of Assembly Bill 2750, as amended in the Assembly on April 16, 1986, contained no appropriation. As introduced on March 4, 1980, with a higher minimum salary of $510 on which to base benefits, an unspecified appropriation was included.

3. The superior court consolidated another action by the County of Butte, Novato Fire Protection District, and the Galt Unified School District with that action. Neither those plaintiffs nor the County of San Bernardino are parties to the appeal.

Code." (Stats.1982, ch. 922, § 17, p. 3372.) [4]

Once again test claims were presented to the State Board of Control, this time by the City of Sonoma, the County of Los Angeles, and the City of San Diego. Again the claims were denied on grounds that the statute made no change in the terms and conditions under which workers' compensation benefits were to be awarded, and the increased costs incurred as a result of higher benefit levels did not create an increased level of service as defined in Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207, subdivision (a).

The three claimants then filed the second action asking that the board be compelled by writ of mandate to approve the claims and the state to pay them, and that chapter 922 be declared unconstitutional because it was not adopted in conformity with requirements of the Revenue and Taxation Code [153] or section 6. The trial court granted partial relief and ordered the board to set aside its ruling. The court held that the board's decision was not supported by substantial evidence and legally adequate findings on the presence of a state-mandated cost. The basis for this ruling was the failure of the board to make adequate findings on the possible impact of changes in the burden of proof in some workers' compensation proceedings (Lab.Code § 3202.5); a limitation on an injured worker's right to sue his employer under the "dual capacity" exception to the exclusive remedy doctrine (Lab.Code §§ 3601–3602); and changes in death and disability benefits and in liability in serious and wilful misconduct cases. (Lab.Code, § 4551.)

The court also held: "[T]he changes made by chapter 922, Statutes of 1982 may be excluded from state mandated costs if that change effects a cost of living increase which does not impose a higher or increased level of service on an existing program." The City of Sonoma, the County of Los Angeles, and the City of San Diego appeal from this latter portion of the judgment only.

II

The Court of Appeal consolidated the appeals. The court identified the dispositive issue as whether legislatively mandated increases in workers' compensation benefits constitute a "higher level of service" within the meaning of section 6, or are an "increased level of service" [5] described in subdivision (a) of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207. The parties did not question the proposition that higher benefit payments might constitute a higher level of "service." The dispute centered on whether higher benefit payments which do not exceed increases in the cost of living constitute a higher level of service. Appellants maintained that the reimbursement requirement of section 6 is absolute and permits no implied or judicially created exception for increased costs that do not exceed the inflation rate. The Court of Appeal addressed the problem as one of defining "increased level of service."

The court rejected appellants' argument that a definition of "increased level of service" that once had been included in section 2231, subdivision, (e) of the Revenue and Taxation Code should be applied. That definition brought any law that imposed "additional costs" within the scope of "increased level of service." The court concluded that the repeal of section 2231 in 1975 (Stats. 1975, ch. 486, § 7, pp. 999–1000) and the failure of the Legislature by statute or the electorate in article XIIIB to readopt the [154] definition must be treated as reflecting an intent to change the law. (Eu v. Chacon (1976) 16 Cal.3d 465, 470, 128 Cal.Rptr. 1, 546 P.2d 289.) [6] On that basis the court

4. The same section "recognized," however, that a local agency "may pursue any remedies to obtain reimbursement available to it" under the statutes governing reimbursement for state-mandated costs in chapter 3 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, commencing with section 2201.

5. The court concluded that there was no legal or semantic difference in the meaning of the terms and considered the intent or purpose of the two provisions to be identical.

6. The Court of Appeal also considered the expression of legislative intent reflected in the letter by the author of Assembly Bill No. 2750 concluded that increased costs were no longer tantamount to an increased level of service.

The court nonetheless assumed that an increase in costs mandated by the Legislature did constitute an increased level of service if the increase exceeds that in the cost of living. The judgment in the second, or "Sonoma" case was affirmed. The judgment in the first, or "Los Angeles" case, however, was reversed and the matter "remanded" to the board for more adequate findings, with directions.[7]

III

The Court of Appeal did not articulate the basis for its conclusion that costs in excess of the increased cost of living do constitute a reimbursable increased level of service within the meaning of section 6. Our task in ascertaining the meaning of the phrase is aided somewhat by one explanatory reference to this part of section 6 in the ballot materials.

A statutory requirement of state reimbursement was in effect when section 6 was adopted. That provision used the same "increased level of service" phraseology but it also failed to include a definition of "increased level of service," providing only: 'Costs mandated by the state' means any increased costs which a local agency is required to incur as a result of the following: [¶] (a) Any law ... which mandates a new program or an increased level of service of an existing program." (Rev. & Tax. Code, 2207.) As noted, however, the definition of that term which had been [55] included in Revenue and Taxation Code section 2164.3 as part of the Property Tax Relief Act of 1972 (Stats.1972, ch. 1406, § 14.7, p. 2961), had been repealed in 1975 when Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231, which had replaced section 2164.3 in 1973, was repealed and a new section 2231 enacted. (Stats.1975, ch. 486, §§ 6 & 7, p. 999.)[8] Prior to repeal, Revenue and Taxation Code section 2164.3, and later section 2231, after providing in subdivision (a) for state reimbursement, explained in subdivision (e) that " 'Increased level of service' means any requirement mandated by state law or executive regulation ... which makes necessary expanded or additional costs to a county, city and county, city, or special district." (Stats.1972, ch. 1406, § 14.7, p. 2963.)

(see fn. 2, ante). While consideration of that expression of intent may have been proper in construing Assembly Bill No. 2750, we question its relevance to the proper construction of either section 6, adopted by the electorate in the prior year, or of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2207, subdivision (a) enacted in 1975. (Cf. California Employment Stabilization Com. v. Payne (1947) 31 Cal.2d 210, 213–214, 187 P.2d 702.) There is no assurance that the Assembly understood that its approval of printing a statement of intent as to the later bill was also to be read as a statement of intent regarding the earlier statute, and it was not relevant to the intent of the electorate in adopting section 6.

The Court of Appeal also recognized that the history of Assembly Bill No. 2750 and Statutes 1982, chapter 922, which demonstrated the clear intent of the Legislature to omit any appropriation for reimbursement of local government expenditures to pay the higher benefits precluded reliance on reimbursement provisions included in benefit-increase bills passed in earlier years. (See e.g., Stats.1973, chs. 1021 and 1023.)

7. We infer that the intent of the Court of Appeal was to reverse the order denying the petition for writ of mandate and to order the superior court to grant the petition and remand the matter to the board with directions to set aside its order and reconsider the claim after making the additional findings. (See Code Civ.Proc. § 1094.5, subd. (f).)

8. Pursuant to the 1972 and successor 1973 property tax relief statutes the Legislature had included appropriations in measures which, in the opinion of the Legislature, mandated new programs or increased levels of service in existing programs, (see, e.g., Stats.1973, ch. 1021, § 4, p. 2026; ch. 1022, § 2, p. 2027; Stats 1976, ch. 1017, § 9, p. 4597) and reimbursement claims filed with the State Board of Control pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code sections 2218–2218.54 had been honored. When the Legislature fails to include such appropriations there is no judicially enforceable remedy for the statutory violation notwithstanding the command of Revenue and Taxation Code section 2231, subdivision (a) that "[t]he state shall reimburse each local agency for all 'costs mandated by the state,' as defined in Section 2207" and the additional command of subdivision (b) that any statute imposing such costs "provide an appropriation therefor." (County of Orange v. Flournoy (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 908, 913, 117 Cal.Rptr. 224.)

Appellants contend that despite its repeal, the definition is still valid, relying on the fact that the Legislature, in enacting section 2207, explained that the provision was "declaratory of existing law." (Stats. 1975, ch. 486, § 18.6, p. 1006.) We concur with the Court of Appeal in rejecting this argument. "[I]t is ordinarily to be presumed that the Legislature by deleting an express provision of a statute intended a substantial change in the law." (Lake Forest Community Assn. v. County of Orange (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 394, 402, 150 Cal.Rptr. 286; see also Eu v. Chacon, supra, 16 Cal.3d 465, 470, 128 Cal.Rptr. 1, 546 P.2d 289.) Here, the revision was not minor: a whole subdivision was deleted. As the Court of Appeal noted, "A change must have been intended; otherwise deletion of the preexisting definition makes no sense."

Acceptance of appellants' argument leads to an unreasonable interpretation of section 2207. If the Legislature had intended to continue to equate "increased level of service" with "additional costs," then the provision would be circular: "costs mandated by the state" are defined as "increased costs" due to an "increased level of service," which, in turn, would be defined as "additional costs." We decline to accept such an interpretation. Under the repealed provision, "additional costs" may have been deemed tantamount to an "increased level of service," but not under the post–1975 statutory scheme. Since that definition has been repealed, an act of which the drafters of section 6 and the electorate are presumed to have been aware, [56] we may not conclude that an intent existed to incorporate the repealed definition into section 6.

In construing the meaning of the constitutional provision, our inquiry is not focussed on what the Legislature intended in adopting the former statutory reimbursement scheme, but rather on what the voters meant when they adopted article XIIIB in 1979. To determine this intent, we must look to the language of the provision itself. (ITT World Communications, Inc. v. City and County of San Francisco (1985) 37 Cal.3d 859, 866, 210 Cal.Rptr. 226, 693 P.2d 811.) In section 6, the electorate commands that the state reimburse local agencies for the cost of any "new program or higher level of service." Because workers' compensation is not a new program, the parties have focussed on whether providing higher benefit payments constitutes provision of a higher level of service. As we have observed, however, the former statutory definition of that term has been incorporated into neither section 6 nor the current statutory reimbursement scheme.

Looking at the language of section 6 then, it seems clear that by itself the term "higher level of service" is meaningless. It must be read in conjunction with the predecessor phrase "new program" to give it meaning. Thus read, it is apparent that the subvention requirement for increased or higher level of service is directed to state mandated increases in the services provided by local agencies in existing "programs." But the term "program" itself is not defined in article XIIIB. What programs then did the electorate have in mind when section 6 was adopted? We conclude that the drafters and the electorate had in mind the commonly understood meanings of the term—programs that carry out the governmental function of providing services to the public, or laws which, to implement a state policy, impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state.

The concern which prompted the inclusion of section 6 in article XIIIB was the perceived attempt by the state to enact legislation or adopt administrative orders creating programs to be administered by local agencies, thereby transferring to those agencies the fiscal responsibility for providing services which the state believed should be extended to the public. In their ballot arguments, the proponents of article XIIIB explained section 6 to the voters: "Additionally, this measure: (1) Will not allow the state government to force programs on local governments without the state paying for them." (Ballot Pamp., Proposed Amend. to Cal. Const. with arguments to voters, Spec. Statewide Elec. (Nov. 6, 1979) p. 18. Ital. added.) In this context the phrase "to force programs on local governments" confirms that the intent underlying section 6 was to require reimbursement to local agencies for the costs involved in carrying out functions peculiar to government, not [157] for expenses incurred by local agencies as an incidental impact of laws that apply generally to all state residents and entities. Laws of general application are not passed by the Legislature to "force" programs on localities.

The language of section 6 is far too vague to support an inference that it was intended that each time the Legislature passes a law of general application it must discern the likely effect on local governments and provide an appropriation to pay for any incidental increase in local costs. We believe that if the electorate had intended such a far-reaching construction of section 6, the language would have explicitly indicated that the word "program" was being used in such a unique fashion. (Cf. Fuentes v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 16 Cal.3d 1, 7, 128 Cal.Rptr. 673, 547 P.2d 449; Big Sur Properties v. Mott (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 99, 105, 132 Cal.Rptr. 835.) Nothing in the history of article XIIIB that we have discovered, or that has been called to our attention by the parties, suggests that the electorate had in mind either this construction or the additional indirect, but substantial impact it would have on the legislative process.

Were section 6 construed to require state subvention for the incidental cost to local governments of general laws, the result would be far-reaching indeed. Although such laws may be passed by simple majority vote of each house of the Legislature (art. IV, § 8, subd. (b)), the revenue measures necessary to make them effective may not. A bill which will impose costs subject to subvention of local agencies must be accompanied by a revenue measure providing the subvention required by article XIIIB. (Rev & Tax. Code, § 2255, subd. (c).) Revenue bills must be passed by two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature. (art. IV, § 12, subd. (d).) Thus, were we to construe section 6 as applicable to general legislation whenever it might have an incidental effect on local agency costs, such legislation could become effective only if passed by a supermajority vote.[9] Certainly no such intent is reflected in the language or history of article XIIIB or section 6.

We conclude therefore that section 6 has no application to, and the state need not provide subvention for, the costs incurred by local agencies in providing to their employees the same increase in workers' compensation [158] benefits that employees of private individuals or organizations receive.[10] Workers' compensation is not a program administered by local agencies to provide service to the public. Although local agencies must provide benefits to their employees either through insurance or direct payment, they are indistinguishable in this respect from private employers. In no sense can employers, public or private, be considered to be administrators of a program of workers' compensation or to be providing services incidental to administration of the program. Workers' compensation is administered by the state through the Division of Industrial Accidents and the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. (See

9. Whether a constitutional provision which requires a supermajority vote to enact substantive legislation, as opposed to funding the program, may be validly enacted as a Constitutional amendment rather than through revision of the Constitution is an open question. (See Amador Valley Joint Union High Sch. Dist. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1978) 22 Cal.3d 208, 228, 149 Cal. Rptr. 239, 583 P.2d 1281.)

10. The Court of Appeal reached a different conclusion in City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal.App.3d 182, 203 Cal.Rptr. 258, with respect to a newly enacted law requiring that all public employees be covered by unemployment insurance. Approaching the question as whether the expense was a "state mandated cost," rather than as whether the provision of an employee benefit was a "program or service" within the meaning of the Constitution, the court concluded that reimbursement was required. To the extent that this decision is inconsistent with our conclusion here, it is disapproved.

Lab.Code, § 3201 et seq.) Therefore, although the state requires that employers provide workers' compensation for nonexempt categories of employees, increases in the cost of providing this employee benefit are not subject to reimbursement as state-mandated programs or higher levels of service within the meaning of section 6.

IV

Our construction of section 6 is further supported by the fact that it comports with controlling principles of construction which "require that in the absence of irreconcilable conflict among their various parts, [constitutional provisions] must be harmonized and construed to give effect to all parts. (Clean Air Constituency v. California State Air Resources Bd. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 801, 813–814 [114 Cal.Rptr. 577, 523 P.2d 617]; Serrano v. Priest (1971) 5 Cal.3d 584, 596 [96 Cal.Rptr. 601, 487 P.2d 1241]; Select Base Materials v. Board of Equal. (1959) 51 Cal.2d 640, 645 [335 P.2d 672].)" (Legislature v. Deukmejian (1983) 34 Cal.3d 658, 676, 194 Cal.Rptr. 781, 669 P.2d 17.)

Our concern over potential conflict arises because article XIV, section 4,[11] gives the Legislature "plenary power, unlimited by any provision of this Constitution" over workers' compensation. Although seemingly unrelated to Workers' compensation, section 6, as we have shown, would have an indirect, but substantial impact on the ability of the Legislature to make future changes in the existing workers' compensation scheme. Any changes in the system which would increase benefit levels, provide new services, or extend current service might also increase local agencies' costs. Therefore, even though workers' compensation is a program which is intend-

11. Section 4: "The Legislature is hereby expressly vested with plenary power, unlimited by any provision of this Constitution, to create, and enforce a complete system of workers' compensation, by appropriate legislation, and in that behalf to create and enforce a liability on the part of any or all persons to compensate any or all of their workers for injury or disability, and their dependents for death incurred or sustained by the said workers in the course of their employment, irrespective of the fault of any party. A complete system of workers' compensation includes adequate provisions for the comfort, health and safety and general welfare of any and all workers and those dependent upon them for support to the extent of relieving from the consequences of any injury or death incurred or sustained by workers in the course of their employment, irrespective of the fault of any party; also full provision for securing safety in places of employment; full provision for such medical, surgical, hospital and other remedial treatment as is requisite to cure and relieve from the effects of such injury; full provision for adequate insurance coverage against liability to pay or furnish compensation; full provision for regulating such insurance coverage in all its aspects, including the establishment and management of a State compensation insurance fund; full provision for otherwise securing the payment of compensation; and full provision for vesting power, authority and jurisdiction in an administrative body with all the requisite governmental functions to determine any dispute or matter arising under such legislation, to the end that the administration of such legislation shall accomplish substantial justice in all cases expeditiously, inexpensively, and without encumbrance of any character; all of which matters are expressly declared to be the social public policy of this State, binding upon all departments of the State government.

"The Legislature is vested with plenary powers, to provide for the settlement of any disputes arising under such legislation by arbitration, or by an industrial accident commission, by the courts, or by either, any, or all of these agencies, either separately or in combination, and may fix and control the method and manner of trial of any such dispute, the rules of evidence and the manner of review of decisions rendered by the tribunal or tribunals designated by it; provided that all decisions of any such tribunal shall be subject to review by the appellate courts of this State. The Legislature may combine in one statute all the provisions for a complete system of workers' compensation, as herein defined.

"The Legislature shall have power to provide for the payment of an award to the state in the case of the death, arising out of and in the course of the employment, of an employee without dependents, and such awards may be used for the payment of extra compensation for subsequent injuries beyond the liability of a single employer for awards to employees of the employer.

"Nothing contained herein shall be taken or construed to impair or render ineffectual in any measure the creation and existence of the industrial accident commission of this State or the State compensation insurance fund, the creation and existence of which, with all the functions vested in them, are hereby ratified and confirmed." (Emphasis added.)

ed to provide benefits to all injured or deceased employees and their families, because the change might have some incidental impact on local government costs, the change could be made only if it commanded a supermajority vote of two-thirds of the members of each house of the Legislature. The potential conflict between section 6 and the plenary power over workers' compensation granted to the Legislature by article XIV, section 4 is apparent.

The County of Los Angeles, while recognizing the impact of section 6 on the Legislature's power over workers' compensation, argues that the "plenary power" granted by article XIV, section 4, is power over the substance of workers' compensation legislation, and that this power would be unaffected by article XIIIB if the latter is construed to compel reimbursement. The subvention requirement, it is argued, is analogous to other procedural [60] limitations on the Legislature, such as the "single subject rule" (art. IV, § 9), as to which article XIV, section 4, has no application. We do not agree. A constitutional requirement that legislation either exclude employees of local governmental agencies or be adopted by a supermajority vote would do more than simply establish a format or procedure by which legislation is to be enacted. It would place workers' compensation legislation in a special classification of substantive legislation and thereby curtail the power of a majority to enact substantive changes by any procedural means. If section 6 were applicable, therefore, article XIIIB would restrict the power of the Legislature over workers' compensation.

The City of Sonoma concedes that so construed article XIIIB would restrict the plenary power of the Legislature, and reasons that the provision therefore either effected a pro tanto repeal of article XIV, section 4, or must be accepted as a limitation on the power of the Legislature. We need not accept that conclusion, however, because our construction of section 6 permits the constitutional provisions to be reconciled.

Construing a recently enacted constitutional provision such as section 6 to avoid conflict with, and thus pro tanto repeal of, an earlier provision is also consistent with and reflects the principle applied by this court in Hustedt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 329, 178 Cal. Rptr. 801, 636 P.2d 1139. There, by coincidence, article XIV, section 4, was the later provision. A statute, enacted pursuant to the plenary power of the Legislature over workers' compensation, gave the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board authority to discipline attorneys who appeared before it. If construed to include a transfer of the authority to discipline attorneys from the Supreme Court to the Legislature, or to delegate that power to the board, article XIV, section 4, would have conflicted with the constitutional power of this court over attorney discipline and might have violated the separation of powers doctrine. (Art. III, § 3.) The court was thus called upon to determine whether the adoption of article XIV, section 4, granting the Legislature plenary power over Workers' compensation effected a pro tanto repeal of the preexisting, exclusive jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over attorneys.

We concluded that there had been no pro tanto repeal because article XIV, section 4, did not give the Legislature the authority to enact the statute. Article XIV section 4, did not expressly give the Legislature power over attorney discipline, and that power was not integral to or necessary to the establishment of a complete system of workers' compensation. In those circumstances the presumption against implied repeal controlled. "It is well established that the adoption of article XIV, section 4 'effected a repeal pro tanto' of any state constitutional provisions which conflicted with that [61] amendment. (Subsequent Etc. Fund. v. Ind. Acc. Com. (1952) 39 Cal.2d 83, 88 [244 P.2d 889]; Western Indemnity Co. v. Pillsbury (1915) 170 Cal. 686, 695 [151 P. 398].) A pro tanto repeal of conflicting state constitutional provisions removes 'insofar as necessary' any restrictions which would prohibit the realization of the objectives of the new article. (Methodist Hosp. of Sacramento v. Saylor (1971) 5 Cal.3d 685, 691–692 [97 Cal.Rptr. 1, 488 P.2d 161]; cf. City and County of San Francisco v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 103, 15–17 [148 Cal.Rptr. 626, 583 P.2d 151].) Thus the question becomes whether the board must have the power to discipline attorneys if the objectives of article XIV, section 4 are to be effectuated. In other words, does the achievement of those objectives compel the modification of a power—the disciplining of attorneys—that otherwise rests exclusively with this court?" (Hustedt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd., supra, 30 Cal.3d 329, 343, 178 Cal.Rptr. 801, 636 P.2d 1139.) We concluded that the ability to discipline attorneys appearing before it was not necessary to the expeditious resolution of workers' claims or the efficient administration of the agency. Thus, the absence of disciplinary power over attorneys would not preclude the board from achieving the objectives of article XIV, section 4, and no pro tanto repeal need be found.

A similar analysis leads to the conclusion here that no pro tanto repeal of article XIV, section 4, was intended or made necessary here by the adoption of section 6. The goals of article XIIIB, of which section 6 is a part, were to protect residents from excessive taxation and government spending. (Huntington Park Redevelopment Agency v. Martin (1985) 38 Cal.3d 100, 109–10, 211 Cal.Rptr. 133, 695 P.2d 220.) Section 6 had the additional purpose of precluding a shift of financial responsibility for carrying out governmental functions from the state to local agencies which had had their taxing powers restricted by the enactment of article XIIIA in the preceding year and were ill equipped to take responsibility for any new programs. Neither of these goals is frustrated by requiring local agencies to provide the same protections to their employees as do private employers. Bearing the costs of salaries, unemployment insurance, and workers' compensation coverage—costs which all employers must bear—neither threatens excessive taxation or governmental spending, nor shifts from the state to a local agency the expense of providing governmental services.

Therefore, since the objectives of article XIIIB and section 6 can be achieved in the absence of state subvention for the expense of increases in workers' compensation benefit levels for local agency employees, section 6 did not effect a pro tanto repeal of the Legislature's otherwise plenary power over workers' compensation, a power that does not contemplate that the Legislature rather than the employer must fund the cost or increases in [62] benefits paid to employees of local agencies, or that statute affecting those benefits paid to employees of local agencies, or that a statute affecting those benefits must garner a supermajority vote.

Because we conclude that section 6 has no application to legislation that is applicable to employees generally, whether public or private, and affects local agencies only incidentally as employers, we need not reach the question that was the focus of the decision of the Court of Appeal—whether the state must reimburse localities for state-mandated cost increases which merely reflect adjustments for cost-of-living in existing programs.

It follows from our conclusions above, that in each of these cases the plaintiffs' reimbursement claims were properly denied by the State Board of Control. Their petitions for writs of mandate seeking to compel the board to approve the claims lacked merit and should have been denied by the superior court without the necessity of further proceedings before the board.

In B001713, the Los Angeles case, the Court of Appeal reversed the judgment of the superior court denying the petition. In the B003561, the Sonoma case, the superior court granted partial relief, ordering further proceedings before the board, and the Court of Appeal affirmed that judgment.

The judgment of the Court of Appeal is reversed. Each side shall bear its own costs.

BIRD, C.J., and BROUSSARD, REYNOSO, LUCAS and PANELLI, JJ., concur.

MOSK, Justice, concurring.

I concur in the result reached by the majority, but I prefer the rationale of the Court of Appeal, i.e., that neither article XIII B, section 6, of the Constitution nor Revenue and Taxation Code sections 2207 and 2231 require state subvention for increased workers' compensation benefits provided by chapter 1042, Statutes of 1980, and chapter 922, Statutes of 1982, but only if the increases do not exceed applicable cost-of-living adjustments because such payments do not result in an increased level of service.

Under the majority theory, the state can order unlimited financial burdens on local units of government without providing the funds to meet those burdens. This may have serious implications in the future, and does violence to the requirement of section 2231, subdivision (a), that the state reimburse local government for "all costs mandated by the state."

In this instance it is clear from legislative history that the Legislature did not intend to mandate additional burdens, but merely to provide a cost-of-living$_{63}$ adjustment. I agree with the Court of Appeal that this was permissible.

Supreme Court of California, In Bank.

Jan. 2, 1987.

Rehearing Granted March 26, 1987.

Defendant was convicted in the Superior Court, San Bernardino County, Ben T. Kayashima, J., of first-degree murder and sentenced to death. On automatic appeal, the Supreme Court held that: (1) defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel; (2) evidence of defendant's prior acts of child abuse was admissible; (3) torture-murder special circumstance instruction was sufficient; and (4) "no sympathy" instruction at penalty phase of murder prosecution required reversal of death penalty where defendant introduced mitigating character and background evidence.

Judgment of guilt and finding of torture-murder special circumstance affirmed; finding of "heinous, atrocious or cruel" murder special circumstance and penalty of death reversed.

McK. Dig. Reference: [1] Municipal Corporations, § 86; Public Works, § 5.

Plaintiff filed an action for an injunction and declaratory relief, seeking a determination that a contract entered into between defendant and John Roseberry for the performance of a public work was invalid. A judgment was entered in favor of defendant, holding the contract to be valid and enforceable, and plaintiff appeals.

The work to be performed under the contract consisted of the trimming of trees and clearing of brush on high voltage electrical transmission line right-of-way easements owned or controlled by defendant and operated and maintained by its public utilities department.

Through the transmission lines the public utilities department distributes to the residents of defendant city electrical energy originating at various hydroelectric or steam generating plants operated by Southern California Edison Company both within and without the State of California, none of which plants are in defendant city.

The payment by defendant to Mr. Roseberry for the performance of the contract was to be made solely from funds of the public utilities department of defendant, which funds are derived from the revenue of said public utilities department.

Plaintiff contends that the work to be performed under the contract, being an essential part of the maintenance of high tension lines delivering power from outside the state, was a matter of state concern and that therefore under section 1773 of the Labor Code* it was necessary that the contract require Mr. Roseberry to pay his employees the general prevailing wage in the community. It was stipulated that the contract included no such requirement.

Defendant, on the other hand, relying on Pasadena v. Charleville, 215 Cal. 384 [10 P.2d 745], contends that the work to be performed was a municipal affair and that consequently the general law is inapplicable.

[1] This is the sole question necessary for us to determine: Is it required that the general prevailing wage in the community be paid to persons performing maintenance work on high voltage electrical transmission line right-of-way easements owned or controlled by a freeholders' charter city?

*Section 1773 of the Labor Code provides, in part: "The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract, and shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the contract itself, what the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality is for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract. . . ."

No. Even conceding the correctness of plaintiff's contention that the work is a matter of state concern (cf. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. City & County of San Francisco, 51 Cal.2d 766, 767 [1a] et seq. [336 P.2d 514]), there is nevertheless no requirement that the general prevailing wage in the community be paid for the type of work here involved.

The work in the present case clearly constitutes maintenance work. It is therefore excluded under the terms of section 1771 of the Labor Code, which provides: "Not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed as provided in this chapter, shall be paid to all workmen employed on public works exclusive of maintenance work." (Italics added.)

The judgment is affirmed.

Argued and Submitted Sept. 14, 1999.
On Remand from the United States Supreme Court April 19, 1999.
Filed Feb. 23, 2000.

Public works subcontractor brought action against State of California's Labor Commissioner and others challenging constitutionality of California statutes authorizing state, without notice or hearing, to withhold money and impose penalties for subcontractor's failure to comply with prevailing wage requirements. The United States District Court for the Central District of California, Manuel L. Real, Chief District Judge, entered summary judgment for subcontractor. Labor Commissioner and others appealed. The Court of Appeals, 156 F.3d 893, affirmed in part and reversed and remanded in part. The Supreme Court granted certiorari, vacated judgment, and remanded for further consideration. The Court of Appeals reinstated its prior opinion and held that: (1) subcontractor did not have right under due process clause to payment of funds withheld pending outcome of hearing; (2) State violated subcontractor's due process rights when if failed to afford subcontractor a hearing prior to withholding funds; and (3) withholding of funds constituted state action.

Affirmed in part; reversed and remanded in part.

ORDER

In G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. v. Bradshaw, 156 F.3d 893 (9th Cir.1998), we held that California Labor Code provisions authorizing the state to seize money and impose penalties for a subcontractor's failure to comply with prevailing wage requirements violated the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. See id. at 904. The Supreme Court granted certiorari, vacated our judgment, and remanded "for further consideration in light of American Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Company v. Sullivan, 526 U.S. 40, 119 S.Ct. 977, 143 L.Ed.2d 130 (1999)." Bradshaw v. G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc., --- U.S. ----, 119 S.Ct. 1450, 143 L.Ed.2d 538 (1999). Having determined that Sullivan is fully consistent with our analysis, we reinstate the judgment and opinion.

DISCUSSION

Sullivan involved the Pennsylvania Workers' Compensation Act, under which an employer or its insurer must pay for all "reasonable" and "necessary" medical treatment for work-related injuries. See 119 S.Ct. at 982. Under the Pennsylvania scheme, an insurance company could withhold payment for medical treatment if it disputed the reasonableness or necessity of that treatment. See Pa. Stat. Ann. 943 § 531(5) ("All payments to providers for treatment ... shall be made within thirty (30) days of receipt of such bills and records unless the employer or insurer disputes the reasonableness or necessity of the treatment."). The Sullivan plaintiffs claimed that the failure to pay their contested benefit claims within thirty days, before a process was provided to resolve the dispute about the "reasonableness" of their treatment, amounted to a deprivation of due process.

Sullivan dealt with two questions: (1) whether the insurance company's decision to withhold payment for disputed medical treatment was fairly attributable to the State so as to subject insurers to the constraints of the Fourteenth Amendment, 119 S.Ct. at 984; and (2) whether the Due Process Clause requires workers' compensation insurers to immediately pay disputed medical bills prior to a determination that the medical treatment was reasonable and necessary. Id. at 985.

[1] The first question concerns whether there is state action, since the Fourteenth Amendment does not reach private acts or actors. Sullivan repeats a familiar calculus to determine the presence of state action: there must be some deprivation of a constitutional right and the party charged with the deprivation must be fairly said to be a state actor. Id. at 986. The second question turns on whether the claimant has a property interest in the matter complained of.

The Supreme Court found that the Sullivan plaintiffs did not possess a property interest in the immediate, unconditional payment for all medical treatment under the Pennsylvania statute. Nevertheless, the Court stated that the plaintiffs did have an interest in payment of "reasonable" medical costs, see Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 990, and went out of its way to make clear that its holding did not upset previous Supreme Court precedent supporting the conclusion that the plaintiffs had a property interest in their claims for payment. See id. at n. 13 ("Respondents do not contend that they have a property interest in their claims for payment, as distinct from the payments themselves, such that the State, the arguments goes, could not finally reject their claims without affording them appropriate procedural protections.") (citing Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co., 455 U.S. 422, 430-31, 102 S.Ct. 1148, 71 L.Ed.2d 265 (1982)). Justice Ginsburg, who provided the fifth vote necessary to make the due process discussion in Sullivan an opinion of the Court, further clarified this distinction in her concurrence:

> I join Part III of the Court's opinion on the understanding that the Court rejects specifically, and only, respondent's demands for constant payment of each medical bill, within 30 days of receipt, pending determination of the necessity or reasonableness of the medical treatment. I do not doubt, however, that due process requires fair procedures for the adjudication of respondents' claims for workers' compensation benefits, including medical care.

Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 991 (emphasis added) (citation omitted).

[2][3][4][5] Our opinion adopts the approach explicitly preserved by the Sullivan majority and unequivocally adopted in Justice Ginsburg's concurrence. We specifically held that G & G did not have a right to payment of the disputed funds pending the outcome of whatever kind of hearing would be afforded to determine whether G & G complied with the California prevailing wage laws. See G & G Fire Sprinklers, 156 F.3d at 903-04. To the contrary, we explicitly authorized the withholding of payments pending the hearing. See id. G & G's due process rights were violated, we held, not because it was denied immediate payment, but because the California statutory scheme afforded no hearing at all when state officials directed that payments 944 be withheld. [FN1] See id. at 904. Nor can there be any doubt whether the action at issue here was compelled by the State. The withholding in Sullivan was carried out by a private insurer exercising its discretion in a way permitted by State law. The withholding here was specifically directed by State officials in an environment where the withholding party has no discretion at all. Moreover, in their complaint the plaintiffs directly attack the notices of withholding issued by the state agency, alleging that they were issued "arbitrarily and unreasonably."

> FN1. It is true that our opinion addressed the withholding of payments pending the outcome of the hearing to determine contractor compliance in its discussion of the "process due" to a protected property interest, and not in its discussion of the nature of the property interest protected. In contrast, the above discussion in Sullivan is situated in the Supreme Court's discussion of the existence or nonexistence of a protected property interest. But this does not reduce the relevance of Sullivan 's reasoning. As the Court recognized in the seminal due process case Mathews v. Eldridge, the definition of a protected property interest often includes a temporal component. See 424 U.S. 319, 96 S.Ct. 893, 47 L.Ed.2d 18 (1976) (identifying the property interest at stake as the beneficiary's interest in continuing to receive benefits for approximately one year). For this reason, issues of timing can arise at either the property-determination or the process-determination stage.

Because our holding is not contrary to the Court's ruling in Sullivan, and because our opinion's reasoning fits comfortably within the analytic framework set forth in Sullivan, we REINSTATE the judgment and the opinion reported at 156 F.3d 893 (9th Cir.1998).

KOZINSKI, Circuit Judge, dissenting:

I dissented from the original opinion in this case because I do not believe that relations among contracting parties are governed by the Due Process Clause merely because one of the parties happens to be a state. See G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. v. Bradshaw, 156 F.3d 893, 908 (1998) (Kozinski, J., dissenting). I continue to adhere to that view. But the Supreme Court has now directed us to reconsider our opinion in light of American Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sullivan, 526 U.S. 40, 119 S.Ct. 977, 143 L.Ed.2d 130 (1999). See Bradshaw v. G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc., --- U.S. ----, 119 S.Ct. 1450, 143 L.Ed.2d 538 (1999). In response, the majority reinstates its original opinion without amendment, claiming that its reasoning "fits comfortably within the analytic framework set forth in Sullivan." Reinstatement Order at 1970. I must dissent once again, because Sullivan fits the majority's rationale about as comfortably as Cinderella's slipper on the wicked step-sister's foot.

Sullivan teaches that, to state a claim for relief under section 1983, G & G must identify both an alleged constitutional deprivation and a state actor who is responsible for it. See Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 985 (rejecting the argument that "we need not concern ourselves with 'the identity of the defendant' "). In deciding whether G & G has succeeded in this, Sullivan explains that we must begin "by identifying 'the specific conduct of which the plaintiff complains.' " Id. at 985 (quoting Blum v. Yaretsky, 457 U.S. 991, 1004, 102 S.Ct. 2777, 73 L.Ed.2d 534 (1982)). Here the only deprivation alleged by G & G was effected by the prime contractor, who withheld funds which G & G claims under a contract. [FN1] There's no state action.

> FN1. See G & G, 156 F.3d at 901 n. 4 ("Here, G & G was not paid by its respective principal obligor, the prime contractor, and it is asking for an opportunity to contest that deprivation.")

The majority waves a magic wand by asserting that "[t]he withholding here was specifically directed by state officials in an environment where the withholding party has no discretion at all." Reinstatement Order at 1970. This would be true had the prime contractor been ordered, under penalty of law, to withhold funds from G & G. It was not. The only entity "specifically directed" to withhold funds was the awarding body, which withheld funds only from 945 the prime contractor, not from G & G. While the challenged provision authorized-even encouraged-the prime to withhold an equivalent amount from G & G, the prime was free to pay G & G the full amount specified by the contract. Sullivan clearly holds that mere authorization and encouragement do not render a private entity's decisions "fairly attributable" to the state. 119 S.Ct. at 986. Under Sullivan, then, the prime contractor who chose to deprive G & G of its alleged property was not a state actor.

This presents the same problem for G & G as it did for the plaintiffs in Sullivan. The Court's description of the Sullivan plaintiffs' attempt to get around this problem is equally apt here: "Perhaps hoping to avoid the traditional application of our state-action cases, respondents attempt to characterize their claim as a 'facial' or 'direct' challenge to the [provisions in question.]" Id. at 985. In like manner, G & G's claim comes to us in the garb of a "direct constitutional challenge to the state's regulatory power as embodied in these statutes...." G & G, 156 F.3d at 902. The reinstated opinion assumes that, so long as standing requirements are satisfied, G & G may bring such a challenge. It then goes on to find a "causal link between G & G's injury and the state's action" sufficient to support standing. Id. at 900.

The problem is that standing deals only with whether the plaintiff "is a proper party to request an adjudication of a particular issue and not whether the issue itself is justiciable." Flast v. Cohen, 392 U.S. 83, 100, 88 S.Ct. 1942, 20 L.Ed.2d 947 (1968). If the state's conduct does not violate the Constitution, there can be no question of standing-standing to challenge what? The violation alleged here is an unconstitutional deprivation of property. Sullivan tells us that the deprivation at issue cannot be attributed to the state. Therefore, the state cannot have violated G & G's right to due process. G & G is left with two alternatives: suing a depriver who is not a state actor, or suing a state actor who has committed no deprivation. The panel's opinion lets G & G get away with the latter, by substituting the normal causation prong of standing analysis for the more intimate causal relationship required by the state action doctrine. [FN2] Were it permissible to thus turn a pumpkin into a carriage, the Court should have allowed the Sullivan plaintiffs to bring their "facial challenge," on the theory that, while the private insurers in that case were not state actors, the state bureau's authorization of their withholding created a "causal link" sufficient to support standing. [FN3]

> FN2. Compare G & G, 156 F.3d at 899-900 (causation requirement for standing satisfied where choices of third party have been made " 'in such a manner as to produce causation and permit redressability' ") (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561-62, 112 S.Ct. 2130, 119 L.Ed.2d 351 (1992)), with Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 986 (no state action unless the state has " 'exercised coercive power' " or provided such significant encouragement that " 'the choice must in law be deemed to be that of the State' ") (quoting Blum, 457 U.S. at 1004, 102 S.Ct. 2777).

> FN3. Like G & G, the Sullivan plaintiffs had also named as defendants the state officials who administered the challenged act. See Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 984. Yet after holding that the private insurers regulated by the act were not state actors, the Court held that this alone would be sufficient to reverse the Third Circuit's holding that the act violated due process. See id. at 989. The Court nevertheless went on to address the merits of the claim, because it thought the question an important one. See id.

In addition to ignoring Sullivan 's state action holding, the majority fails to apply the other teaching of the case-that before finding a deprivation, we must carefully identify the nature of the property interest at stake. See Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 989-90 (holding that a statutory entitlement to payment for "reasonable" and "necessary" medical treatment cannot give rise to a property interest until the payments in question have been proven to be reasonable and necessary). The opinion reinstated today asserts that G & G has a protectable 946 property interest "in being paid in full for the construction work it has completed." G & G, 156 F.3d at 901. This cannot be so, for just as the Sullivan plaintiffs had no property interest in receiving payment for medical treatments that had not been shown to be "reasonable" and "necessary," G & G can have no property interest in being paid for work that has not been shown to satisfy the contractual condition that it be completed in accordance with prevailing wage requirements. Nevertheless, though the majority now attempts to recharacterize its position, see Reinstatement Order at 1969, its opinion remains unambiguous in holding that G & G has already suffered a deprivation for which the state is required to provide a post-deprivation hearing. See G & G, 156 F.3d at 903-04.

Even if the reinstated opinion actually rested on the rationale now attributed to it, we would still have a case of premature remediation. The majority's current position is that its holding is in line with previous Supreme Court precedent protecting plaintiffs' "property interest in their claims for payment." Reinstatement Order at 1968. If the property interest at stake here is G & G's claim for payment, however, when and how was G & G deprived of it? This is not a case like Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co., 455 U.S. 422, 102 S.Ct. 1148, 71 L.Ed.2d 265 (1982), where the plaintiff had filed a timely claim that was dismissed because of a procedural default committed by the state. See id. at 426-27, 102 S.Ct. 1148. G & G has yet to attempt to file a claim in state court. How can the state have deprived G & G of a legal claim it has never asked the state to enforce? [FN4]

> FN4. Cf. Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 988 (noting that the legal obligation to pay on a contract arises only after one has "initiated a claim and reduced it to a judgment").

The reinstated opinion forces the state to create an entirely new administrative machinery if it wishes to withhold funds in accordance with the terms of its contract. See G & G, 156 F.3d at 905-06. The majority appears to believe this is justified by Justice Ginsburg's concurring statement in Sullivan that " 'due process requires fair procedures for the adjudication [of claims.]' " Reinstatement Order at 1969 (quoting Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 991 (Ginsburg, J., concurring)). No doubt it does. But this is not a case like Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254, 90 S.Ct. 1011, 25 L.Ed.2d 287 (1970), where the Court, having identified a previously unrecognized property interest in welfare benefits, was obliged to create a new procedural regime to protect it. This is a claim for payment on a contract. There is a well-established "fair procedure" for dealing with such claims: an action for breach of contract in state court. It seems unlikely that Justice Ginsburg would regard such a time-honored procedure as inadequate to satisfy the demands of due process. The majority has not explained why working on a government contract heightens one's interest in receiving prompt payment so as to require procedural safeguards not available to other parties that have a disputed claim under a contract.

It is true that the law does not on its face guarantee that a subcontractor will attain an assignment enabling it to sue the awarding body. But G & G has not tried to obtain such an assignment from the prime contractor, nor has it given the state courts a chance to decide whether a subcontractor who has been denied such assignment nevertheless has an equitable right to sue under state law. Until these questions have been resolved against G & G, it simply cannot be said that the state has " 'finally reject[ed] their claims without affording them appropriate procedural protections.' " Reinstatement Order at 1968 (quoting Sullivan, 119 S.Ct. at 990 n. 13).

To sum up, the reinstated opinion papers over a state action deficiency with standing analysis, identifies a property interest the Court has told us can't yet exist, and holds that due process entitles G & G 947 to the creation of a new procedure bypassing the one all other unpaid contractors are required to use. A fairy godmother could do no more. Once again, I must respectfully dissent.

v.

Bill HONIG, as Superintendent, etc. et al., Defendants and Respondents.

No. S000064.

Supreme Court of California.

March 14, 1988.

Rehearing Denied April 27, 1988.

School districts filed petition for writ of mandate, declaratory relief, and restitution, seeking declaration that statute requiring local school districts to pay 10% of excess annual cost of educating any pupil, who attends state-operated school for pupils not educable at local schools and whose parent or guardian lives within district, violated State Constitution. The Superior Court, San Luis Obispo County, Walter Charamza, J., denied the petition. School districts appealed. The Court of Appeal, 233 Cal.Rptr. 531, affirmed. The Supreme Court granted review, superseding the opinion of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court, Mosk, J., held that: (1) the statute did require school districts to support a "new program," for purposes of a state constitutional article providing that whenever legislature or any state agency mandates new program or higher level of service by any local government, state should provide subvention of funds to reimburse local government for costs of program or increased level of service; (2) issue of whether school districts were "mandated" by the statute to make contributions called for therein for purposes of state constitutional article would be remanded to Commission on State Mandates for determination; and (3) State Superintendent of Public Instruction and State Department of Education did not act in excess of their authority by deducting amount of contributions required of school districts by the statute from funds appropriated for support of the districts' schools.

Reversed and remanded.

1. Schools ⇐19(1)

Statute requiring local school districts to pay 10% of excess annual cost of educating any pupil who attends state-operated school for pupils not educable at local schools and whose parent or guardian lives within district creates "new program," for purposes of constitutional article providing that whenever legislature or any state agency mandates new program or higher level of service by any local government, state should provide subvention of funds to reimburse local government for costs of program or increased level of service, although impact of statute was to require districts to contribute funds to operate state schools for handicapped rather than to themselves administer program; the statute shifted partial financial responsibility for support of students in state operated schools from state to local districts. West's Ann.Cal.Educ.Code § 59300; West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

2. Schools ⇐19(1)

Issue of whether local school districts are "mandated" to make contributions called for by statute requiring local school districts to pay 10% of excess annual cost of educating any pupil, who attends state-operated school for pupils not educable at local schools and whose parent or guardian lives within district, would be remanded to Commission on State Mandates, for purposes of determining whether statute imposes on local districts state-mandated new program or level of service for which state must provide reimbursement under state constitutional article; it was argued local districts were not compelled to contribute to education of handicapped children at state schools because they possessed other options to educate such students. West's Ann.Cal.Educ.Code § 59300; West's Ann. Cal.Gov.Code § 17500 et seq.; West's Ann. Cal. Const. Art. 13B, § 6.

3. Schools ⇐19(1)

State Superintendent of Public Instruction and State Department of Education did not act in excess of their authority by deducting amount of contributions required of local school districts from funds appropriated to local districts for support of districts' schools to satisfy districts' obligations under statute requiring local school districts to pay 10% of excess annual cost of educating any pupil, who attends state-operated school for pupils not educable at local schools and whose parent or guardian lives within district; the statute did not specify method by which contributions of districts to state schools should be paid, so method of collection was left to reasonable discretion of Department, and method of collection chosen by Department was not unreasonable, in view of fact that no test claim had been filed when districts failed to pay invoices. West's Ann.Cal.Educ.Code § 59300.

MOSK, Justice.

Section 59300 of the Education Code requires a school district to contribute part of the cost of educating pupils from the district at state schools for the severely handicapped. We must determine if that section imposes on a district a state-mandated "new program or higher level of service" for which the state must provide reimbursement under section 6 of article XIIIB of the California Constitution.[1] The constitutional provision, adopted by initiative in 1979, declares, with exceptions not relevant here, that "[w]henever the Legislature ... mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government, the state shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse such local government for the costs of such program or increased level of service...."

The resolution of the question before us turns on whether the contributions made by a district pursuant to section 59300 are used to fund "a new program or higher level of service" and if so, whether the statute "mandates" that a district make the contribution set forth therein. We conclude that the contribution required by section 59300 is utilized to fund a "new program" as defined in the constitutional provision, but that it is not clear from the record whether districts are "mandated" to pay these costs. The matter will therefore be remanded to the Commission on State Mandates to make that determination.

The State Department of Education (department) operates schools for severely handicapped students, including schools for the deaf (§ 59000 et seq.), the blind (§ 59100 et seq.), and the neurologically handicapped (§ 59200 et seq.). Although prior to 1979, school districts were required by statute to contribute to the education of pupils from the districts at the state [883] schools (former §§ 59021, 59121, 59221),

1. Hereafter all statutory references are to the Education Code unless otherwise noted, and all references to articles are to the California Constitution.

these provisions were repealed in that year and on July 12, 1979, the state assumed the responsibility for full funding. (Stats. 1979, ch. 237, § 3, p. 493.) This responsibility existed when article XIIIB became effective on July 1, 1980 (art. XIIIB, § 10), and continued until section 59300 became effective on June 28, 1981. (Stats. 1981, ch. 102, § 17, p. 703.)

Section 59300 represents an attempt by the state to compel school districts to share in these costs. The section provides, "Notwithstanding any provision of this part to the contrary, the district of residence of the parent or guardian of any pupil attending a state-operated school pursuant to this part, excluding day pupils, shall pay the school of attendance for each pupil an amount equal to 10 percent of the excess annual cost of education of pupils attending a state-operated school pursuant to this part." [2]

Starting in 1981, the department attempted to collect the contributions called for in the section by sending invoices to the school district superintendents. When the invoices were not paid, their amount was deducted from the appropriations made by the state to the districts for the support of the schools.

The Government Code sets forth a procedure to determine whether a statute imposes state-mandated costs on a school district or other local agency under article XIIIB. (Gov. Code, § 17500 et seq.). The district must file a test claim with the Commission on State Mandates (commission) which, after a hearing, decides whether the statute mandates a "new program or increased level of service." (Id., §§ 17521, 17551, 17556.) If a claim is found to be reimbursable, the commission must determine the amount to be reimbursed. (Id., § 17557.) The code specifies the procedure to be followed by a local agency to obtain reimbursement if the commission has determined that reimbursement is due. (Id., § 17558 et seq.) If the Legislature refuses to appropriate money to satisfy a mandate found to be reimbursable by the commission, a claimant may bring an action for declaratory relief to enjoin enforcement of the mandate. (Id., § 17612, subd. (b).) [3] In the event the commission finds against the local agency, it may bring a proceeding in administrative mandate under section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure to challenge the commission's determination. (Gov. § 1834 17559.) The procedure provided in the code is the exclusive means by which a local agency may claim reimbursement for mandated costs. (Id., § 17552.)

In 1984 plaintiff Lucia Mar Unified School District and other school districts (plaintiffs) filed a test claim before the commission,[4] asserting that section 59300 requires them to make payments for a "new program or increased level of service," and that they are entitled to reimbursement pursuant to section 6 of article XIIIB. The commission denied the claim, finding no reimbursable mandate because, although section 59300 increased plaintiffs' costs for educating students at state-operated schools, it did not impose on the districts a new program or higher level of service.

Plaintiffs then filed a petition for writ of mandate, declaratory relief, and restitution against the commission, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction (superintendent), and the department. They sought a declaration that section 59300 violates section 6 of article XIIIB, and prayed for orders to compel the commission to reverse its determination, and the superintendent and the department to reimburse them for the amounts withheld under the authority

2. "Excess annual cost" means the total cost of educating a pupil in a state operated school less a school district's annual base revenue limit, multiplied by the estimated average daily attendance of the state operated school.

3. In Carmel Valley Fire Protection District v. State of California (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 521, 549, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795, the court observed that this remedy would afford relief only prospectively, and not as to funds previously paid out by a local agency to satisfy a state mandate.

4. The claim was originally filed with the State Board of Control, which preceded the commission; when the commission was created in 1984, the claim was transferred to it for determination.

of section 59300. The trial court affirmed the commission's decision. It, too, held that section 59300 does not mandate a new program or higher level of service, finding that the section only calls for an "adjustment of costs." [5]

The court held, further, that it had no jurisdiction to issue orders to the superintendent to refund the sums withheld from plaintiffs because the commission's decisions may only be challenged by a proceeding in administrative mandate under section 1094.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. (Gov. Code, §§ 17552, 17559.) Plaintiffs appealed. The Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment, 198 Cal.App.3d 299, 233 Cal. Rptr. 531, reasoning that a shift in the funding of an existing program is not a new program or a higher level of service. It declined to rule whether restitution from the superintendent was an appropriate remedy.

[1] The commission argues before this court, as it did below, that section 59300 does not mandate a new program or a higher level of service. The superintendent and the department express no opinion as to the merits of plaintiffs' assertions, but argue that if we should find a reimbursable mandate, plaintiffs' remedy is to seek an appropriation from the Legislature rather than reimbursement from the department.

[1835] We recognize that, as is made indisputably clear from the language of the constitutional provision, local entities are not entitled to reimbursement for all increased costs mandated by state law, but only those costs resulting from a new program or an increased level of service imposed upon them by the state. In keeping with this principle, we recently held in County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 46, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202, that legislation requiring local governments and other employers to increase certain workers' compensation benefits did not invoke the subvention requirement because the state mandate did not provide for a "program." We reasoned that the additional expense to the local agency mandated by the legislation arose as an incidental impact of a law which applied generally to all state residents and entities, and this type of expense was not what the voters had in mind when they adopted section 6 of article XIIIB. (See also City of Anaheim v. State of California (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1478, 1484, 235 Cal.Rptr. 101.)

We defined a "program" as used in article XIIIB as one that carries out the "governmental function of providing services to the public, or laws which, to implement a state policy, impose unique requirements on local governments and do not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state." (County of Los Angeles, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) Unquestionably the contributions called for in section 59300 are used to fund a "program" within this definition, for the education of handicapped children is clearly a governmental function providing a service to the public, and the section imposes requirements on school districts not imposed on all the state's residents. Nor can there be any doubt that although the schools for the handicapped have been operated by the state for many years, the program was new insofar as plaintiffs are concerned, since at the time section 59300 became effective they were not required to contribute to the education of students from their districts at such schools.

The fact that the impact of the section is to require plaintiffs to contribute funds to operate the state schools for the handicapped rather than to themselves administer the program does not detract from our conclusion that it calls for the establishment of a new program within the meaning of the constitutional provision. To hold, under the circumstances of this case, that a shift in funding of an existing program from the state to a local entity is not a new program as to the local agency would, we think, violate the intent underlying section

5. The court found that this "adjustment" was "precipitated" by the Special Education Program, enacted in 1980 (Stats.1980, ch. 797, § 9, p. 2411 et seq.), discussed in a later part of this opinion, which afforded local governments certain options to educate the handicapped.

6 of article XIIIB. That article imposed spending limits on state and local governments, and it followed by one year the adoption by initiative of article XIIIA, which severely limited the taxing power of local governments. Section 6 was intended to preclude the state from shifting to local agencies the financial responsibility for providing public services |836 in view of these restrictions on the taxing and spending power of the local entities. (See County of Los Angeles, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 61, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) [6]

The intent of the section would plainly be violated if the state could, while retaining administrative control of programs it has supported with state tax money, simply shift the cost of the programs to local government on the theory that the shift does not violate section 6 of article XIIIB because the programs are not "new." Whether the shifting of costs is accomplished by compelling local governments to pay the cost of entirely new programs created by the state, or to accept financial responsibility in whole or in part for a program which was funded entirely by the state before the advent of article XIIIB, seems equally violative of the fundamental purpose underlying section 6 of that article.[7] We conclude, therefore, that because section 59300 shifts partial financial responsibility for the support of students in the state operated schools from the state to school districts—an obligation the school districts did not have at the time article XIIIB was adopted—it calls for plaintiffs to support a "new program" within the meaning of section 6.[8]

[2] The question remains whether school districts are "mandated" by section 59300 to make the contributions called for therein. The commission claims that plaintiffs are not compelled to contribute to the education of handicapped children at the state schools because they possess other options to educate such students. In 1980, the Legislature passed a law codified in the Education Code, which requires local education agencies to assess the needs |837 of handicapped pupils residing in their districts, and to formulate an appropriate plan to educate them. (§ 56000 et seq.)

The commission asserts that a local agency has the option under section 56361 to provide a local program for handicapped children, to send them to private schools, or to refer them to the state operated schools. At the hearing before the commission, the Department of Finance recommended that the commission find that section 59300 does not impose a state mandate because plaintiffs were not required to send students from their districts to the state schools but had the additional options described in sec-

6. The Revenue and Taxation Code also contains provisions requiring reimbursement of local agencies for state-mandated costs. (Rev. & Tax Code, § 2201 et seq.) These provisions were enacted before the adoption of article XIIIB (Stats. 1973, ch. 358, § 3, p. 780), but the principle of reimbursement was enshrined in the Constitution in 1979 with the adoption of section 6 of article XIIIB to provide local entities with the assurance that state mandates would not place additional burdens on their increasingly limited revenue resources.

7. There is a statement in County of Los Angeles, supra, that a concern prompting the adoption of section 6 in article XIIIB "was the perceived attempt by the state to enact legislation or adopt administrative orders creating programs to be administered by local agencies, thereby transferring to those agencies the fiscal responsibility for providing services which the state believed should be extended to the public." (43 Cal.3d at p. 56, 233 Cal.Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202.) We do not read the phrase "administered by local agencies" to mean that the electorate intended that only locally administered programs require state reimbursement. The underlying premise of the sentence is that reimbursement is required if the state transfers fiscal responsibility to a local agency for a program the state deems desirable.

8. An opinion of the Attorney General, relied on by the commission, is inapposite. It suggests that a law increasing the number of judges in a municipal court district does not constitute a higher level of service under section 6 of article XIIIB because the district has a constitutional obligation to provide for an adequate number of judges. ((1980) 63 Ops.Cal.Atty.Gen. 700, 702.) In the present case, the issue is whether section 59300 involves a new program rather than a higher level of service, and it is clear that at the time the section was enacted, plaintiffs did not have an obligation to contribute to the support of the students from their districts at the state schools for the severely handicapped.

tion 56361. The commission staff recommended against adoption of this position on the ground that the plaintiffs "had no other reasonable alternative than to utilize the services of the state operated schools, as they are the least expensive alternative in educating handicapped children." [9]

The commission did not and was not required to decide whether section 59300 constitutes a state mandate since it concluded that plaintiffs were not entitled to reimbursement in any event because the section does not provide for a new program or increased level of service. The issue is for the commission to determine, as it is charged by section 17551 of the Government Code with the duty to decide in the first instance whether a local agency is entitled to reimbursement under section 6 of article XIIIB.

In view of our conclusion that the question whether section 59300 amounts to a state mandate must be remanded to the commission, we do not decide whether, as the superintendent and the department argue, plaintiffs' sole remedy, in the event a reimbursible mandate is ultimately found, is to seek relief under the procedure set forth in section 17500 et seq. of the Government Code.

[3] The final question is whether the superintendent and the department acted in excess of their authority in deducting the amount of the contributions required of plaintiffs by section 59300 from the funds appropriated by the state to them for the support of the districts' schools. Plaintiffs cite no authority for the proposition that such conduct was improper. Section 59300 does not specify the method by which the contributions of the school districts to the state schools shall be paid. We agree with the Court of Appeal that in these circumstances the method of collection is left to the reasonable discretion of the department, and in view of the fact no test claim had been filed when the school districts failed to pay the invoices, the [838] method of collection the Department chose was not unreasonable. (See, e.g., Carmel Valley Fire Protection District v. State of California, supra, 190 Cal.App.3d 521, 550, 234 Cal.Rptr. 795.)

The judgment of the Court of Appeal is reversed, and the court is directed to remand the matter to the commission for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

LUCAS, C.J., and BROUSSARD, PANELLI, ARGUELLES, EAGLESON and KAUFMAN, JJ., concur.

9. According to the Department of Finance, in 1979–1980, the average cost to educate a student in a local program was $5,527, for private school the cost was $9,527, and for the least expensive state school $15,556. The local agency is required to pay 30 percent of the cost for students placed in private schools.

Arthur S. LUJAN, Labor Commissioner of California, et al., Petitioners,
v.
G & G FIRE SPRINKLERS, INC.

No. 00-152.

Argued Feb. 26, 2001.
Decided April 17, 2001.
Rehearing Denied June 11, 2001.
See 533 U.S. 912, 121 S.Ct. 2264.

Public works subcontractor brought action against State of California's Labor Commissioner and others challenging constitutionality under Due Process Clause of California statutes authorizing state, without notice or hearing, to withhold money and impose penalties for subcontractor's failure to comply with prevailing wage requirements of Labor Code. The United States District Court for the Central District of California, Manuel L. Real, Chief District Judge, entered summary judgment for subcontractor. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, 156 F.3d 893, affirmed in part and reversed and remanded in part, on basis that statutory scheme did not provide a hearing before or after payments were withheld. The Supreme Court granted certiorari, vacated judgment, and remanded for further consideration. On remand, the Court of Appeals, 204 F.3d 941, reinstated its prior opinion. Labor Commissioner again petitioned for certiorari. The Supreme Court, Chief Justice Rehnquist, held that: (1) Labor Code provisions did not deprive subcontractor of property without due process if California makes ordinary judicial process available to subcontractor to resolve its contractual dispute, and (2) California law, by allowing contractor to assign to subcontractor statutory right of suit to recover withheld payments, and by appearing to permit common-law breach of contract suit, provided adequate means by which subcontractor might pursue claim.

Reversed.

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 50 L.Ed. 499.

The California Labor Code (Code) authorizes the State to order withholding of payments due a contractor on a public works project if a subcontractor on the project fails to comply with certain Code requirements; permits the contractor, in turn, to withhold similar sums from the subcontractor; and permits the contractor, or his assignee, to sue the awarding body for alleged breach of the contract in not making payment to recover the wages or penalties withheld. After petitioner State Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) determined that respondent G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. (G & G), as a subcontractor on three public works projects, had violated the Code, it issued notices directing the awarding bodies on those projects to withhold from the contractors an amount equal to the wages and penalties forfeited due to G & G's violations. The awarding bodies withheld payment from the contractors, who in turn withheld G & G's payment. G & G filed a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against DLSE and other state petitioners in the District Court, claiming that the issuance of the notices without a hearing deprived it of property without due process in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The court granted G & G summary judgment, declared the relevant Code sections unconstitutional, and enjoined the State from enforcing the provisions against G & G. The Ninth Circuit affirmed. This Court granted certiorari, vacated that judgment, and remanded for reconsideration in light of its decision in American Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sullivan, 526 U.S. 40, 119 S.Ct. 977, 143 L.Ed.2d 130, that the respondents there had no property interest in payment for disputed medical treatment pending review of the treatment's reasonableness and necessity, as authorized by state law. On remand, the Ninth Circuit reinstated its prior judgment and opinion, explaining that G & G's rights were violated not because it was deprived of immediate payment, but because the state statutory scheme afforded no hearing at all.

1448 Held: Because state law affords G & G sufficient opportunity to pursue its claim for payment under its contracts in state court, the statutory scheme does not deprive it of due process. In each of this Court's 190 cases relied upon by the Ninth Circuit, the claimant was denied a right by virtue of which he was presently entitled either to exercise ownership dominion over real or personal property, or to pursue a gainful occupation. See, e.g., United States v. James Daniel Good Real Property, 510 U.S. 43, 62, 114 S.Ct. 492, 126 L.Ed.2d 490. Unlike those claimants, G & G has not been deprived of any present entitlement. It has been deprived of payment that it contends it is owed under a contract, based on the State's determination that it failed to comply with the contract's terms. That property interest can be fully protected by an ordinary breach-of-contract suit. If California makes ordinary judicial process available to G & G for resolving its contractual dispute, that process is due process. Here, the Code, by allowing a contractor to assign the right of suit, provides a means by which a subcontractor may bring a breach-of-contract suit to recover withheld payments. That damages may not be awarded until the suit's conclusion does not deprive G & G of its claim. Even if G & G could not obtain assignment, it appears that a breach-of- contract suit against the contractor remains available under state common law, although final determination of the question rests in the hands of the California courts. 191 Chief Justice REHNQUIST delivered the opinion of the Court.

The California Labor Code (Code or Labor Code) authorizes the State to order withholding of payments due a contractor on a public works project if a subcontractor on the project fails to comply with certain Code requirements. The Code permits the contractor, in turn, to withhold similar sums from the subcontractor. The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that the relevant Code provisions violate the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment because the statutory scheme does not afford the subcontractor a hearing before or after such action is taken. We granted certiorari, 531 U.S. 924, 121 S.Ct. 297, 148 L.Ed.2d 239 (2000), and we reverse.

Petitioners are the California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE), the California Department of Industrial Relations, and several state officials in their official capacities. Respondent G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. (G & G), is a fire-protection company that installs fire sprinkler systems. G & G served as a subcontractor on several California public works projects. "Public works" include construction work done under contract and paid for in whole or part by public funds. Cal. Lab.Code Ann. § 1720 (West Supp.2001). The department, board, authority, officer, or agent awarding a contract for public work is called the "awarding body." § 1722 (West 1989). The California Labor Code requires that contractors and subcontractors on such projects pay their workers a prevailing wage that is determined by the State. §§ 1771, 1772, 1773 (West 1989 and Supp.2001). At the time relevant here, if workers were not paid the prevailing wage, the contractor was required *1449 to pay each worker the difference between the prevailing wage and the wages paid, in addition to forfeiting a penalty to the State. § 1775 192 (West Supp.2001). [FN1] The awarding body was required to include a clause in the contract so stipulating. Ibid.

FN1. The Code also imposes restrictions on recordkeeping and working hours, and at the time relevant here, the contractor was similarly penalized if the contractor or subcontractor failed to comply with them. Cal. Lab.Code Ann. §§ 1776(a), (b), (g) (West Supp.2001), 1813 (West 1989). The awarding body was required to include a clause in the contract so stipulating. §§ 1776(h), 1813.
Sections 1775, 1776, and 1813 were subsequently amended to provide that both contractors and subcontractors may be penalized for failure to comply with the Labor Code. §§ 1775(a), 1776(g), 1813 (West Supp.2001). Amendments to § 1775 also state that either the contractor or the subcontractor may pay workers the difference between the prevailing wage and wages paid. § 1775(a).

The Labor Code provides that "[b]efore making payments to the contractor of money due under a contract for public work, the awarding body shall withhold and retain therefrom all wages and penalties which have been forfeited pursuant to any stipulation in a contract for public work, and the terms of this chapter." § 1727. If money is withheld from a contractor because of a subcontractor's failure to comply with the Code's provisions, "[i]t shall be lawful for [the] contractor to withhold from [the] subcontractor under him sufficient sums to cover any penalties withheld." § 1729 (West 1989). [FN2]

FN2. Amendments to the Labor Code effective July 1, 2001, impose additional requirements on contractors. See § 1727(b) (West Supp.2001) (contractor shall withhold money from subcontractor at request of Labor Commissioner in certain circumstances); § 1775(b)(3) (contractor shall take corrective action to halt subcontractor's failure to pay prevailing wages if aware of the failure or be subject to penalties).

The Labor Code permits the contractor, or his assignee, to bring suit against the awarding body "on the contract for alleged breach thereof in not making ... payment" to recover the wages or penalties withheld. §§ 1731, 1732 (West Supp.2001) . The suit must be brought within 90 days of completion of the contract and acceptance of the job. § 1730. Such a suit "is the exclusive remedy of the contractor 193 or his or her assignees." § 1732. The awarding body retains the wages and penalties "pending the outcome of the suit." § 1731. [FN3]

FN3. Sections 1730-1733 of the Code have been repealed, effective July 1, 2001. Section 1742 has replaced them. It provides that "[a]n affected contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of a civil wage and penalty assessment [under the Code] by transmitting a written request to the office of the Labor Commissioner." § 1742(a). The contractor or subcontractor is then entitled to a hearing before the Director of Industrial Relations, who shall appoint an impartial hearing officer. Within 45 days of the hearing, the director shall issue a written decision affirming, modifying, or dismissing the assessment. A contractor or subcontractor may obtain review of the director's decision by filing a petition for a writ of the mandate in state superior court. §§ 1742(b), (c). These provisions are not yet in effect and these procedures were not available to respondent at the time of the withholding of payments at issue here.

In 1995, DLSE determined that G & G, as a subcontractor on three public works projects, had violated the Labor Code by failing to pay the prevailing wage and failing to keep and/or furnish payroll records upon request. DLSE issued notices to the awarding bodies on those projects, directing them to withhold from the contractors an amount equal to the wages and penalties forfeited due to G & G's violations. The awarding bodies withheld payment from the contractors, who in turn withheld payment from G & G. The total withheld, according to respondent, exceeded $135,000. App. 68.

G & G sued petitioners in the District Court for the Central District of California. G & G sought declaratory and injunctive relief pursuant to Rev. Stat. § 1979, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, claiming that the issuance of withholding notices without a hearing *1450 constituted a deprivation of property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The District Court granted respondent's motion for summary judgment, declared §§ 1727, 1730-1733, 1775, 1776(g), and 1813 of the Labor Code unconstitutional, and enjoined the State from enforcing these provisions 194 against respondent. App. to Pet. for Cert. A85-A87. Petitioners appealed.

A divided panel of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit affirmed. G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. v. Bradshaw, 156 F.3d 893, 898 (1998) (Bradshaw I). The court concluded that G & G "has a property interest in being paid in full for the construction work it has completed," id., at 901, and found that G & G was deprived of that interest "as a result of the state's action," id., at 903. It decided that because subcontractors were "afforded neither a pre- nor post-deprivation hearing when payments [were] withheld," the statutory scheme violated the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Id., at 904.

Following Bradshaw I, we decided American Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sullivan, 526 U.S. 40, 119 S.Ct. 977, 143 L.Ed.2d 130 (1999), where respondents also alleged a deprivation of property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. Sullivan involved a challenge to a private insurer's decision to withhold payment for disputed medical treatment pending review of its reasonableness and necessity, as authorized by state law. We held that the insurer's action was not "fairly attributable to the State," and that respondents therefore failed to satisfy a critical element of their § 1983 claim. Id., at 58, 119 S.Ct. 977. We also decided that because state law entitled respondents to reasonable and necessary medical treatment, respondents had no property interest in payment for medical treatment not yet deemed to meet those criteria. Id., at 61, 119 S.Ct. 977. We granted certiorari in Bradshaw I, vacated the judgment of the Court of Appeals, and remanded for reconsideration in light of Sullivan. Bradshaw v. G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc., 526 U.S. 1061, 119 S.Ct. 1450, 143 L.Ed.2d 538 (1999).

On remand, the Court of Appeals reinstated its prior judgment and opinion, again by a divided vote. The court held that the withholding of payments was state action because it was "specifically directed by State officials ... [and] the withholding party has no discretion." 195G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. v. Bradshaw,* 204 F.3d 941, 944 (C.A.9 2000). In its view, its prior opinion was consistent with Sullivan because it "specifically held that G & G did not have a right to payment of the disputed funds pending the outcome of whatever kind of hearing would be afforded," and "explicitly authorized the withholding of payments pending the hearing." 204 F.3d, at 943. The court explained that G & G's rights were violated not because it was deprived of immediate payment, but "because the California statutory scheme afforded no hearing at all when state officials directed that payments be withheld." Id., at 943-944.

[1] Where a state law such as this is challenged on due process grounds, we inquire whether the State has deprived the claimant of a protected property interest, and whether the State's procedures comport with due process. Sullivan, supra, at 59, 119 S.Ct. 977. We assume, without deciding, that the withholding of money due respondent under its contracts occurred under color of state law, and that, as the Court of Appeals concluded, respondent has a property interest of the kind we considered in Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co., 455 U.S. 422, 102 S.Ct. 1148, 71 L.Ed.2d 265 (1982), in its claim for payment under its contracts. 204 F.3d, at 943-944. Because we believe that California law affords respondent sufficient opportunity to pursue that claim in state court, we conclude that the California statutory scheme does not deprive G & G of its claim for payment without due process of law. See Logan, supra, at 433, 102 S.Ct. 1148 ("[T]he Due Process Clause grants the aggrieved party the opportunity to present his case and have its merits fairly judged").

1451 The Court of Appeals relied upon several of our cases dealing with claims of deprivation of a property interest without due process to hold that G & G was entitled to a reasonably prompt hearing when payments were withheld. Bradshaw I, supra, at 903-904 (citing United States v. James Daniel Good Real Property, 510 U.S. 43, 114 S.Ct. 492, 126 L.Ed.2d 490 (1993); FDIC v. Mallen, 486 U.S. 230, 108 S.Ct. 1780, 100 L.Ed.2d 265 (1988); 196 Barry v. Barchi, 443 U.S. 55, 99 S.Ct. 2642, 61 L.Ed.2d 365 1979)). In Good, we held that the Government must afford the owner of a house subject to forfeiture as property used to commit or to facilitate commission of a federal drug offense notice and a hearing before seizing the property. 510 U.S., at 62, 114 S.Ct. 492. In Barchi, we held that a racetrack trainer suspended for 15 days on suspicion of horse drugging was entitled to a prompt postdeprivation administrative or judicial hearing. 443 U.S., at 63-64, 99 S.Ct. 2642. And in Mallen, we held thatthe president of a Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) insured bank suspended from office by the FDIC was accorded due process by a notice and hearing procedure which would render a decision within 90 days of the suspension. 486 U.S., at 241-243, 108 S.Ct. 1780. See also Sniadach v. Family Finance Corp. of Bay View, 395 U.S. 337, 89 S.Ct. 1820, 23 L.Ed.2d 349 (1969) (holding that due process requires notice and a hearing before wages may be garnished).

[2] In each of these cases, the claimant was denied a right by virtue of which he was presently entitled either to exercise ownership dominion over real or personal property, or to pursue a gainful occupation. Unlike those claimants, respondent has not been denied any present entitlement. G & G has been deprived of payment that it contends it is owed under a contract, based on the State's determination that G & G failed to comply with the contract's terms. G & G has only a claim that it did comply with those terms and therefore that it is entitled to be paid in full. Though we assume for purposes of decision here that G & G has a property interest in its claim for payment, see supra, at 1450, it is an interest, unlike the interests discussed above, that can be fully protected by an ordinary breach-of-contract suit.

In Cafeteria & Restaurant Workers v. McElroy, 367 U.S. 886, 895, 81 S.Ct. 1743, 6 L.Ed.2d 1230 (1961) (citations omitted), we said:

> "The very nature of due process negates any concept of inflexible procedures universally applicable to every imaginable situation. " '[D]ue process," unlike some legal rules, is not a technical conception with a fixed 197 content unrelated to time, place and circumstances.' It is 'compounded of history, reason, the past course of decisions ....' "

We hold that if California makes ordinary judicial process available to respondent for resolving its contractual dispute, that process is due process.

[3] The California Labor Code provides that "the contractor or his or her assignee" may sue the awarding body "on the contract for alleged breach thereof" for "the recovery of wages or penalties." §§ 1731, 1732 (West Supp.2001). There is no basis here to conclude that the contractor would refuse to assign the right of suit to its subcontractor. In fact, respondent stated at oral argument that it has sued awarding bodies in state superior court pursuant to § § 1731-1733 of the Labor Code to recover payments withheld on previous projects where it served as a subcontractor. See Tr. of Oral Arg. 27, 40-41, 49-50. Presumably, respondent brought suit as an assignee of the contractors on those projects, as the Code requires. § 1732 (West Supp.2001). Thus, the Labor Code, by allowing assignment, provides a means by which a subcontractor may bring a claim for breach of contract to recover wages and penalties withheld.

[4] Respondent complains that a suit under the Labor Code is inadequate because the awarding body retains the wages and penalties "pending the outcome of the 1452 suit," § 1731, which may last several years. Tr. of Oral Arg. 51. A lawsuit of that duration, while undoubtedly something of a hardship, cannot be said to deprive respondent of its claim for payment under the contract. Lawsuits are not known for expeditiously resolving claims, and the standard practice in breach-of-contract suits is to award damages, if appropriate, only at the conclusion of the case.

[5] Even if respondent could not obtain assignment of the right to sue the awarding body under the contract, it appears that a suit for breach of contract against the contractor remains available under

California common law. See 1 198 B. Witkin, Summary of California Law §§ 791, 797 (9th ed.1987) (defining breach as the "unjustified or unexcused ... failure to perform a contract" and describing the remedies available under state law). To be sure, § 1732 of the Labor Code provides that suit on the contract against the awarding body is the "exclusive remedy of the contractor or his or her assignees" with respect to recovery of withheld wages and penalties. § 1732 (West Supp.2001). But the remedy is exclusive only with respect to the contractor and his assignees, and thus by its terms not the exclusive remedy for a subcontractor who does not receive assignment. See, e.g., J & K Painting Co., Inc. v. Bradshaw, 45 Cal.App.4th 1394, 1402, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 496, 501 (1996) (allowing subcontractor to challenge Labor Commissioner's action by petition for a writ of the mandate).

[6][7] In J & K Painting, the California Court of Appeal rejected the argument that § 1732 requires a subcontractor to obtain an assignment and that failure to do so is "fatal to any other attempt to secure relief." Id., at 1401, n. 7, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d, at 501, n. 7. The Labor Code does not expressly impose such a requirement, and that court declined to infer an intent to "create remedial exclusivity" in this context. Ibid. It thus appears that subcontractors like respondent may pursue their claims for payment by bringing a standard breach-of-contract suit against the contractor under California law. Our view is necessarily tentative, since the final determination of the question rests in the hands of the California courts, but respondent has not convinced us that this avenue of relief is closed to it. See id., at 1401, and n. 4, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d, at 500, and n. 4 (noting that the contractor might assert a variety of defenses to the subcontractor's suit for breach of contract without evaluating their soundness). As the party challenging the statutory withholding scheme, respondent bears the burden of demonstrating its unconstitutionality. Cf. INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944, 103 S.Ct. 2764, 77 L.Ed.2d 317 (1983) (statutes presumed constitutional). We 199 therefore conclude that the relevant provisions of the California Labor Code do not deprive respondent of property without due process of law. Accordingly, the judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed.

It is so ordered.

[976] LUSARDI CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, Plaintiff and Respondent,

v.

Lloyd W. AUBRY, Jr., as Labor Commissioner, etc., et al., Defendants and Appellants.

No. S011121.

Supreme Court of California, In Bank.

Feb. 24, 1992.

Contractor filed action for declaratory and injunctive relief against the enforcement of prevailing wage laws on a hospital construction project. The Superior Court, San Diego County, No. 579903, Vincent P. DiFiglia, J., entered summary judgment for contractor and enjoined Division of Labor Standards Enforcement from attempting to enforce prevailing wage law provisions as to hospital project. The Court of Appeal, 259 Cal.Rptr. 250, affirmed. The Supreme Court granted review, 265 Cal.Rptr. 111, superseding the opinion of the Court of Appeal, and, in an opinion by Kennard, J., held that: (1) statutory obligation to pay prevailing wage law on public works project had an independent statutory basis; (2) Director of Department of Industrial Relations was statutorily authorized to make administrative determination that contract for the construction of a public improvement was one for public works within meaning of prevailing wage law; (3) doctrine of equitable estoppel did not prevent Director from proceeding against contractor absent privity or identity of interest between Director and local hospital district involved in project; but (4) equitable considerations precluded imposition of statutory penalties against public work contractor for failing to pay prevailing wage where contractor acted in good faith.

Judgment of Court of Appeal reversed.

West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1775; U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 5, 14.

10. Constitutional Law ⇐275(3)

Labor Relations ⇐1268

Contractor failed to show that any application of prevailing wage laws against it requiring payment of higher wages to its employees on hospital construction project or subjecting it to penalties for failing to comply with prevailing wage laws amounted to "retroactive enforcement" in violation of state and federal due process guarantees, as contractor's obligation to pay prevailing wages on public work was statutory in nature. West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code § 1775; U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 5, 14.

11. Estoppel ⇐62.2(2)

Equitable estoppel could not be used to bar the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations from determining that a hospital construction project was a public work, as there was no privity or identity of interest between the local public hospital district, which had represented project not to be a public work, and the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

2. Estoppel ⇐52.15

In order for equitable estoppel to apply, the party to be estopped must have been aware of the facts, that party must either intend that its act or omission be acted upon or must so act that the party asserting estoppel has a right to believe it was intended, the party asserting estoppel must be unaware of the true facts, and the party asserting estoppel must rely on the other party's conduct to its detriment.

13. Estoppel ⇐62.1

Even when all elements of equitable estoppel are present, estoppel will not be applied against the government if to do so would nullify a strong rule of policy adopted for the benefit of public.

4. Administrative Law and Procedure ⇐496

The acts of one public agency will bind another public agency only when there is privity or an identity of interests between the agencies.

15. Labor Relations ⇐1541

Equitable considerations precluded imposition of statutory penalties against a public works contractor for failing to pay prevailing wage where the contractor acted in good faith in entering into contract on the basis of public hospital district's representations, assertedly on the advice of its attorneys, that the project was not subject to the prevailing wage law; thus contractor's exposure to liability was limited to the amount of underpayments. [981]H. Thomas Cadell Jr., Dept. of Indus. Relations, Chief Counsel, D.I.R., San Francisco, for defendants and appellants.

John W. Prager Jr., Santa Ana, for plaintiff and respondent.

KENNARD, Justice.

The prevailing wage law governs wages and other conditions of employment on public works, which include "[c]onstruction, alteration, demolition or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds...." (Lab.Code, § 1720, subd. (a); all further unlabeled statutory references are to the Labor Code.) "Public works" contracts awarded to private contractors must include stipulations requiring the contractors and subcontractors to pay their employees no less than the applicable prevailing wage rates, as determined by the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations (the Director). (§§ 1773.2, 1775.)

This case involves an $18 million expansion of a public hospital. To keep the construction costs as low as possible, the public entity entered into a written agreement with a third party corporation, which appointed the public [982]entity as its agent for all purposes on the construction project. The public entity, purportedly acting as agent for the third party corporation, then hired a private contractor to construct the project, without entering into the statutorily required stipulations that the contractor pay its employees the prevailing wage rates.

The Director sought to require the contractor to pay its employees prevailing wages; the contractor then brought this action challenging enforcement of the law against it. The trial court granted injunctive and declaratory relief, and the Court of Appeal affirmed, concluding on constitutional and equitable grounds that the Director could not enforce the prevailing wage law against the contractor.

This case involves the following issues:

First, does the prevailing wage law apply only when the contractor agrees to comply with it as part of the contract, or does the obligation to pay prevailing wages have an independent statutory basis?

Second, is the Director statutorily authorized to make the administrative determination that a contract for the construction of a public improvement is one for a public work? If so, does the making of such a determination constitute an adjudication, so that procedural due process protections are required?

Third, does the doctrine of equitable estoppel preclude any determination that in this case the contractor is bound by the prevailing wage law?

Fourth, is a civil penalty sought to be imposed on the contractor by the state invalid?

We hold that the statutory obligation to pay the prevailing wage does not depend on the contractor's assent, that the Director may validly and constitutionally determine that a given project is for a public work, and that the doctrine of equitable estoppel does not prevent the Director from proceeding against the contractor. We emphasize, however, that the contractor may be entitled to indemnity from the public entity if it reasonably relied on the public entity's representations that the project was not subject to the prevailing wage law, and that when, as here, a contractor does rely in good faith on such representations, equity prohibits the imposition of statutory penalties against the contractor for failing to pay the prevailing wage.

We conclude that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be reversed.

1983 FACTS

The parties stipulated to these facts: Tri–City Hospital District (the District) is a public hospital district and an independent political subdivision of the State of California. In 1983, the District wanted to expand its hospital facilities. On June 28, 1983, the District entered into a written agreement with Imperial Municipal Services Group, Inc. (Imperial), a private corporation, for the construction of new facilities at Tri–City Hospital (the Expansion Project). The contract with Imperial specified that the sole role of Imperial was that of the seller of the property, and that the District was appointed as Imperial's "agent and attorney-in-fact for all purposes respecting construction of the Expansion Project, including, without limitation, the engagement of contractors ... and the management and supervision of the construction of the Expansion Project." The contract further provided that "Purchaser [the District], as agent, shall cause contractors under such contracts to ... pay prevailing wages in accordance with the California Labor Code...."

Although Lusardi Construction Company (Lusardi) had served as a contractor on many public works, it made a business decision not to perform any public works contracts after 1980. During its negotiations with the District, Lusardi told the District that it did not enter into contracts for the construction of public works. The District represented to Lusardi that: (1) the Expansion Project was a private work and not a public work under the prevailing wage law, and therefore the payment of prevailing wages and keeping of payroll records was not required; (2) the District had received legal opinions determining that the Expansion Project was not a public work; and (3) Lusardi should compute its construction costs on the basis that the project was not a public work. Lusardi relied on the District's representations in calculating its construction costs.

With the District purportedly acting as Imperial's "agent," Imperial and Lusardi then entered into a contract for the construction of the Expansion Project. Lusardi agreed to construct a "four-phase," 108,000–square-foot addition to Tri–City Hospital at a maximum cost of $18,350,000. The contract between Imperial and Lusardi did not refer to prevailing wages.

In July 1983, Lusardi began work on the project. Lusardi and its subcontractors did not pay the prevailing wage, and did not comply with prevailing wage law requirements governing the hiring of apprentices and the maintenance of certified payroll records. After two and one-half years, Lusardi had completed significant portions of the project.

In January 1986, the Director informed the District in writing of his tentative determination that the Expansion Project was a public work. In 1984 May, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (the DLSE), a part of the Department of Industrial Relations (the Department), requested Lusardi to submit payroll records, and warned that failure to comply would subject Lusardi to statutory penalties. In August, the Department's Director notified Lusardi and the District that he had made a final determination that the Expansion Project was a public work. In September, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards (the DAS), another arm of the Department, requested evidence of compliance with the statutory apprenticeship requirements from Lusardi.

When Lusardi did not submit the certified payroll records, the DLSE sent a "penalty assessment letter" to the District in November 1986, with a copy to Lusardi. The DLSE purported to assess a statutory penalty of $25 per day per employee, calculated on the basis of a minimum of 200 employees, retroactive to August 1986. Although the construction contract provided that Lusardi was paid by Imperial and not by the District, the DLSE directed the District to withhold future payments due Lusardi, and to increase the amount withheld by $5,000 a day for each day of noncompliance beyond November 13, 1986.

The DAS wrote to Lusardi on November 13, 1986, that if it did not receive satisfactory proof of compliance with the statutory apprenticeship requirements within five days of the letter's receipt, it would initiate "proceedings for determination of willful noncompliance ... pursuant to Labor Code section 1777.7...." The DLSE and the DAS warned Lusardi that it could be subject to back-wage payments, civil penalties, public work debarment, and civil and administrative litigation.

In November 1986, Lusardi filed this lawsuit and ceased all work on the Expansion Project. Lusardi's complaint sought declaratory and injunctive relief, alleging that the prevailing wage provisions of the Labor Code could not lawfully be applied to it consistent with due process.[1]

The trial court issued a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction restraining defendants from enforcing or attempting to enforce the prevailing wage law against Lusardi. It subsequently granted Lusardi's motion for summary judgment. Based on the stipulated facts, the trial court ruled that the prevailing wage law could not be applied to Lusardi because of 1985 the absence of the requisite contractual provisions and because Lusardi's due process rights had been violated.

The trial court determined that under the prevailing wage law the responsibility for ensuring that the prevailing wage provisions were in a public work contract was on the agency awarding the contract. Because the contract contained no provisions requiring the prevailing wage to be paid, the trial court ruled that Lusardi had acted reasonably as a matter of law in concluding that the prevailing wage law did not apply to it. The trial court also concluded that the Department's application of the public works standards to Lusardi violated Lusardi's right to reasonable notice and an opportunity to respond.

The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that the Director's determination that the project was a public work without giving Lusardi notice and an opportunity to be heard violated procedural due process, and that the Director was barred under the doctrine of equitable estoppel from proceeding against Lusardi.

1. The DLSE filed a cross-complaint against the District alleging that the District had engaged in an unlawful scheme to circumvent the prevailing wage law in an effort to reduce its construction costs. The trial court sustained the District's demurrer without leave to amend, and dismissed the cross-complaint. The Court of Appeal affirmed, and we granted review. Aubry v. Tri-City Hospital Dist. (1989) 234 Cal.App.3d 510, 265 Cal.Rptr. 451, review granted March 15, 1990 (S011123), is now pending in this court.

DISCUSSION

1. Overview of the Prevailing Wage Law

The Legislature has declared that it is the public policy of California "to vigorously enforce minimum labor standards in order to ensure employees are not required or permitted to work under substandard unlawful conditions, and to protect employers who comply with the law from those who attempt to gain competitive advantage at the expense of their workers by failing to comply with minimum labor standards." (§ 90.5, subd. (a).) The conditions of employment on construction projects financed in whole or in part by public funds are governed by the prevailing wage law. (§§ 1720–1861.)

[1] The overall purpose of the prevailing wage law is to protect and benefit employees on public works projects. (O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 434, 458, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.) Subject to an exception not relevant here, under section 1720, subdivision (a), "public works" include "[c]onstruction, alteration, demolition or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds...." Section 1771 provides that not less than the general prevailing rate of wages must be paid to all workers employed on public works projects costing more than $1,000. Section 1770 requires the Director to make the prevailing wage rate determination, based on a method defined in section 1773.

[986] Section 1773 requires the public entity "awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work," to obtain from the Director the general prevailing rate for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the contract. The public entity must specify those rates in its call for bids, in bid specifications, and in the contract or, alternatively, must specify in those documents that the prevailing wage rates are on file in its principal office. (§ 1773.2.)

A contractor for a public works project that fails to pay the prevailing rate to its workers is liable for the deficiency and is subject to a statutory penalty. (§ 1775.) Deficiencies and penalties are to be withheld by the awarding body from sums due under the contract. (§ 1727.) If the money due a contractor from an awarding body is insufficient to pay all of the imposed penalties and deficiencies, or if the public works contract does not provide for payments by the awarding body to the contractor, the DLSE is authorized to bring an action to recover the deficiencies due and penalties assessed. (§ 1775.) [2]

2. Statutory Obligation by Contractor on Public Work to Pay Prevailing Wages

[2] The threshold issue here is whether the obligation of a contractor on a public works project to pay the prevailing wage is based exclusively on contractual provisions, or whether such an obligation flows from a statutory duty to pay the prevailing wage imposed on the contractor independent of

2. Each contractor and subcontractor must maintain complete and accurate records showing the names, occupations, addresses and Social Security numbers of all workers employed on public works projects, and detailing the actual hours worked and wages paid. (§ 1776, subd. (a).) The awarding body must insert stipulations in the construction contract requiring compliance with the recordkeeping provisions. (§ 1776, subd. (g).) Certified copies of these records must be made available for inspection or furnished upon request to representatives of the awarding body or the Department. (§ 1776, subd. (b).) Failure to do so within 10 days after receipt of the request subjects the contractor or subcontractor to forfeiture of $25 "for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated." (§ 1776, subd. (f).) Additionally, noncompliance may lead to prosecution on a misdemeanor charge. (§ 1777.)

This statutory scheme also governs the employment of apprentices. Section 1777.5 requires the employment of apprentices on public works projects under the terms of a statutory formula, and mandates that the awarding body insert stipulations in the construction contract requiring compliance with the apprenticeship provisions of the prevailing wage law. Section 1777.7 specifies sanctions for failure to comply with the apprenticeship requirements, including debarment from public works contracting and monetary penalties.

Any public agent who wilfully fails to comply with any provision of the prevailing wage law is guilty of a misdemeanor. (§ 1777.)

any contractual requirement. The Court of Appeal implicitly assumed, without deciding, that the contractor's duty to pay prevailing wages arose from statute.

[987]As noted above, sections 1773.2, 1775, 1776, subdivision (g), and 1777.5 generally require the contracting public entity, either through specifications in the notice for bids or by stipulations in any resulting contract, to notify the contractor of the applicability of the prevailing wage law and the possibility of penalties and forfeitures in the event of noncompliance. Lusardi contends that these statutes reflect a legislative intent that the prevailing wage laws are enforceable only when a provision requiring their observance is contained in the contract between the public agency and the contractor. We disagree.

Lusardi's proposed interpretation violates section 1771, which provides that "[e]xcept for public works projects of one thousand dollars ($1,000) or less, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages ... shall be paid to all workers employed on public works." (Italics added.) By its express language, this statutory requirement is not limited to those workers whose employers have contractually agreed to pay the prevailing wage; it applies to "all workers employed on public works." (Italics added.)

[3] Moreover, Lusardi's proposed interpretation would defeat the legislative objective. The object that a statute seeks to achieve is of primary importance in statutory interpretation. (People v. Jeffers (1987) 43 Cal.3d 984, 997, 239 Cal.Rptr. 886, 741 P.2d 1127; Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 658, 669, 150 Cal.Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564.) The overall purpose of the prevailing wage law, as noted earlier, is to benefit and protect employees on public works projects. This general objective subsumes within it a number of specific goals: to protect employees from substandard wages that might be paid if contractors could recruit labor from distant cheap-labor areas; to permit union contractors to compete with nonunion contractors; to benefit the public through the superior efficiency of well-paid employees; and to compensate nonpublic employees with higher wages for the absence of job security and employment benefits enjoyed by public employees. (Division of Lab. Stds. Enforcement v. Ericsson Information Systems, Inc. (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 114, 123, 270 Cal.Rptr. 75; O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation, supra, 55 Cal.App.3d at pp. 458–460, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.) These objectives would be defeated if we were to accept Lusardi's interpretation.

[4] As the facts of this case show, both the awarding body and the contractor may have strong financial incentives not to comply with the prevailing wage law. To construe the prevailing wage law as applicable only when the contractor and the public entity have included in the contract language requiring compliance with the prevailing wage law would encourage awarding bodies and contractors to legally circumvent the law, resulting in payment of less than the prevailing wage to workers on construction projects [988]that would otherwise be deemed public works. To allow this would reduce the prevailing wage law to merely an advisory expression of the Legislature's view.

Lusardi argues that the legislative history of the prevailing wage law supports its position that the law applies only when the contractor agrees to it in writing. Yet there is nothing in the legislative history that establishes an intent by the Legislature that contractors on public works projects who failed to execute such agreements are not bound by the prevailing wage laws.[3] The awarding body and con-

3. At least one feature in the legislative history of the statutory scheme strongly favors the conclusion that the Legislature intended the contractor's obligation to pay prevailing wages to be both statutory and contractual. Section 1781, before its repeal in 1957 (Stats.1957, ch. 396, § 1, p. 1240), read: "The penalties and remedies provided for in sections 1775 and 1777 shall be the exclusive penalties and remedies against any contractor or subcontractor for any violation of sections 1770 to 1777 or of the provisions inserted in any call for bids, specifications or contracts pursuant thereto." (Italics added.)

tractor are required to take steps to assure that the prevailing wage law is observed. It does not follow, however, that the law is intended to be optional with the contracting parties.

For these reasons, Lusardi's argument that the prevailing wage law applies only when the contractor assents to it in writing should be rejected.

3. Director's Authority to Determine Coverage

[5] The Court of Appeal assumed for the purpose of analysis that the Director could make the determination that a project was a public work. Lusardi contends that the Director has no statutory authority to determine that a construction project is a "public work" within the meaning of the Labor Code, and thus subject to the statutory requirement that "prevailing wages" be paid. We disagree.

The Director is the chief officer of the Department. (§ 51.) The stated function of the Department is to "foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners of California, to improve their working conditions, and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment." (§ 50.5.) The Director's statutory authority is broad: "The director shall perform all duties, exercise all powers and jurisdiction, assume and discharge all responsibilities, and carry out and effect all purposes vested by law in the department, [989] except as otherwise expressly provided by this code." (§ 54.) The Director possesses explicit authority to make rules. Section 55 provides in pertinent part: "[T]he director may, in accordance with the provisions of [the Administrative Procedure Act], make such rules and regulations as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter and to effectuate its purposes." [4]

[6] These statutes establish a legislative intent to give the Director plenary authority to promulgate rules to enforce the Labor Code. Although no statute expressly gives the Director the authority to make regulations governing coverage, such authority is implied. " '[T]he authority of an administrative board or officer, ... to adopt reasonable rules and regulations which are deemed necessary to the due and efficient exercise of the powers expressly granted cannot be questioned. This authority is implied from the power granted.' " (California Drive-In Restaurant Assn. v. Clark (1943) 22 Cal.2d 287, 303, 140 P.2d 657.) Thus, this court has previously upheld labor regulations under the same general statutory scheme "for which there is no express statutory or constitutional authority." (Kerr's Catering Service v. Department of Industrial Relations (1962) 57 Cal.2d 319, 330, 19 Cal.Rptr. 492, 369 P.2d 20.)

Under these standards, the Director's interpretation of the statutes as authorizing the making of regulations governing coverage of the prevailing wage laws is well within the broad scope of his authority. Exercising that authority, the Director has made regulations governing coverage of the prevailing wage law.[5] Under the regu-

The Legislature's use of the disjunctive "or" in this provision indicates that it viewed contractors and subcontractors as liable either for violation of their statutory obligation to pay prevailing wages, or for violation of their contractual stipulations to do so. The repeal of the statute does not change this, but merely clarifies that the Legislature no longer intends the statutory remedies to be exclusive. (See Comment, Employee Rights: Enforcement of the Public Works Prevailing Wage Obligation (1981) 14 Loyola L.A.L.Rev. 311, 328, fn. 110.)

4. Section 59, part of the same chapter as sections 54 and 55, provides: "The department through its appropriate officers shall administer and enforce all laws imposing any duty, power, or function upon the offices or officers of the department."

5. At the time of the coverage determination in this case, California Administrative Code, title 8, section 16207.5 provided in relevant part: "The Director shall establish and coordinate the administration of the State's prevailing wage law, including the determination of coverage issues." (This regulation has since been recodified at California Code of Regulations, title 8, section 16100.) California Administrative Code, title 8, section 16207.7 specified: "Any issue as to coverage of or amount of the prevailing wage raised by an awarding body or other interested party shall be referred to the Director, except that if it involves an issue raised after a contract is let, DLSE shall exercise discretion in the lations, issues of coverage of the prevailing wage law are determined by the Director or the DLSE as the Director's designee. Lusardi does not contend that the regulations themselves are invalid. For the reasons discussed earlier, we hold that the Director's interpretation of his statutory authority is reasonable, and that the Director has the power to determine that a construction project is a "public work."

[990] 4. Due Process Implications of Director's Coverage Determinations

Lusardi contends that the Director's determination in August 1986 that the Expansion Project was a public work without affording Lusardi notice and an opportunity to be heard violated its right to procedural due process under the state and federal Constitutions. This argument mirrors the reasoning of the Court of Appeal, which held that because the administrative finding that a project was a public work was of great importance to the contractor, procedural due process attached. We disagree.

The Court of Appeal correctly observed that procedural due process "does not require any particular form of notice or type of hearing." Thereafter, the Court of Appeal focused exclusively on the importance of the interests involved. The court stated that whether the project was a public work was "a matter of great importance to the contractor." The court found it significant that the Director had promulgated regulations allowing for hearings to determine prevailing wage rates; this was, in the court's view, another "important determination" to be made in connection with the prevailing wage law, though not directly relevant to this case. The court observed that it could "conceive of no adjudication under the prevailing wage law more important to a contractor than the foundational adjudication of the very nature of the job—whether it is 'public' or 'private' works." The court then concluded that Lusardi's due process rights had been violated by this adjudication.

[7] The Court of Appeal erred in assuming that the Director's determination that the project was a public work is an "adjudication" resulting in a deprivation requiring procedural due process.

Careful review of the statutory scheme, however, makes clear that the Director has no power to adjudicate whether a project is a public work, or to independently deprive a contractor such as Lusardi of any property interest. Instead, when the contract does not provide for a money payment from the awarding body to the contractor, the Director is authorized under the statute only to bring charges in court against a contractor for failing to pay the prevailing wage. The court has the sole power to determine whether the contractor is liable for any underpayment, and to make a binding order that the payments be made. The Director's role in this process is purely prosecutorial.

The statute governing this case is section 1775. It provides, in pertinent part: "[I]n all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall [991] notify the [DLSE] of the violation and the [DLSE], if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided in this section." (Italics added.)

Here, the contract did not provide for a money payment from the District to Lusardi. Accordingly, the Director, through the DLSE, was authorized to bring an action in court for recovery of the underpayment. Contrary to the Court of Appeal's assumption, the Director was not authorized to, and did not, "adjudicate" anything. The Director's role in deciding that the prevailing wage law had been violated was no more "adjudicatory" than a district attor-enforcement of the law.... DLSE shall refer ... any issue as to coverage which is not routine to the Director's office as soon as possible to coordinate with Departmental policy." (This regulation appears now in somewhat different language in California Code of Regulations, title 8, section 16301.)

ney's decision that a criminal statute has been violated.

It is true that after the Director made his determination that the project was a public work, he caused the DLSE to direct the District to withhold purported future payments to Lusardi. This did not result in a deprivation of property. Because "the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor" (§ 1775), this purported direction to withhold payments was meaningless.[6] The DLSE ordered the District to perform an impossible act.

The Director did not order Lusardi to begin paying the prevailing wage, nor did the Director have any power to do so. The DAS did warn Lusardi that if it did not comply with the statutory apprenticeship requirements, the DAS would initiate "proceedings for determination of willful noncompliance ... pursuant to ... section 1777.7...." The DAS has not, however, initiated such proceedings.

Thus, what the Director and his designees did in this case was to notify the District and Lusardi that, in the view of the authorities, the project was a public work and the prevailing wage law applied. There is no statute requiring the Director to so notify an awarding body or contractor; apparently the Director did so in the hope that voluntary compliance could avoid the necessity to bring an action under section 1775. But before the Director could bring a court action to recover the amounts due under section 1775, Lusardi sued the Director, claiming its due process rights were violated.

[8, 9] 1992There is apparently no case that is precisely on point. But there is a substantial body of case law that is wholly supportive of the conclusion that a party in Lusardi's situation has no procedural due process rights to notice or a hearing until an executive branch official files formal civil or criminal charges against it.

Thus, in SEC v. Jerry T. O'Brien, Inc. (1984) 467 U.S. 735, 742, 104 S.Ct. 2720, 2725, 81 L.Ed.2d 615, the high court stated that "because an administrative investigation adjudicates no legal rights," the due process clause of the federal Constitution is "not implicated...." In the context of administrative process that, unlike the main procedure at issue here, does include an administrative hearing, the courts have consistently held that "due process do[es] not require a hearing at the initial stage or at any particular point or at more than one point in an administrative proceeding so long as the requisite hearing is held before the final order becomes effective." (Opp Cotton Mills v. Administrator (1941) 312 U.S. 126, 152–153, 61 S.Ct. 524, 536, 85 L.Ed. 624; see Hodel v. Virginia Surface Mining & Recl. Assn. (1981) 452 U.S. 264, 303, 101 S.Ct. 2352, 2374, 69 L.Ed.2d 1.)

In the more closely related context of official action that, like a criminal prosecution and the procedure under section 1775, contemplates not an administrative hearing but a court trial after an executive official has filed charges, the courts have also refused to hold that procedural due process requires notice and a hearing prior to the filing of charges.

A representative analysis is found in Baltimore Gas & Elec. Co. v. Heintz (4th Cir.1985) 760 F.2d 1408, 1419, cert. den. 474 U.S. 847, 106 S.Ct. 141, 88 L.Ed.2d 116: "The mere determination to enforce the statute or regulation in some cases and not to enforce [it] in others, without more, may entitle one to an explanation from the agency designed to facilitate judicial review of the decision, but such an action does not constitute a deprivation of due process.

6. In this case the District, though it did not directly award the contract to Lusardi, is the awarding body within the meaning of the statutory scheme. As explained earlier, the District entered into a contract under which Imperial, a private corporation, would build the Expansion Project and sell the completed Expansion Project to the District; the contract provided that the District was appointed as Imperial's "agent ... for all purposes ... including, the engagement of contractors ... and the management and supervision of the Expansion Project." As Imperial's "agent," the District negotiated with Lusardi for the award of the construction contract. Under section 1722, "awarding body" means "department, board, authority, officer or agent awarding a contract for public work." (Italics added.)

That standard has 'generated an almost unbroken line of cases upholding prosecutors' powers to decide who and how to charge.' [Citations.]" (Accord, e.g., United States v. Patterson (9th Cir.1972) 465 F.2d 360, 361, cert. den. 409 U.S. 1038, 93 S.Ct. 516, 34 L.Ed.2d 487 ["It is sufficient if a hearing is had prior to the final order which deprives the person of his liberty."].)

Thus, the case law establishes that a person against whom criminal or civil charges may be filed has no procedural due process right to notice and a hearing until and unless an executive branch official actually files formal civil or criminal charges.

A contrary conclusion would result in serious mischief. For example, a place of prostitution that learned that the district attorney planned to file a |993civil "red light" action against it to abate a nuisance could demand that, before charges were filed, a hearing be held on the prosecutor's decision to file. (But see Pen.Code, § 11225 et seq.) Or the Attorney General, having decided to seek an injunction under the unfair competition statute to halt a campaign of false advertising targeting senior citizens, would be required to subject the decision to proceed to a hearing. (But see Bus. & Prof.Code, § 17200 et seq.) Or the Division of Medical Quality of the Medical Board of California, having determined as a result of an investigation that charges should be brought against a physician for unprofessional conduct, would be required to provide the physician, under Lusardi's theory, with notice and an opportunity to be heard before an accusation could be brought. (But see Gov.Code, § 11500 et seq.; Bus. & Prof.Code, § 2220 et seq.) The examples could easily be multiplied.

The Director's decision that a project is a public work may lead to further action that triggers due process rights. Should the DLSE seek to recover underpayments of the prevailing wage from Lusardi in a court action under section 1775, Lusardi will be entitled to fully litigate the issue of its liability in the trial court. But at the time the Director's preliminary determination is made, no process is due.

5. Coverage Determinations and Judicial Powers

Lusardi argues that the Director's determination that a contract is a public work impermissibly intrudes on judicial powers under the standards set forth in McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1989) 49 Cal.3d 348, 261 Cal.Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91. We do not agree.

In McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd., supra, 49 Cal.3d 348, 261 Cal.Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91, this court held that administrative agencies that are legislatively authorized to hold hearings and order relief may constitutionally do so when the exercise of such power is reasonably necessary to effectuate the agency's legitimate regulatory purposes, and "the 'essential' judicial power (i.e., the power to make enforceable, binding judgments) remains ultimately in the courts, through review of agency determinations." (Id., at p. 372, 261 Cal.Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91, italics omitted.)

Here, the Director's determination that a project is a public work does not violate the principles set forth in McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd., supra, 49 Cal.3d 348, 261 Cal.Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91. The Director's determination cannot be accurately characterized as "judicial," because it does not encompass the conduct of a hearing or a binding order for any type of relief.

6. Lusardi Has Not Demonstrated Impermissible "Retroactive Enforcement" of the Prevailing Wage Law

[10] Lusardi argues that any application of the prevailing wage laws against it requiring the payment of higher wages to its employees on the |994Expansion Project, or subjecting it to penalties for failing to comply with the prevailing wage laws, violates state and federal due process guarantees and amounts to impermissible "retroactive enforcement." Lusardi's theory, which the Court of Appeal found unnecessary to address, is that because the contract contained no provision requiring it to pay the prevailing wage, it had no notice of such a requirement. In support of this theory Lusardi relies on Lambert v. California (1957) 355 U.S. 225, 78 S.Ct. 240, 2 L.Ed.2d 228.

Lusardi's retroactive enforcement argument is premised on its contention that the obligation to pay prevailing wages arises solely from the contract. As shown above, however, this is incorrect; the obligation of a contractor to pay prevailing wages on a public work is statutory in nature.

In Lambert v. California, supra, 355 U.S. 225, 78 S.Ct. 240, the United States Supreme Court held that an ordinance making it a criminal offense for a person convicted of a felony to fail to register with a city if the person remained for more than five days in the city was unconstitutional as applied to a person who had no actual knowledge of the ordinance, when no showing was made of the probability of such knowledge. Lambert solely concerns the state of mind requisite to an individual's criminal liability. (Texaco, Inc. v. Short (1982) 454 U.S. 516, 537 fn. 33, 102 S.Ct. 781, 796 fn. 33, 70 L.Ed.2d 738; see United States v. Freed (1971) 401 U.S. 601, 608–609, 91 S.Ct. 1112, 1117–1118, 28 L.Ed.2d 356.) Thus, it has no application here.

7. Equitable Issues

[11] The Court of Appeal was persuaded that the doctrine of equitable estoppel bars the Director from determining that the Expansion Project was a public work. Lusardi renews that contention here, arguing that it relied on the District's representations that the project was not subject to the prevailing wage law, and that to now allow the Director to enforce the prevailing wage law against it would violate equitable principles. Not so.

[12, 13] Generally, four elements must be present for the doctrine of equitable estoppel to apply. First, the party to be estopped must have been aware of the facts. Second, that party must either intend that its act or omission be acted upon, or must so act that the party asserting estoppel has a right to believe it was intended. Third, the party asserting estoppel must be unaware of the true facts. Fourth, the party asserting estoppel must rely on the other party's conduct, to its detriment. (Lentz v. McMahon (1989) 49 Cal.3d 393, 398–399, 261 Cal.Rptr. 310, 777 P.2d 83.) Even when these elements are present, estoppel will not be applied against the government if to do so would nullify a strong rule of policy adopted for the benefit of the 1995 public. (Ibid.; accord, e.g., City of Long Beach v. Mansell (1970) 3 Cal.3d 462, 488, 91 Cal.Rptr. 23, 476 P.2d 423.)

Lusardi's attempt to invoke the doctrine against the Director must fail because the elements of equitable estoppel are entirely lacking against the Director. Lusardi does not and cannot claim that it justifiably relied on acts or omissions of the Director. Rather, Lusardi argues that the actions of the District led to Lusardi's reliance, and that the acts of the District should be attributed to the Director.

[14] The acts of one public agency will bind another public agency only when there is privity, or an identity of interests between the agencies. (City and County of San Francisco v. Grant Co. (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 1085, 1092, 227 Cal.Rptr. 154; California Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. Day & Night Electric, Inc. (1985) 163 Cal.App.3d 898, 904–905, 210 Cal.Rptr. 48; see Lerner v. Los Angeles City Board of Education (1963) 59 Cal.2d 382, 397–399, 29 Cal.Rptr. 657, 380 P.2d 97.)

In this case, there is no privity or identity of interest between the District and the Director. Instead, there is a direct and palpable conflict. As its actions clearly evidence, the District had an interest in obtaining the lowest possible cost for construction of the hospital expansion project. The interest of the Director is in enforcing the prevailing wage laws. Contractors that do not pay the prevailing wage to their workers enjoy a competitive advantage over contractors that do, and may be preferred by local government agencies for public works projects, because the construction dollar will purchase more when a contractor paying less than the prevailing wage is selected. The facts of this case illustrate this conflict of interest: the District seeks to avoid the prevailing wage law, while the Director seeks to enforce it.

Lusardi argues that Waters v. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 635, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546 (hereafter Waters) supports a finding that the Director is estopped from determining that the project is subject to the prevailing wage law. We disagree.

In Waters, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d 635, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546, a city published a notice for bids on a construction project stating that, under section 1773, prevailing wages were to be paid by the contractor, but failing to set forth the prevailing wage rates or to include a statement that the rates were on file with the city, as required by section 1773.2. The contractor consulted with a city architect, who mistakenly indicated that the prevailing rates for carpentry were considerably lower than the applicable rate established by the Director. Based on |996 this incorrect information, the contractor concluded that the rates paid by his carpentry subcontractor were greater than the prevailing wage. Thereafter, the DLSE determined that the carpenters had been underpaid; it levied a penalty for the underpayment, and ordered the city to withhold the amount of the underpayment plus the penalty from payments due the contractor. The contractor sued the DLSE. On appeal from a judgment in favor of the contractor, the appellate court held that although the contractor was liable for the underpayment, the DLSE was estopped by the actions of the city from collecting the penalty. (192 Cal.App.3d at pp. 639–642, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.)

The Waters court declined to apply estoppel to preclude enforcement of the prevailing wage law against the contractor, and held that the contractor was liable for the difference between the amount paid and the prevailing wage rate. (Waters, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d at p. 639, 237 Cal. Rptr. 546.) Thus, Waters does not support an application of the doctrine of estoppel to preclude a determination that a project is a public work. Moreover, the Waters court never considered the question whether the city and the DLSE shared the requisite privity or identity of interests.

[15] Waters does, however, contain an insight of considerable value to this case. The Waters court concluded that there was no "strong rule of policy" that would require the imposition of a penalty on the contractor, who had reasonably and in good faith attempted to comply with the requirements of the prevailing wage law. (Waters, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d at pp. 641–642, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.) We agree that in a proper case equitable considerations may preclude the imposition of statutory penalties against a public work contractor for failing to pay the prevailing wage. This is such a case. Here, Lusardi acted in good faith in entering into the contract on the basis of the District's representations, assertedly on the advice of its attorneys, that the project was not subject to the prevailing wage law. Under the circumstances of this case it would be inequitable for Lusardi to be held liable for penalties for failure to pay the prevailing wage. Lusardi's exposure to liability must be limited to the amount of underpayment.

[16] This conclusion comports with this state's policy, reflected in Civil Code section 3275, that when a party incurs a loss in the nature of a forfeiture or penalty, but makes full compensation to the injured party, he or she may be relieved from the forfeiture or penalty except when there has been a grossly negligent, willful or fraudulent breach of a duty. California courts have applied this principle when necessary to accomplish substantial justice. (See Valley View Home of Beaumont, Inc. v. Department of Health Services (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 161, 168, 194 Cal.Rptr. 56.) Similarly, courts refuse to impose civil penalties against a party who acted with a good |997 faith and reasonable belief in the legality of his or her actions. (Whaler's Village Club v. California Coastal Com. (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 240, 263, 220 Cal. Rptr. 2; No Oil, Inc. v. Occidental Petroleum Corp. (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 8, 30, 123 Cal.Rptr. 589.) In this case substantial justice would not be achieved by a resolution that left Lusardi liable for statutory penalties under section 1775 for failing to pay the prevailing wage when it acted in good faith and on the express representations of a governmental entity. Based on these equitable principles, Lusardi should also not be liable for penalties under either section 1777.7 (relating to failure to comply with the apprenticeship provisions of the prevailing wage law) or section 1813 (involving noncompliance with overtime provisions of the prevailing wage law) based on violations allegedly occurring before Lusardi ceased work on the project in this case.

We also note in connection with the equitable issues raised in this case that although the contract between Imperial and the District specified that the prevailing wage was to be paid, the stipulation of the parties makes clear that the District expressly represented to Lusardi that the construction project was not a public work and therefore the prevailing wage law did not apply, and that Lusardi relied in good faith on these representations. These facts strongly suggest that Lusardi has remedies against the District, Imperial, and perhaps others for indemnification of any sums it may be required to pay as a result of application of the prevailing wage law. (See generally, Rozay's Transfer v. Local Freight Drivers L. (9th Cir.1988) 850 F.2d 1321; Southwest Administrators, Inc. v. Rozay's Transfer (9th Cir.1986) 791 F.2d 769.) Moreover, if the District made material misrepresentations to Lusardi, as the stipulated facts suggest, Lusardi may be entitled to recover for all other consequential damages it suffered as a result of such wrongful conduct, in addition to indemnification for amounts due under the prevailing wage law. (Civ.Code, § 3333.)

8. Section 1776 Penalties

[17] Lusardi separately challenges numerous specific provisions of the prevailing wage law relating to penalties. The Court of Appeal did not reach Lusardi's specific challenges.

As described above, in May 1986 the DLSE directed Lusardi to submit certified payroll records and warned that failure to do so would subject Lusardi to statutory penalties. Lusardi did not comply with the request. In November 1986, the DLSE sent a "penalty assessment letter" to the District, with a copy to Lusardi. The letter purported to assess a statutory penalty of $25 per day per employee, under section 1776, subdivision (f), calculated on the basis that there were a minimum of 200 employees, and made retroactive to August 30, 1986. The DLSE directed the District to withhold $380,000 from future progress payments due Lusardi, and to increase the amount withheld by $5,000 per day for each day of noncompliance beyond November 13, 1986.

Lusardi contends that the penalties imposed against it violate procedural due process guarantees because they constitute a deprivation of its property without a hearing. Lusardi also argues that section 1776, subdivision (f), violates the prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures under the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution. We do not reach the merits of these arguments because, as we shall explain, the DLSE's letter purporting to impose the penalty was ineffective.

Under subdivision (f) of section 1776, a contractor has 10 days in which to comply with a request to submit certified payroll records. If the contractor fails to do so, the statute provides: "[T]he contractor shall, as a penalty to the state or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each worker, until strict compliance is effectuated. Upon request of the [DAS] or the [DLSE], these penalties shall be withheld from progress payments then due."

In this case, there was no contract between Lusardi and the District. The only contract to which Lusardi was a party was the construction contract between it and Imperial. The District itself had no funds to withhold from Lusardi; thus, the DLSE's letter directing the District to withhold funds had no legal force.

Because the DLSE has taken no effective steps to impose a penalty on Lusardi under section 1776, subdivision (f), Lusardi is in the same position as if the DLSE had never asserted the applicability of that subdivision. In this context, a ruling on the constitutionality of section 1776, subdivision (f), would be purely advisory. We have no assurance that Lusardi would refuse to comply with a renewed request for records. Nor is there any reason to believe that the DLSE would necessarily seek penalties before affording Lusardi an opportunity to contest the matter in court. We decline to reach the questions regarding the constitutionality of section 1776 in this hypothetical context. (See Hodel v. Virginia Surface Min. & Reclam. Assn., supra, 452 U.S. 264, 304, 101 S.Ct. 2352, 2374, 69 L.Ed.2d 1; Pacific Legal Foundation v. California Coastal Com. (1982) 33 Cal.3d 158, 173–174, 188 Cal.Rptr. 104, 655 P.2d 306.)

[999] 9. Additional Issues

Lusardi argues that sections 1727 through 1733 are unconstitutional because they authorize the seizure of property without a hearing, and that sections 1775, 1777.7 and 1813 are unconstitutional because they provide for excessive penalties that are imposed without a hearing. As we have explained earlier, Lusardi is not liable for penalties under the latter three sections based on any violation allegedly occurring before it ceased work on the Expansion Project. Accordingly, we do not address Lusardi's contentions regarding these sections.

Sections 1727 through 1733 generally govern the circumstances under which awarding bodies may withhold sums from contractors, and provide for recovery of withheld sums. As noted above, here there was no contract between the contractor and the awarding body, and no sums were or could have been withheld from Lusardi by the District. The Director has not sought to apply any of these statutes against Lusardi. Under the circumstances, sections 1727 through 1733 are inapplicable. We decline to address the merits of legal questions not posed by the facts of this case.

DISPOSITION

The judgment of the Court of Appeal is reversed.

LUCAS, C.J., and MOSK and GEORGE, JJ., concur.

PANELLI, Justice, concurring and dissenting.

I dissent from the majority's holding that the obligation of a contractor on a public works project to pay the prevailing wages arises from a statutory duty independent of any contractual agreement or notice to the contractor. (Maj. opn., ante, at pp. 842–844 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at pp. 648–650 of 824 P.2d.) The majority bases its conclusion on the language of one of the public works law's provisions that the prevailing wage "'shall be paid to all workers employed on public works.'" (Id. at p. 843 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at p. 649 of 824 P.2d, quoting Lab.Code, § 1771.[1]) The majority also asserts that requiring contractors to comply with the public works laws only when their contracts require it would defeat the legislative objective of ensuring that workers on public works be paid the prevailing wages. (Maj. opn., ante, at p. 843 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at p. 649 of 824 P.2d.) I disagree with the majority's interpretation of the prevailing wage laws. In my view, the statutory scheme as a whole does not disclose a legislative intent to hold contractors liable for paying the prevailing wages when the contract does not require those wages to be paid; rather, it reflects a view that the Legislature intended contractors to be aware of their obligations under the prevailing [1000] wage laws before entering into a contract for public works. As a consequence, the result that the majority in this case reaches is patently unfair and, in my view, unconstitutional as a violation of due process; there is no evidence that the Legislature intended such a result.

In interpreting the prevailing wage laws, we must look at the statutory scheme as a whole in order to harmonize the various elements. (Mattice Investments, Inc. v. Division of Labor Standards Enforce- ment (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 918, 923, 235 Cal.Rptr. 502; Bowland v. Municipal Court (1976) 18 Cal.3d 479, 489, 134 Cal. Rptr. 630, 556 P.2d 1081.) While it is true, as the majority states, that section 1771 provides that the prevailing wage "shall be paid to all workers employed on public works," it is also evident that the statutory scheme establishes detailed procedures designed to ensure that contractors are aware of their responsibilities under the public works laws before entering into a public works contract. (See §§ 1773.2, 1775, 1776, subd. (g), 1777.5.) In particular, the public body awarding the contract is required either to specify the prevailing wage in the call for bids, the bid specifications, and the contract itself, or to include a statement in those documents that copies of the prevailing rate of wages are on file and available for inspection. (§ 1773.2.) In addition, the awarding public body is required to have the contract include a stipulation that the contractor will comply with the forfeiture and penalty provisions if any workers employed by the contractor or any subcontractor are underpaid. (§ 1775.)

These provisions for precontract notice indicate that the Legislature intended contractors to be fully aware of their responsibility to pay the prevailing wages and of the consequences of failure to pay those wages before entering into a contract for the construction of public works. The Legislature also intended contractors to agree to those obligations in the contract. The statutory scheme can most reasonably be read to allow the prevailing wage laws to be enforced against the contractor only when the contract specifies that the project is a public work. The stipulated facts in this case indicate that Lusardi Construction Company's (Lusardi's) contract did not state that the prevailing wage laws were applicable; in fact, Lusardi's representative made clear that the company would not enter the contract if it was for a public works project. I do not believe that the Legislature intended contractors to be held liable for the prevailing wages under these factual circumstances.

This interpretation is consistent with that of the Courts of Appeal that have considered the question of when a contractor can be required to pay prevailing wages on a public works project. As will be discussed, those courts have held without exception, that the contractor could be held liable because, in [1001] each case, the contractor had agreed in the contract to be subject to the prevailing wage laws.

In Division of Lab. Stds. Enforcement v. Ericsson Information Systems, Inc. (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 114, 270 Cal.Rptr. 75, the Court of Appeal held that a contractor could be required to pay the prevailing wage to workers who fell into a job classification for which the public entity awarding the contract had not specified the prevailing wage. The court reasoned that this deficiency did not relieve the contractor of its obligation to pay all its workers prevailing wages, because the contractor had expressly agreed in the contract to pay prevailing wages. (221 Cal.App.3d at pp. 125–126 & fn. 21, 270 Cal.Rptr. 75.)

Two cases in which payments were withheld from contractors after the contractors failed to ensure that prevailing wages were paid also conclude that the duty to pay prevailing wages arises from the contract. In O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 434, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799 the court held that contractor could be required to pay penalties and the difference between actual wages and the prevailing wage rate when a subcontractor failed to pay the prevailing wages. The court reasoned that the public works provisions of the Labor Code did not place an involuntary burden on the contractor, since "[the contractors'] execution of the contract with knowledge of the penalties to be imposed if they or their subcontractors failed to pay the prevailing wages required under the contract was voluntary, and constituted consent to the [prevailing wage provisions.] [Citation.]" (55 Cal. App.3d at p. 455, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.) Therefore the court held that "[w]hen the contractor submits his bid based on the prevailing wage determination and freely enters into a contract for the public work involved, in which contract he stipulates to be subject to the penalty provisions of the prevailing wage law, he cannot be heard to say that he was denied due process of law with respect to the enforcement of the penalty provisions." (Ibid., emphasis added.)

The court in Waters v. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (1987) 192 Cal. App.3d 635, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546 (Waters), applied a similar analysis. There, the contracting public entity withheld payments from a contractor to cover penalties and extra wages when a subcontractor failed to pay the prevailing rate. The city contracting for the project had not specified what the prevailing rates were, nor that those rates were on file in the city's office. However, the contract between the city and Waters, the contractor, did provide that the prevailing wage rates were to be paid to the workers. The court held that Waters could be required to pay the difference between the prevailing rates and the wages actually paid, because "[t]he contract documents ... did alert Waters, as he so testified, that the wages must not be less [1002] than the prevailing general rate." (192 Cal.App.3d at p. 640, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546, emphasis added.) [2] The court stated, "[w]hen a contractor freely enters into an agreement for a public work in which he stipulates to pay the prevailing wage rate ..., he will be required to comply with the terms of his contract." (Id. at p. 639, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.)

Thus, the courts that have considered the applicability of the requirement to pay prevailing wages in circumstances in which the public entity did not fully comply with its obligations agree that "the duty to pay the prevailing wage [is] triggered once the contractor so agree[s] in the contract." (Division of Lab. Stds. Enforcement v. Ericsson Information Systems, Inc., supra, 221 Cal.App.3d at p. 126, fn. 21, 270 Cal.Rptr. 75, emphasis added.) Under this analysis, a contractor is not liable for paying prevailing wages or for any penalties for underpayment unless he was on notice of the requirements at the time that he entered into the contract for the public work and agreed to pay the prevailing wages in the contract. I believe that this conclusion is correct.

Under the majority's interpretation, a contractor may be held liable for extra wages although he had no notice that the prevailing wage requirements would be applicable and, like Lusardi, he would not have entered into the contract if he had had that notice. In that case, if a contractor enters into a contract in a good faith belief that it is for a private work, as the stipulated facts state that Lusardi did, and the project is later determined to be a public work, the contractor would effectively have been forced against his will into accepting a public works contract. To say that the contractor will only be liable for the extra wages and not for any penalties does not mitigate the fundamental unfairness of this outcome. I see no reason to conclude that the Legislature intended such an unfair result. (See County of Madera v. Gendron (1963) 59 Cal.2d 798, 803, 31 Cal.Rptr. 302, 382 P.2d 342 [court reluctant to construe statute in a way that would cause "harsh and unjust result" in the absence of "clear indication" of legislative intent]; see also Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal.3d 235, 242, 207 Cal.Rptr. 857, 689 P.2d 1127.)

The majority attempts to soften the harshness of its holding by saying that Lusardi may be entitled to indemnity from the Tri-City Hospital District (the District). In my view, the fundamental unfairness remains. The majority's conclusion would place on Lusardi the primary responsibility for paying the excess wages, as well as the additional burden of showing that it was entitled to indemnity. This is a considerable burden to place on a contractor that, as the stipulated facts state, relied in good faith on the District's assurances that the expansion project was a private work.

[1003] I am also troubled by the due process implications of the majority's conclusion

2. It also held that, under the doctrine of equitable estoppel, Waters could not be required to pay the statutory penalties because he had made a reasonable attempt to find out what the prevailing wages were. (Waters, supra, 192 Cal. App.3d at pp. 640–641, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.)

imposing liability on Lusardi. In this case, the Director, after the contract was entered into, made a determination that the project was a public work and directed the District to withhold payments due Lusardi. The majority concludes that this action did not result in a deprivation of property without due process of law, since there was no money due from the District to Lusardi, but rather, all money due Lusardi was owed by Imperial. Accordingly, under the majority's view, the Director would have had to institute a court action, giving Lusardi notice and an opportunity to be heard before any deprivation of its property occurred. (Maj. opn., ante, at pp. 845–847 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at pp. 651–653 of 824 P.2d; see § 1775.)

This reasoning, in my view, is unsound. The contract between the District and Imperial stated that "[Imperial] hereby appoints and constitutes [the District] as its agent and attorney-in-fact for all purposes respecting construction of the [Expansion Project], including, without limitation, the engagement of contractors .... and the management and supervision of the construction of the [Expansion Project].... [The District], as agent, shall ... supervise and provide for, or cause to be supervised and provided for, as agent for [Imperial], the complete acquisition and construction of the [Expansion Project]." Thus, the District had complete responsibility for managing the construction of the project. Moreover, the majority concludes that as the agent of Imperial, the District is the "awarding body."

If the District is the "awarding body," it elevates form over substance to say that there was no money owing from the District to the contractor. If the District did owe money to Lusardi, then the Director would not have ordered an "impossible act" when he ordered the District to withhold funds from Lusardi. (See maj. opn., ante, at p. 846 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at p. 652 of 824 P.2d.) This withholding of funds would clearly violate Lusardi's due process rights, since the contractor would have been deprived of its property without notice or an opportunity to be heard. (See O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation, supra, 55 Cal.App.3d at p. 455, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.)

The majority has expressed concern that if contractors cannot be bound by the public works laws in the absence of agreement in the contract, the policy of ensuring that workers are paid the prevailing wage will be defeated. However, I do not see any state policy that can only be served by holding contractors liable in these circumstances. The Legislature has seen fit to place on the contracting public entities the obligation to require public works contractors to pay the prevailing wages. "By the express terms of the statutes, the Legislature has imposed upon the awarding body ... the responsibility for providing advance notice to the contractor that wages must 1004be paid in accordance with the general prevailing rate.... [Citation.]" (Waters, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d at p. 640, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.) The statutory objective of guaranteeing that workers on public works are paid prevailing wages can be served by requiring public entities to carry out their obligations under the public works law.

Enforcing the public works laws against awarding bodies only and not against the contractors in these circumstances would be both reasonable and fair. The public works law imposes a duty on the public agency to put bidders on notice of the potential liability that a successful bidder will incur. Nowhere does the public works law suggest that bidders not notified of the implications of a successful bid will nonetheless be subject to an obligation imposed upon them after the fact, resulting from the failure of a public agency to follow the dictates of the law. Nor would it be unreasonable to place upon the public agency itself the financial burden of its failure to comply with the public works law. By not adhering to its obligation under the law, the public agency is, presumptively, the beneficiary of a less costly project; had the public agency advised bidders of their obligations under the public works law to pay prevailing wages the project would have been more costly to the public agency. Hence it would not be unfair to require the public agency to bear any obligation to pay the extra wages.

The majority has also raised the possibility that, if contractors are not held liable in these circumstances, public entities and contractors might collude to evade the prevailing wage laws. However, the statutory scheme provides criminal sanctions that will serve to discourage collusion. Section 1777 makes it a misdemeanor for any officer, agent, or representative of the state or any political subdivision to wilfully violate any provision of the prevailing wage law statutory scheme. I presume that collusion with a contractor to evade the laws would fall under this section.

Therefore, I dissent from the majority's conclusion that contractors' obligation to pay the prevailing wages arises purely from the statutory scheme. In my view, Lusardi cannot be required to pay the difference between the prevailing wages and the wages actually paid because it did not have notice that the prevailing wage laws applied before entering into the contract to construct the expansion project and did not agree in the contract to pay those wages. Like the majority, I also conclude that Lusardi cannot be required to pay the statutory penalties.

BAXTER, J., concurs.

ARABIAN, Justice, concurring and dissenting.

Although I agree that the obligation to pay prevailing wage derives from statute as well as contract [1005] and that the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations (the Director) retains the inherent and necessary authority ultimately to determine a project's public work status, I cannot support the majority's refusal to accord Lusardi Construction Company (Lusardi) a modicum of fairness under this scenario. In my view, the circumstances "clearly establish that a grave injustice would be done if an equitable estoppel were not applied." (Cal. Cigarette Concessions v. City of L.A. (1960) 53 Cal.2d 865, 869, 3 Cal.Rptr. 675, 350 P.2d 715.) I would, therefore, affirm the judgment of the Court of Appeal.

The stipulated facts establish that the contract between Lusardi and Imperial Municipal Services Group, Inc. (Imperial) did not contain any reference to the status of the expansion project as a public work or to any obligation to pay prevailing wages; that Lusardi inquired as to the nature of the project, expressly declining to enter into a public works contract; that in response the Tri-City Hospital District (the District) gave assurances, based on representations of its legal counsel, that the construction was private and no prevailing wage or payroll record obligations obtained; that Lusardi premised its agreement with Imperial upon those assurances and representations; and that in so doing Lusardi acted in good faith. Lusardi did all a business could do.

A simple recitation of these facts should thus suffice to confirm the right to invoke equitable estoppel: Lusardi acted to its detriment in justifiable reliance upon the inaccurate representations of a governmental agency charged with implementation and enforcement of the law. Nevertheless, the majority demur based upon an asserted lack of privity between the Director and the District and the potential nullification of "a strong rule of policy adopted for the benefit of the public." (Maj. opn., ante, p. 848 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, p. 654 of 824 P.2d.)

To reach its conclusion, the majority analysis hews to the "elements" of equitable estoppel. (See City of Long Beach v. Mansell (1970) 3 Cal.3d 462, 489, 91 Cal.Rptr. 23, 476 P.2d 423.) Dispensing equitable relief, however, depends upon a measure of flexibility as well as fairness and must accommodate compelling circumstances that may not precisely conform to "the rigid rules of law." (Bechtel v. Wier (1907) 152 Cal. 443, 446, 93 P. 75.) "Equity does not wait upon precedent which exactly squares with the facts in controversy, but will assert itself in those situations where right and justice would be defeated but for its intervention." (Times-Mirror Co. v. Superior Court (1935) 3 Cal.2d 309, 331, 44 P.2d 547; Bisno v. Sax (1959) 175 Cal. App.2d 714, 729, 346 P.2d 814 [" 'no inflexible rule has been permitted to circumscribe the power of equity to do justice' "]; cf. Farina v. Bevilacqua (1961) 192 Cal.

App.2d 681, 685, 13 Cal.Rptr. 791 [inability to restore precise status quo not invariable bar to rescission]; Nadell & Co. v. Grasso 1006 175 Cal.App.2d 420, 431, 346 P.2d 505 ["peculiar, and perhaps unique, facts" justified enforcement of restrictive covenant as to services; equitable servitudes not limited to chattels].)

Moreover, I am unpersuaded under the facts that equity should not charge the Director with the consequences of the District's conduct. As head of the Department of Industrial Relations, the Director assumes primary responsibility for determining, monitoring, and enforcing prevailing wage laws on public works. (See generally Lab.Code, § 1770 et seq.) The awarding body has interrelated notification and implementation obligations pursuant to which it works in conjunction with the Director to ensure compliance. (See, e.g., Lab.Code, §§ 1773.2, 1773.3, 1773.4, 1775, 1776; cf. City and County of San Francisco v. Grant Co. (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 1085, 1092, 227 Cal.Rptr. 154 [city not acting as arm or agent of state in failing to enforce building code regulations since city had initial and independent enforcement responsibility within its territory].) The statutory scheme thus contemplates a confluence of governmental interests and duties sufficient in my estimation to establish privity. (See Lerner v. Los Angeles City Board of Education (1963) 59 Cal.2d 382, 397–399, 29 Cal.Rptr. 657, 380 P.2d 97, and cases cited at fn. 10.) In finding to the contrary, the majority rely on the fact that the District in actuality assumed a position antagonistic to the Director. Lusardi, however, had no reason to anticipate such an eventuality, whereas the Director could well have taken measures to forestall the possibility. (See Lab.Code, § 1773.5 [Director may "establish rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying out this chapter, including, ... the responsibilities and duties of awarding bodies"].) Lusardi should not bear the burden of the Director's default in failing to maintain adequate administrative controls over awarding bodies that share responsibility for implementing and enforcing prevailing wage laws.[1]

Furthermore, the Director retains the inherent authority to characterize a given project as a public work thereby invoking the obligation to pay [1007]prevailing wages. (Maj. opn., ante, pp. 844–845 of 4 Cal.Rptr. 2d, pp. 650–651 of 824 P.2d.) Accordingly, at any and all times the Director could have intervened, notified Lusardi that the project constituted a public work, and mandated wage and reporting compliance. Cynically, I note such intervention did not occur until Lusardi had substantially completed the project in reliance upon contractual provisions and express representations by a governmental agency to the contrary. "[N]egligence or silence in the face of a duty to speak may suffice [to invoke estoppel]. [Citation.]" (City and County of San Francisco v. Grant Co., supra, 181 Cal.App.3d at p. 1091, 227 Cal.Rptr. 154; see also Dettamanti v. Lompoc Union School Dist. (1956) 143 Cal.App.2d 715, 721, 300 P.2d 78; cf. People v. Department of Housing & Community Dev. (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 185, 195–196, 119 Cal.Rptr. 266 [comparing estoppel and laches]; 11 Witkin, Summary of Cal.Law (9th ed. 1990) Equity, § 14, pp. 690–692 [defense of laches].) While the District's misfeasance may have instigated this predicament, the Director's nonfeasance perpetuated it to Lusardi's detriment.

As to the majority's policy argument, I cannot agree that the Legislature enacted the prevailing wage laws "for the benefit of the public." (See County of San Diego

1. Whether based on equity or otherwise, this court does not lack precedent for holding one governmental agency accountable for the actions of another. (See, e.g., People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal.3d 468, 481–482, 186 Cal.Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321 [criminal charges of welfare fraud dismissed on collateral estoppel after evidence found insufficient in administrative hearing; "The People cannot now take advantage of the fact that the County avoided its litigation responsibilities and chose not to present evidence at the prior proceeding."]; Kellett v. Superior Court (1966) 63 Cal.2d 822, 827–829, 48 Cal.Rptr. 366, 409 P.2d 206 [under Pen.Code, § 654, misdemeanor conviction will generally bar felony prosecution based on same act or course of conduct even when crimes are prosecuted by different public law offices]; Lucido v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal.3d 335, 351–352, 272 Cal.Rptr. 767, 795 P.2d 1223 [for reasons of public policy collateral estoppel does not preclude criminal prosecution after People fail to establish violation of probation based on same underlying conduct].)

v. Cal. Water etc. Co. (1947) 30 Cal.2d 817, 826–828, 186 P.2d 124.) Whatever incidental salutary effect the general public may derive, in the words of the majority, "[t]he overall purpose of the prevailing wage law is to protect and benefit employees on public works projects." (Maj. opn., ante, p. 842 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, p. 648 of 824 P.2d; see Lab.Code, § 90.5, subd. (a); O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 434, 458, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799; cf. 11 Witkin, Summary of Cal.Law, supra, Equity, § 183, at pp. 864–866, and cases cited therein ["no estoppel where it would defeat operation of a policy protecting the public"].) As between the two, the District, not Lusardi, had the primary statutory obligation to safeguard the interests of employees with respect to minimum labor standards. (See Lab.Code, § 1720 et seq.) Indemnification notwithstanding, I see no public policy fostered by requiring a nondefaulting party to assume that responsibility.[2] (Waters v. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 635, 641–642, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546.)

As the Court of Appeal below summarized, "We have here a fact situation which shouts estoppel." If no equitable mechanism exists by which Lusardi can extricate itself from the very litigation it attempted in good faith to avoid, then rectitude and fair dealing have ceased to function within our judicial framework. Regrettably, the chancellor's conscience has fallen victim to the very rigidity of the rule of law it should seek to ameliorate. (See 1008*Bechtel v. Wier, supra*, 152 Cal. 443, 446, 93 P. 75; City of Los Angeles v. Cohn (1894) 101 Cal. 373, 376–378, 35 P. 1002.)

BAXTER, Justice, concurring and dissenting.

I agree with the majority that Lusardi Construction Company (Lusardi) cannot be held liable for statutory penalties. I respectfully dissent, however, from the remainder of the judgment and the majority's reasoning. I have concurred in Justice Panelli's explanation of why Lusardi should not be required to pay the difference between the prevailing wages and the wages that Lusardi contracted to pay. (Conc. and dis. opn. of Panelli, J., at pp. 851–855 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at pp. 657–661 of 824 P.2d, ante.) I write separately only to state that I also agree with Justice Arabian's conclusion that the majority opinion results in a miscarriage of justice. (Conc. and dis. opn. of Arabian, J., at pp. 855–857 of 4 Cal.Rptr. 2d, at pp. 661–663 of 824 P.2d, ante.) As he explains and as the Court of Appeal observed, this case cries out for application of equitable estoppel.

In an apparent attempt to render its harsh result more palatable, the majority suggests that Lusardi "has remedies against the District, Imperial, and perhaps others for indemnification...." (Maj. opn., at p. 850 of 4 Cal.Rptr.2d, at p. 656 of 824 P.2d, ante.) This result not only delays justice to Lusardi, it unnecessarily consumes court resources.

ROAD SPRINKLER FITTERS LOCAL UNION NO. 669, Plaintiff and Respondent,

v.

G & G FIRE SPRINKLERS, INC., Defendant and Appellant.

No. C035386.

Court of Appeal, Third District.

Oct. 1, 2002.

Certified for Partial Publication.

Union brought action against fire suppression sprinkler subcontractor for the construction of new wing of county hospital, alleging subcontractor's failure to pay prevailing wage rate and benefits. The Superior Court, San Joaquin County, No. 294737, William J. Murray, Jr., J., awarded the union $230,630.60 for deficiency wages, unpaid benefits, waiting time penalty wages, interest, attorney fees, and costs. Subcontractor appealed. The Court of Appeal, Blease, Acting P.J., held that: (1) a worker on a public works project has a private statutory cause of action against a contractor to recover unpaid prevailing wages and waiting time wages, and (2) an award of waiting time penalty wages was warranted.

Affirmed.

1. Appeal and Error ⇐173(9)

Fire suppression sprinkler subcontractor for the construction of new wing of county hospital waived appellate review of its claim that union's action against subcontractor, alleging subcontractor's failure to pay prevailing wage rate, was barred by the res judicata effect of the final judgment in the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement's (DLSE) action against general contractor, where subcontractor failed to raise the res judicata defense in the trial court.

2. Judgment ⇐540

The doctrine of "res judicata" or "claim preclusion" gives preclusive effect to former judgments on the merits and bars relitigation of the same cause of action in a subsequent suit between the same parties or parties in privity with them.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

3. Judgment ⇐540

The res judicata doctrine promotes judicial economy by limiting multiple litigation.

4. Judgment ⇐948(1), 951(.5)

The defense of res judicata must be pleaded and proven.

5. Judgment ⇐678(2)

"Privity," for purposes of res judicata, involves a person so identified in interest with another that he represents the same legal right.

6. Appeal and Error ⇐842(8)

Because an assignment is a written instrument, in the absence of parol evidence, the appellate court reviews the assignment independently, looking to the language of the assignment.

BLEASE, Acting P.J.

This case is the result of a dispute arising from the construction of a new wing of the San Joaquin General Hospital, in which the subcontractor, G & G Fire Sprinklers, Inc. (G & G), failed to pay its workers the prevailing wage rate for their labor classification.

Road Fitters Sprinklers Local Union No. 669 (the Union), acting on the assignment of the statutory rights of four workers, sued G & G to recover their unpaid, prevailing wages under Labor Code section 1774 [1] and for waiting time penalty wages under section 203.

G & G appeals from the judgment in favor of the Union, raising several contentions. It claims this matter is pre-empted by the National Labor Relations Act and that the National Labor Relations Board has exclusive jurisdiction over this case, the Union has no standing to sue because its standing is limited to recovery of the workers' statutory rights and the workers have no private statutory right to recover unpaid prevailing wages, G & G's reasonable good faith choice of job classification defeats the Union's claim, the trial court's erroneous rulings on the burden of proof and the admission of evidence require a new trial, and G & G is not liable for waiting time penalty wages.

In the published portion of the opinion we conclude the Union, as assignee of the workers' statutory rights, has standing to assert G & G's statutory duty to pay prevailing wages under section 1774, because a prevailing wage is a minimum wage, and therefore the workers may assert their express rights to recover their unpaid prevailing wages under the minimum wage provisions of section 1194.[2]

We find no error and affirm the judgment and award of damages.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND [3]

On September 28, 1993, the County of San Joaquin awarded Perini Building Company, Inc. (Perini) a public works construction contract to build a new wing of the San Joaquin County General Hospital. On November 23, 1993, Perini selected G & G as the subcontractor to install the fire suppression sprinkler system for the hospital. Pursuant to a written subcontract, G & G agreed to perform this work for $398,000.

A fire suppression sprinkler system may be installed only by workers classified as fire sprinkler fitters, a skilled classification of the plumbers craft responsible for installing and maintaining several types of fire suppression systems.

In its call for bids and in the public works contract, San Joaquin County published the prevailing wages for the work classifications necessary to execute the contract. Included in the publication was the basic prevailing hourly wage rate for fire sprinkler fitters. Including benefits, the rate was $33.73 per hour in 1994 when the work was performed.

G & G hired a number of workers to install the fire suppression system it had agreed to provide under its subcontract with Perini. Four of these workers were Thomas Browning, Dennis Marlowe, Kenneth Ahoff, and Stephen Ledford. They are fire sprinkler fitters by trade with years of experience in the trade and belong to the Union. G & G hired Browning as the foreman and paid him the basic rate for the classification of fire sprinkler fitter, but failed to provide him with the required benefits. G & G paid Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford as pipe tradesmen, a classification that carries a lower per diem prevailing wage rate than a fire sprinkler fitter. G & G also failed to provide these men with benefits.

Browning, Marlowe, Ahoff and Ledford filed complaints with the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) protesting their rate of pay and lack of benefits, triggering an investigation by DLSE. After an initial review of the matter, a DLSE investigator advised G & G it was using the wrong classification to pay its men and advised it to cease that practice. G & G did not heed the advice. DLSE subsequently filed a Notice to Withhold Payment against G & G in the amount of $93,867.08 for wages and penalties. DLSE determined the total amount of underpaid wages and penalties owed by G & G was $219,929.25.

G & G called only one witness, Mr. Itai Ben–Artzi, to testify concerning its claim it paid Browning, Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford their required benefits and that it had reasonably and in good faith relied on information provided by government officials in making its determination that Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford should be classified as pipe tradesmen and paid the prevailing wage for that classification.

Browning, Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford signed a document assigning the Union their "statutory" rights to collect underpaid wages and benefits.

The DLSE filed a complaint against Perini and its sureties to recover the underpaid wages and benefits for 17 workers, and penalties. The Union, as assignee of Browning, Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford, filed a complaint against the County of San Joaquin, Perini, G & G, and the sureties for their underpaid wages and waiting time penalty wages. Pursuant to a stipulation and order, the Union agreed to abate its action against the County, Perini, and the sureties, and these defendants were dismissed from the action without prejudice. The two matters were consolidated and tried before the court.

The trial court found in favor of DLSE [4] and the Union. The court awarded the Union $230,630.60 against G & G for deficiency wages, unpaid benefits, waiting time penalty wages, interest, attorneys' fees, and costs.[5] The amount awarded for deficiency wages, $93,633.41, was included in the total awards to both the Union and DLSE and was made joint and several. The award to the Union for waiting time wages, interest, attorneys' fees, and costs was made several.

G & G filed a timely notice of appeal from the judgment in favor of the Union.

DISCUSSION [6]

4. DLSE was awarded a total of $343,839.26 against Perini and $215,820 against the sureties.

5. The total award of $230, 630.60 is calculated as the sum of the following items of damages: deficiency wages: $93,633.41; interest: $41,257.19; waiting time wages (§ 203) $32,380.00; interest: $40,860; and, attorney's fees: $22,500.

6. At oral argument, G & G raised the defense of res judicata for the first time, citing to footnote 12 in Mycogen Corporation v. Monsanto Co. (2002) 28 Cal.4th 888, 123 Cal. Rptr.2d 432, 51 P.3d 297, arguing that the final judgment in DLSE's case against Perini

Standing

[1–5] G & G contends the Union lacks standing to assert the workers' claims for unpaid prevailing wages and benefits. G & G claims the Union was assigned only the right to recover for the workers' statutory rights and the workers have no private, statutory rights to sue a subcontractor for unpaid prevailing wages and benefits.

The Union argues the employees transferred to the Union "any and all statutory rights" which include the power to collect the unpaid prevailing wages under section 1774, as well as under a third-party beneficiary theory. We agree with the Union although we differ in our analysis of the statutory basis for standing. We agree with G & G that the rights conveyed by the assignments are limited, for purposes of our discussion, to the workers' statutory rights, but conclude the workers have private statutory rights to recover unpaid prevailing wages under sections 1194 and 1774 and waiting time wages under section 203.

A. The Assignment

The assignments state as follows:

"The undersigned does hereby authorize the filing of Mechanics Liens or Stop Notices, on my behalf with respect to the job site at San Joaquin General Hospital, French Camp, whereon my Employer G & G FIRE SPRINKLER CO., INC. ("G & G") was engaged, and whereon the undersigned worked, for which work I failed to receive payment of state prevailing wages; and further transfers and assigns for purposes of collection, all of my rights and causes of action under the Mechanics Lien Law to Road Sprinkler Fitters Local Union, 669 ("Union"), and does further transfer and assign all interest in and to, any and all parties named therein (owners, awarding bodies, etc.) to said Union. This Assignment includes any and all statutory and private bond rights." (Emphasis added, fn. omitted.)

The trial court found that while the assignment is "less than artfully drafted," it included the workers' statutory rights under section 1774 and any third-party bene-and its sureties bars recovery by the Union against G & G under principles of res judicata.

This claim has no merit. The doctrine of res judicata, or "claim preclusion," gives preclusive effect to former judgments on the merits and bars relitigation of the same cause of action in a subsequent suit between the same parties or parties in privity with them. (Mycogen, supra.) The doctrine promotes judicial economy by limiting multiple litigation. (Ibid.; 7 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (4th ed. 1997) Judgment, § 280, p. 820.) In Mycogen, the Supreme Court held that a final judgment in an action for declaratory relief and specific performance is a bar to a separate subsequent action for damages on the same underlying claim.

The defense of res judicata must be pleaded and proven. Failure to properly raise it in the trial court waives it. (7 Witkin, supra, Judgment, §§ 281, 291, pp. 821, 836–837.) G & G waived this claim by failing to raise it in the trial court. Moreover, among the many hurdles that G & G would have to overcome to successfully assert this defense would be to establish privity of interest between the DLSE and the Union.

" '[P]rivity involves a person so identified in interest with another that he represents the same legal right.' " (Zaragosa v. Craven (1949) 33 Cal.2d 315, 318, 202 P.2d 73; 7 Witkin, supra, Judgment, § 392, p. 961.) G & G must also establish identity of claim. (Mycogen, supra.) As we discuss ante, the legal claims and factual issues raised and litigated in the suit by DLSE against Perini and its sureties were significantly different from those claims and issues raised by the Union as the workers' assignee against G & G. (See fn. 13.)

ficiary theory based on the prevailing wage contract.

[6–8] Because the assignment is a written instrument, in the absence of parol evidence we review the assignment independently, looking to the language of the assignment. (Parsons v. Bristol Dev. Co. (1965) 62 Cal.2d 861, 865–866, 44 Cal.Rptr. 767, 402 P.2d 839; Gifford v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 88 Cal.App.4th 801, 806, 106 Cal.Rptr.2d 164.) By its own terms, the assignment is limited to the filing of Mechanics' Liens and Stop Notices, and for purposes of collection, "all ... causes of action under the Mechanics Lien Law", and "any and all statutory and private bond rights." (Emphasis added.) Because these rights are expressed in the conjunctive, we understand the causes of action under the "Mechanics Lien Law" to be separate from and not a limitation on "all statutory and private bond rights." For reasons we footnote, the workers have no mechanics lien rights regarding the performance of public work.[11]

[9] For these reasons no doubt, the Union bases its standing to sue G & G on the assignment of "statutory" rights under section 1774 and on a third party beneficiary theory.[12] As discussed more fully in part B, the right to recover prevailing wages under the statutory scheme is separate from the right to recover under the public works contract. At the risk of stating the obvious, the right to recover under the statute arises from the statutory scheme, (§§ 1771, 1774, 1775; see Lusardi Construction Co. v. Aubry (1992) 1 Cal.4th 976, 986–988, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643), while the right to recover on a contract theory arises from the common law right to sue for breach of the express terms of the contract as a third party beneficiary of the public works contract. (Aubry v. Tri–City Hospital Dist. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 962, 971, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317 (Aubry); Tippett v. Terich (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 1517, 1532–1534, 44 Cal. Rptr.2d 862, overruled on other grounds in Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Products Co. (2000) 23 Cal.4th 163, 171, 96 Cal.Rptr.2d 518, 999 P.2d 706; Department of Industrial Relations v. Fidelity Roof Co., supra, 60 Cal.App.4th at pp. 425–426, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465 [a worker has a private common law right of action to recover unpaid wages against a contractor as a third party beneficiary of the public works contract].)[13]

[10] The limited language of the assignments purports to transfer only the right to recover unpaid wages under a statute, not under the contract. No personal or contractual rights are included within the assignment.

11. A mechanic's lien is a procedural device for obtaining payment of a debt owned by a property owner for the performance of labor or the furnishing of materials used in construction. (Civ.Code, §§ 3109–3154.) However, mechanic's liens are not applicable to the performance of a public work. (Civ.Code, § 3109; Department of Industrial Relations v. Fidelity Roof Co. (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 411, 418, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465.) A payment bond is the practical substitute for a mechanic's lien in the public works context when a stop notice is inadequate because insufficient funds remain to be paid by the awarding body. (Id. at p. 423, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465.) A payment bond is required by statute and affords an additional or cumulative remedy. (Ibid.) The assignment therefore assigns to the Union, the right to sue the surety on the payment bond. Because the language regarding the Mechanics Lien Law is without legal effect, it adds nothing to the Union's argument.

12. At oral argument, G & G agreed that "private" modifies "bond rights," to the effect that the assignment is of statutory rights and private bond rights.

13. When seeking recovery for deficiency wages for breach of a public works contract, the plaintiff must plead a common law cause of action for breach of contract and must allege the public works contract, by its terms, requires the payment of prevailing wages. (Aubry, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 971, 9 Cal. Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317.) It has not done so.

[11, 12] The Union argues that because the cases were consolidated by defendants and the issues and facts are identical for the consolidated plaintiffs, "it makes little difference under whose assignment the claimants are cloaked, for the Labor Commissioner may take wage claims without assignment." Aside from the inaccuracy of this claim,[14] we fail to see its relevancy in determining the scope of the assignment, which turns on its terms.

For these reasons, we conclude the assignment is limited to the workers' statutory rights to sue G & G for recovery of unpaid prevailing wages.

B. The Private Statutory Right to Recover Unpaid Prevailing Wages Against the Subcontractor

G & G contends that sections 1774 and 1775 do not create a private right of action to recover unpaid prevailing wages from a subcontractor. It argues the statutory scheme gives DLSE the exclusive statutory right to sue a contractor for unpaid prevailing wages and penalties, that section 1775 details the procedures for suits to recover such wages and penalties, and the statutory scheme makes no mention of suits by individuals.

As discussed above in sub-part A, Browning, Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford assigned the Union their statutory rights to recover unpaid wages. The assignee "stands in the shoes" of the assignor and his rights are no greater than those of the assignor. (Civ.Code, § 1459; Code Civ. Proc., § 368; Rest.2d, Contracts § 336; 4 Corbin § 892 et seq.) We therefore determine whether the workers have a private statutory right to recover unpaid wages from G & G.

The California Prevailing Wage Law is a comprehensive statutory scheme designed to enforce minimum wage standards on construction projects funded in whole or in part with public funds. (§§ 1720–1861; see Lusardi Construction Co. v. Aubry, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 985, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643 (Lusardi); Independent Roofing

14. The legal and factual issues in a suit by the assignee of a worker against the subcontractor are not identical to the legal and factual issues raised in a suit by the DLSE against a contractor. In a suit to recover deficiency wages by the Union as an assignee of an aggrieved worker who is a third party beneficiary of the public works contract, the Union has the burden of proof (Evid.Code, § 500 ["a party has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense that he is asserting"]; Beck Development Co. v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1160, 1205, 52 Cal.Rptr.2d 518), and must establish the factual elements of its standing as a third party beneficiary (Tippett v. Terich, supra, 37 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1531–1532, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 862), the breach of the terms of the contract (Ibid.), and the assignment.

In a suit by the DLSE against a contractor under former section 1775, the only issue to be determined is the contractor's liability for the penalties and deficiency payments, and the contractor has the burden of proving that the penalties and amounts demanded in the action are not due. Additionally, the contractor's liability for penalties is subject to statutory defenses, including his willful failure to pay the correct rates of pay and his knowledge of his or her obligations under the statutory scheme. (§ 1775, Stats.1992, ch. 1342, § 9, pp. 6602–6603.)

Unlike the Union, the DLSE need not obtain an assignment from an aggrieved worker before bringing suit against the contractor on behalf of the worker for recovery of deficiency wages. (§ 96.7; Department of Industrial Relations v. Fidelity Roof Co., supra, 60 Cal.App.4th at pp. 426–427, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465.) In sum, the burden of proof and the legal and factual issues in suits brought by DLSE against a contractor and by the assignee of a worker against a subcontractor are significantly different.

Contractors v. Department of Industrial Relations (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 345, 351, 28 Cal.Rptr.2d 550.)

Under the prevailing wage law, all workers employed on public works costing more than $1,000 must be paid not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages as determined by the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations for work of a similar character and not less than the general prevailing per diem wage for holiday and overtime work. (§§ 1770, 1771, 1772 & 1774; Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 987, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643; O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transp. (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 434, 441, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.) Per diem wages include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, travel time, and subsistence pay as provided for in the applicable collective bargaining agreement. (§ 1773.1, and former § 1773.8, repealed by Stats. 1999, ch. 1224, § 5.) The duty to pay the prevailing wage to employees on a public works project extends to both the prime contractor and all subcontractors. (§ 1774.)

[13] The central purpose of the prevailing wage law is to protect and benefit employees on public works projects. (Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 985, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643; O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation, supra, 55 Cal.App.3d at p. 458, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799.) It also includes several goals which serve "to protect employees from substandard wages that might be paid if contractors could recruit labor from distant cheap-labor areas; to permit union contractors to compete with nonunion contractors; to benefit the public through the superior efficiency of well-paid employees; and to compensate nonpublic employees with higher wages for the absence of job security and employment benefits enjoyed by public employees." (Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 987, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643.)

[14] Former section 1775 authorizes the Department of Labor Standards Enforcement to maintain a civil action to recover deficiency wages and penalties from a contractor on a public works project who fails to pay the prevailing rate to his workers. (§ 1775, as amended by Stats.1992, ch. 1342, § 9, pp. 6602–6603.) However, the remedies specified in section 1775 are not exclusive. (Tippett v. Terich, supra, 37 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1531–1532, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 862.) The DLSE also may file suit on behalf of the workers against the awarding body on a third party beneficiary theory (Aubry, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 971, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317) and against a surety on the payment bond. (Department of Industrial Relations v. Fidelity Roof Co., supra, 60 Cal.App.4th at p. 425, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465.)

[15] Additionally, a worker on a public works project may maintain a private suit against the contractor to recover deficiency wages as a third party beneficiary of the public contract if the contract provides for the payment of prevailing wages. (Tippett v. Terich, supra, 37 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1531–1532, 44 Cal.Rptr.2d 862; Department of Industrial Relations v. Fidelity Roof Co., supra, 60 Cal.App.4th at pp. 425–426, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 465; Aubry, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 971, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317.)

[16] With this background in mind, we turn to the question whether a worker has a private statutory cause of action against a contractor to recover the prevailing wage. While the question has not been decided, it has been discussed. (Aubry, supra, 2 Cal.4th at p. 969, fn. 5, and at p. 972, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317, dis. opn. of Kennard, J.)

In Aubry, a contractor (Lusardi) brought suit for injunctive and declaratory relief against the DLSE seeking a determination the prevailing wage law did not apply to a hospital facility constructed by the contractor for a third party who would sell it to the public hospital district on completion. After the trial court granted summary judgment for the contractor, the DLSE cross-complained against the public hospital district under tort claims provisions of Government Code section 815.6, seeking damages for violation of the prevailing wage law. The district's demurrer to that claim was sustained and the DLSE appealed.

The Supreme Court held that Government Code section 815.6 does not provide a cause of action against a public entity that fails to comply with its obligation under the prevailing wage law. The court reasoned that section 815.6 is part of the Tort Claims Act which does not protect the type of injury arising from the failure to pay prevailing wages, i.e., injuries that " 'would be actionable if inflicted by a private person.' " (Id. at p. 968, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317.)

Justice Kennard, writing in dissent, was of the view the interest injured was one protected in an action between private persons. "The worker can proceed [under section 1194] against the contractor in an action to which no public entity need be a party—an 'action between private persons.' " (Id. at pp. 972, 976, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317.) Responding to the dissent, Justice Panelli writing for the majority, pointed out the Court had not yet decided this issue and dismissed the dissent's view on the grounds that "even if such an action is available, it does not bring the present action within the scope of the Tort Claims Act. Any action by a worker against a contractor for wages must necessarily be based on the worker's contractual relationship with the contractor.... Thus, a worker's action against an employer for unpaid statutorily required wages sounds in contract." (Id. at p. 969, fn. 5, 9 Cal.Rptr.2d 92, 831 P.2d 317.)

This case tenders the issue not reached by the majority in Aubry and we therefore consider the applicability of the provisions of section 1194, which provides as follows:

"(a) Notwithstanding any agreement to work for a lesser wage, any employee receiving less than the legal minimum wage or the legal overtime compensation applicable to the employee is entitled to recover in a civil action the unpaid balance of the full amount of this minimum wage or overtime compensation, including interest thereon, reasonable attorney's fees, and costs of suit." (Emphasis added.)

Section 1194 grants to an employee the statutory right to recover in a civil action for unpaid minimum wages and overtime compensation. (See Ghory v. Al–Lahham (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1487, 1492, 257 Cal. Rptr. 924 [overtime compensation].) In the context of overtime compensation, the court in Earley v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 1420, 1430, 95 Cal.Rptr.2d 57, explained, "[a]n employee's right to wages and overtime compensation clearly have different sources. Straight-time wages (above the minimum wage) are a matter of private contract between the employer and employee. Entitlement to over-time compensation, on the other hand, is mandated by statute and is based on an important public policy.... 'The duty to pay overtime wages is a duty imposed by the state; it is not a matter left to the private discretion of the employer. [Citations omitted.] California courts have long recognized [that] wage and hours laws "concern not only the health and welfare of the workers themselves, but also the public health and general welfare." ' [Citation.]" (Emphasis omitted.)

[17, 18] It is well established that California's prevailing wage law is a minimum wage law (Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Whitsett (1932) 215 Cal. 400, 417–418, 10

P.2d 751; O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Transportation, supra, 55 Cal.App.3d at p. 448, 127 Cal.Rptr. 799; see also People v. Hwang (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 1168, 1181, 31 Cal.Rptr.2d 61), which guarantees a minimum cash wage for employees hired to work on public works contracts. (Department of Industrial Relations v. Nielsen Construction Co. (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 1016, 1026, 59 Cal.Rptr.2d 785.) Like overtime compensation (Earley v. Superior Court, supra, 79 Cal.App.4th at p. 1430, 95 Cal.Rptr.2d 57), the prevailing wage law serves the important public policy goals of protecting employees on public works projects, competing union contractors and the public. (Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at pp. 985, 987, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643.) The duty to pay prevailing wages is mandated by statute and is enforceable independent of an express contractual agreement. (§§ 1771, 1774–1775; Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at pp. 986–987, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643.) Thus, while the obligation to pay prevailing wages arises from an employment relationship which gives rise to contractual obligations and claims (Longshore v. County of Ventura (1979) 25 Cal.3d 14, 22–23, 157 Cal.Rptr. 706, 598 P.2d 866), the duty to pay the prevailing wage is statutory. (§§ 1771, 1774.)

For these reasons we conclude that, because the prevailing wage law is a minimum wage law mandated by statute and serves important public policy goals, section 1194 provides an employee with a private statutory right to recover unpaid prevailing wages from an employer who fails to pay that minimum wage.

C. The Private Statutory Right to Recover Waiting Time Wages

The Union also sought and was awarded waiting time wages under section 203.[15] It compels the prompt payment of earned wages (Triad Data Services, Inc. v. Jackson (1984) 200 Cal.Rptr. 418, 153 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 9), and provides an employee who is discharged or quits with a statutory cause of action against his or her employer if the employer fails to pay earned wages immediately upon the employee's termination. (§ 203; Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. El Camino Hospital Dist. (1970) 87 Cal.Rptr. 476, 8 Cal.App.3d Supp. 30, 35.)

Thus, under section 203, if G & G owed the workers wages at the time their employment terminated and failed to pay them, it is liable to the employee for penalties which the employee has a statutory cause of action to recover.

[19] For these reasons we hold that workers on public works projects have a private statutory right to sue their employer for failure to pay the prevailing wage (§§ 1194, 1771, 1774) and for waiting time wages. (§ 203.) Because workers have private statutory remedies against their employer, the assignment of their "statutory rights" was sufficient to give the Union

15. The version of section 203 governing the instant proceedings, provides as follows:

"If an employer willfully fails to pay, without abatement or reduction, in accordance with Sections 201, 201.5, and 202, any wages of an employee who is discharged or who quits, the wages of such employees shall continue as a penalty from the due date thereof at the same rate until paid or until an action therefor is commenced; but such wages shall not continue for more than 30 days. No employee who secretes or absents himself to avoid payment to him, or who refuses to receive the payment when fully tendered to him, including any penalty then accrued under this section, shall be entitled to any benefit under this section for the time during which he so avoids payment.

Suit may be filed for such penalties at any time before the expiration of the statute of limitations on an action for the wages from which the penalties arise." (Stats.1975, ch. 43, § 1, p. 75, emphasis added.)

standing to sue G & G for recovery of unpaid prevailing wages and waiting times wages.

VI.

Section 203 Waiting Time Wages

G & G contends it is not liable for section 203 waiting time penalties because it paid all of the wages due, its failure to pay the prevailing wage for sprinkler fitters was not willful, and it acted in good faith after requesting guidance from the State. The Union contends section 203 penalty wages were properly imposed. We agree with the Union.

The trial court awarded the Union $32,380 in waiting time penalties under section 203. The purpose of section 203 is to "compel the prompt payment of earned wages...." (Barnhill v. Robert Saunders & Co. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 1, 7, 177 Cal. Rptr. 803 (Barnhill); Mamika v. Barca (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 487, 492, 80 Cal. Rptr.2d 175.) Former section 203 mandates the payment of penalties under the following circumstances: "If an employer willfully fails to pay, without abatement or reduction, in accordance with Sections 201, 201.5, and 202, any wages of an employee who is discharged or who quits, the wages of such employees shall continue as a penalty from the due date thereof at the same rate until paid or until an action therefor is commenced; but such wages shall not continue for more than 30 days." (§ 203, amended by Stats.1975, ch. 43, p. 75, § 1.)

Section 202 provides that when an employee who does not have a written contract for a definite period quits his employment, his wages become "due and payable not later than 72 hours thereafter, unless the employee has given 72 hours previous notice of his or her intention to quit, in which case the employee is entitled to his or her wages at the time of quitting."

[20] Wages are defined to include "all amounts for labor performed by employees of every description, whether the amount is fixed or ascertained by the standard of time, task, piece, commission basis, or other method of calculation." (§ 200, subd. (a).) "Wages" include health benefits (People v. Alves (1957) 320 P.2d 623, 155 Cal.App.2d Supp. 870, 872) and other fringe benefits. (Ware v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal.App.3d 35, 44, 100 Cal.Rptr. 791; Suastez v. Plastic Dress–Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal.3d 774, 780, 183 Cal.Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122.)

[21] Thus, section 203 requires the payment of an additional penalty if the employer willfully fails to comply with section 202. The term "willful" within the meaning of section 203, means the employer "intentionally failed or refused to perform an act which was required to be done." (Barnhill, supra, 125 Cal.App.3d at pp. 7–8, 177 Cal.Rptr. 803, emphasis omitted; Ghory v. Al–Lahham (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1487, 1492, 257 Cal.Rptr. 924.) It does not mean that the employer's refusal to pay wages must necessarily be based on a deliberate evil purpose to defraud workers of wages which the employer knows to be due. (Barnhill, supra, 125 Cal.App.3d at p. 7, 177 Cal.Rptr. 803; Davis v. Morris (1940) 37 Cal.App.2d 269, 274, 99 P.2d 345.)

[22] The evidence was clear. G & G's workers were sprinkler fitters entitled to the prevailing wage for that classification. Because G & G failed to promptly pay these workers their due upon their termination of employment, G & G also owed them penalty wages under section 203.

 See footnote 2, ante.

G & G argues that because it paid its workers more than the prevailing wage as pipe tradesmen, and paid full benefits in cash, it could not be held liable for failure to pay wages or waiting time penalties under section 203. G & G also argues that it paid Browning the full wage and benefits for a fire sprinkler fitter and that a contrary conclusion is not supported by substantial evidence.

[23, 24] In considering G & G's contention, the crucial determination is whether there is substantial evidence in support of the trial court's findings of fact. " '[T]he power of an appellate court begins and ends with the determination as to whether there is any substantial evidence contradicted or uncontradicted which will support the finding of fact.' " (Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon (1971) 3 Cal.3d 875, 881, 92 Cal.Rptr. 162, 479 P.2d 362, orig. emphasis.) It will not reweigh the evidence. (Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr.2d 427, 904 P.2d 834.)

The first of G & G's claims is premised on the factual claim it did not owe the workers the prevailing wage for sprinkler fitters. It ignores the trial court's contrary findings of fact that G & G had erroneously classified its workers as pipe tradesmen, that they should have been classified as fire sprinkler fitters and paid the prevailing wage for that classification. The second claim is also contrary to the trial court's finding that G & G failed to enroll Browning in any of its benefit plans.

[25] A reviewing court begins with the " 'presumption that the record contains evidence to sustain every finding of fact.' " (Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon, supra, at p. 881, 92 Cal.Rptr. 162, 479 P.2d 362.) To overcome the trial court's factual findings, G & G must " 'demonstrate that there is no substantial evidence to support the challenged findings.' . . . A recitation of only defendants' evidence is not the 'demonstration' contemplated under the above rule. [Citation.] Accordingly, if . . .'some particular issue of fact is not sustained, [defendants] are required to set forth in their brief all the material evidence on the point and not merely their own evidence. Unless this is done the error is deemed to be waived.' " (Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon, supra, 3 Cal.3d at p. 881, 92 Cal.Rptr. 162, 479 P.2d 362, emphasis in original.) G & G sets forth only its own evidence, ignoring the trial court's findings and the evidence in support of those findings. It has therefore waived its substantial evidence claim.

[26] Second, G & G claims it did not act willfully in failing to pay the prevailing wage, arguing that "[m]ore than a simple mistake is required to impose the statutory penalties." G & G applies the wrong legal standard and again ignores the factual findings.

[27] An employer's good faith mistaken belief that wages are owed may negate a finding of willfulness. In Barnhill, supra, 125 Cal.App.3d 1, 177 Cal.Rptr. 803, the employee was owed wages upon her discharge but she owed the employer on a debt she incurred. The employer exercised its right of set-off against the employee's wages, bringing the amount due to the employee to zero. The court held the employer did not have a right of set-off and was therefore liable to the employee for wages due at the time of her discharge. Nevertheless, because the question of set-off was one of law and the law was not clear at the time of the employee's discharge, the employer's good faith belief he had a right of set-off negated a finding his nonpayment of wages was willful within the meaning of section 203. (Id. at pp. 8–9, 177 Cal.Rptr. 803.)

By contrast, in the instant case, the trial court found that "G & G's error in classification is clear. Marlowe, Ahoff, and Ledford should have been classified as Fire Sprinkler Fitters and paid the prevailing wage for that classification." The trial court also found that G & G did not act in good faith in determining the workers' classification and failing to pay the proper prevailing wage and benefits. Thus, unlike the employer in Barnhill, G & G did not make a reasonable good faith legal mistake in failing to pay its workers their full wages upon termination of their employment. Moreover, because G & G does not set forth all the material substantial evidence in support of these findings, its substantial evidence claim is waived. (Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon, supra, 3 Cal.3d at p. 881, 92 Cal.Rptr. 162, 479 P.2d 362.)

Third, relying on Lusardi, supra, 1 Cal.4th at pages 996–997, 4 Cal.Rptr.2d 837, 824 P.2d 643, Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Ericsson Information Systems, Inc. (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 114, 129, 270 Cal.Rptr. 75, and Waters v. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 635, 639–642, 237 Cal.Rptr. 546, G & G contends that equity precludes imposition of waiting time penalties because it acted reasonably and in good faith after requesting guidance from the State.

G & G failed to raise this claim in the trial court and has waived it on appeal. (Forman v. Chicago Title Co., supra, 32 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1015–1016, 38 Cal.Rptr.2d 790.) Moreover, for the same reasons discussed above, because it is not supported by the trial court's findings and the substantial evidence in support of those findings, G & G has waived its claim. (Foreman & Clark, Corp. v. Fallon, supra, 3 Cal.3d at p. 881, 92 Cal.Rptr. 162, 479 P.2d 362.) Accordingly, we hold that the trial court's imposition of waiting time wages was proper.

June 17, 1981.

As Modified June 29, 1981.

Actions were brought against the director of the Department of Industrial Relations for writ of mandate and related relief with respect to coverage and wage rate determinations for field surveyors. The actions were consolidated and transferred. The Superior Court, San Francisco County, Eugene F. Lynch, J., entered judgment that the challenged determinations were void and remanded the case. The Department appealed. The Court of Appeal, Caldecott, P.J., held that although the determination of the director of the Department of Industrial Relations that field surveying is performed by the type of worker intended to be covered by the prevailing wage law was a quasi-legislative action and amounted to a regulation, the coverage determination, as integral part of the wage determination process, was exempted from the prior hearing requirements of the APA and thus there was no requirement that the director grant a hearing prior to the determination of the type of work covered.

ment) was asked by an employer group, representing local awarding bodies, whether surveyor classifications were covered under the prevailing wage laws. On May 26, 1977, the director issued a determination that field surveying is performed by the type or classification of worker (certified chief of party, chief of party, rodman/chairman and instrument man) intended to be covered by the Act. (Lab. Code § 1772.) The coverage determination of the director was made in a letter dated the same day, addressed to Paul L. Schoch of Hogan-Schoch & Associates, Inc. (Hogan-Schoch) and signed by Christine Curtis on behalf of the director. The trial court found that, although contained in a letter addressed to a specific firm, the coverage determination of May 26, 1977, had a statewide impact which necessarily applied to all public entities letting contracts for public works and all employers of field survey workers or public work contracts.

Hogan-Schoch protested both the coverage determination and the lack of a hearing and filed a petition for writ of mandate in the Sonoma County Superior Court. On July 13, 1977, at the request of Hogan-Schoch, the department held a hearing on the inclusion of surveyors in the prevailing wage law. This hearing, of course, could not affect the coverage determination of May 26, 1977, because it was held subsequent to its issuance. Nonetheless, on August 5, 1977, the director reaffirmed his initial coverage determination based upon the July 13, 1977 post-hearing.

On August 12, 1977, the director announced that as a consequence of his prior coverage determination he was making a sweeping "wage rate determination" for surveyors throughout northern California. This wage rate determination in fact involved two separate provisions: first, the director purported to establish an "appropriate labor market area" consisting of all 46 northern California counties; and second, he declared that the wage rate prevailing in that "market area" was the San Francisco Bay area wage scale of Operating Engineers Local Union No. 3's (Local 3) "master" collective bargaining agreements. The court below found that "the August 12, 1977 general determination was separate and distinct from the May 26, 1977 general determination."

Both the coverage determination and the wage rate determination were challenged in several lawsuits filed by petitioners Winzler & Kelly, Hogan-Schoch, Western Association of Engineers and Land Surveyors, McGlasson & Associates, Consulting Engineers Association of California, and Siegfried & Associates (hereafter respondents) in several courts around the state. On motion by the department these lawsuits were ordered coordinated as Judicial Council Coordination Proceeding No. 449 (entitled Surveyor Classification Cases).

The trial judge determined that the issuance of the two general determinations was a quasi-legislative action which should be reviewed under Code of Civil Procedure section 1085. He concluded that the director was required under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) (Gov.Code § 11370 et seq.)[1] to hold administrative hearings prior to issuing any of the challenged determinations and that he had failed to do so. Accordingly, he held that the challenged determinations were void and remanded the entire matter to the department for further proceedings consistent with the APA and his order. Judgment was entered accordingly. The appeal at bench has been taken from the judgment.

THE ISSUE

The sole issue presented on appeal is whether the director was required to hold a hearing prior to issuing the determination that the field surveying work was covered by the California prevailing wage law (Lab. Code, § 1720 et seq.).

1. Unless otherwise indicated, all further references will be made to the Government Code. We also note that Government Code sections 11371–11445 were repealed by Stats. 1979, ch. 567, § 2, effective July 1, 1980, and substantially reenacted as Government Code sections 11342–11351. Since the former provisions were in effect all relevant times herein, we cite the former code sections in this opinion.

Before discussing and analyzing the principal issue at bench, as a threshold matter we note that, as the parties themselves concede, there is no constitutional requirement to hold a public hearing in quasi-legislative matters. The parties are also in agreement that prior hearing is not required under the statutes regulating the prevailing wage law
|125 either. Consequently, in order to determine the issue here raised (i. e., whether a prior hearing is required before a coverage determination under the California prevailing wage law) we are compelled to resort to the APA, which establishes minimum procedural requirements applicable to quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial actions by state agencies. In doing so we follow the established principles which hold that the different codes blend into each other and constitute a single statute for the purposes of statutory construction and that the legislative intent may be determined not only from an individual code but the whole body of law. (Pesce v. Dept. of Alcoholic Bev. Control (1958) 51 Cal.2d 310, 312, 333 P.2d 15; American Friends Service Committee v. Procunier (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 252, 260, 109 Cal.Rptr. 22.) The rationale behind this rule is the assumption that the Legislature was aware of the existing, related laws and intended to maintain a consistent body of statutes. (Stafford v. Realty Bond Service Corp. (1952) 39 Cal.2d 797, 805, 249 P.2d 241; Lambert v. Conrad (1960) 185 Cal. App.2d 85, 93, 8 Cal.Rptr. 56.) It follows that in the instant case we must construe the prevailing wage law together with the APA in order to arrive at the determination of whether the Legislature intended that the department hold a public hearing prior to a coverage determination.

With these introductory observations, we now turn to the statutory scheme outlined in the APA. We start with Chapter 4.5 of the APA (§ 11371 et seq.), which applies to the quasi-legislative actions of state agencies. Section 11420 describes the coverage by providing that: "It is the purpose of this article to establish basic minimum procedural requirements for the adoption, amendment or repeal of administrative regulations. Except as provided in Section 11421, the provisions of this article are applicable to the exercise of any quasi-legislative power conferred by any statute heretofore or hereafter enacted, but nothing in this article repeals or diminishes additional requirements imposed by any such statute. The provisions of this article shall not be superseded or modified by any subsequent legislation except to the extent that such legislation shall do so expressly."

"Regulation" is defined in section 11371, subdivision (b), which sets forth in pertinent part that: "'Regulation' means every rule, regulation, order, or standard of general application or the amendment, supplement or revision of any such rule, regulation, order or standard adopted by any state agency to implement, interpret, or make specific the law enforced or administered by it. . . ."

|126 The exceptions referred to in section 11420 are described in section 11421, subdivision (a), which reads in part that: "The provisions of this article shall not apply to any regulation not required to be filed with the Secretary of State under this chapter, and only this section and Section 11422 of this article shall apply to any regulation prescribing an agency's organization or procedure or to an emergency regulation adopted pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section."

|127 The requirements for filing regulations and exceptions to those requirements are set out in section 11380. It spells out in relevant portion that: "Every state agency shall: (a) Transmit to the department for filing with the Secretary of State and with the Rules Committee of each house of the Legislature a certified copy of every regulation adopted by it except one which: (1) Establishes or fixes rates, prices or tariffs. . . . (3) Is directed to a specifically named person or to a group of persons and does not apply generally throughout the State."

Finally, sections 11423 through 11425 detail the applicable notice and hearing requirements. Section 11423 provides that notice must be given "[a]t least 30 days, prior to the adoption, amendment or repeal of a regulation. . . ." Section 11424 outlines the required contents of the notice. Lastly, section 11425 sets forth the hearing requirements by providing in part that: "On the date and at the time and place designated in the notice the state agency shall afford any interested person or his duly authorized representative, or both, the opportunity to present statements, arguments, or contentions in writing, with or without opportunity to present the same orally. The state agency shall consider all relevant matter presented to it before adopting, amending or repealing any regulation."

Thus the aforecited statutory provisions make it clear that the director's coverage determination would be subject to the APA if the following three conditions coexist: (1) the determination is a quasi-legislative action; (2) it amounts to a "regulation" within the meaning of section 11371, subdivision (b); and (3) it is not expressly exempted by either the APA or the prevailing wage law.

In addressing these subissues, first we point out that the parties agreed (and the trial court so found) that the coverage determination in dispute was a quasi-legislative function. We are likewise persuaded that the May 26, 1977 determination of the director constituted a regulation within the purview of the law. As spelled out before, [1127] in the definition of section 11371, subdivision (b), "regulation" includes orders or standards of general application which are adopted by state agencies in order to implement, interpret or make specific the law enforced by such agencies. Clearly, the coverage determination in dispute amounted to a standard of general application because it had a statewide impact and applied not only to the individual firm to which it was addressed but also to all public entities letting contracts for public works and to all employees who engaged the services of field surveying workers on public work projects. The eventuality that the director entitled his action as a "general determination" rather than a "regulation" is of no legal consequence. Whether the action of a state agency constitutes a regulation does not depend on the designation of the action, but rather on its effect and impact on the public. If the action is not only of local concern, but of statewide importance, it qualifies as a regulation despite the fact that it is called "resolutions," "guidelines," "rulings" and the like (State Comp. Ins. Fund v. McConnell (1956) 46 Cal.2d 330, 343, 294 P.2d 440; see also Davies v. Contractors' State License Bd. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 940, 145 Cal.Rptr. 284; City of San Marcos v. California Highway Com. (1976) 60 Cal. App.3d 383, 131 Cal.Rptr. 804).

Moreover, the second criterion of the statutory definition of "regulation" is also present in this case. As appears from the record, the coverage determination of the director was issued for the purpose of interpreting the terms "public works" and "workman" in Labor Code sections 1720 and 1723 and to apply those interpretations to the surveying profession. In sum, since the coverage determination had statewide significance and applicability and was issued to implement, interpret and make specific the prevailing wage law, it undoubtedly qualifies as a "regulation" within the meaning of section 11371 and is subject to the APA unless specifically exempted.

This leads us to the next important issue, i. e., whether the director's action was exempted from the APA's requirements. There are three possible places where such an exemption might be found: in the organic legislation establishing the department, in the prevailing wage law, or in the APA itself.

Section 11421 exempts regulations not required to be filed with the Secretary of State under section 11380. Section 11380, subdivision (a)(1) exempts regulations which inter alia "[e]stablishes or fixes rates, prices or tariffs." While the director's wage determination of August 12, 1977, is exempt under this latter section, there is no specific exemption in section 11380 or any- [1128] where for the director's coverage determination. The trial court concluded "The general determination of May 26, 1977 was a determination of the coverage of the public works law and not an order fixing rates, prices or tariffs as provided in Government Code § 11380, subdivision (a)(1)," so was not exempt.

Appellant argues that the coverage determination should be exempted from the APA requirements because it is part of the rate setting process. Labor Code section 1773 provides the method to be used by the director in determining general prevailing rates. In this determination the director shall fix the rate for each craft, classification or type of work. Thus, the determination of the classification or type of work covered is an essential step in the wage determination process and a rate cannot be fixed without such a determination. As the wage determination process is exempted from the prior hearing requirements of the APA, coverage determination, as an integral part of that process, is also exempted. There is no requirement that the director grant a hearing prior to the determination of the type of work covered.

The judgment is reversed.

Teacher appealed from judgment of the Superior Court, Los Angeles County, Elisabeth E. Zeigler, J., which denied to teacher declaration that he was entitled to be reinstated as head football coach, and an injunction against removing him from that position. The Court of Appeal, Foster, J., assigned, held that: (1) personal attacks by teacher upon principal contained in letter sent in response to principal's reprimand of teacher for deficiencies in performance of his duties, were not protected by the First Amendment so as to prevent principal from disciplining the teacher for such remarks; (2) trial judge could accept testimony of principal that he thought he would have still dismissed teacher from that position even if teacher had not sent letter to him containing remarks both protected and not protected by the First Amendment; therefore any connection between the letter and the principal's decision did not meet the requirement of legal causation; and (3) in view of fact that teacher never sought a hearing for an opportunity to clear his name, and that the only relief sought by teacher in his suit was reinstatement to the position of football coach, issue of whether dismissal of teacher violated his right to due process as a deprivation of a liberty interest without a hearing would not be considered on appeal.

Affirmed.

It is an established principle that a teacher may not be denied a position in retaliation for his exercise of a First Amendment right, even if the teacher has no contractual or statutory right of tenure. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.

In determining whether a teacher has been deprived of a position because of his exercise of a constitutional right, the teacher has the burden of proving that his conduct was constitutionally protected, and that it was a motivating factor in the decision of the employer not to renew his assignment; the employer may negate legal 1700.44. In cases of controversy arising under this chapter the parties involved shall refer the matters in dispute to the Labor Commissioner, who shall hear and determine the same, subject to an appeal within 10 days after determination, to the superior court where the same shall be heard de novo. To stay any award for money, the party aggrieved shall execute a bond approved by the superior court in a sum not exceeding twice the amount of the judgment. In all other cases the bond shall be in a sum of not less than one thousand dollars ($1,000) and approved by the superior court.

The Labor Commissioner may certify without a hearing that there is no controversy within the meaning of this section if he has by investigation established that there is no dispute as to the amount of the fee due. Service of such certification shall be made upon all parties concerned by registered or certified mail with return receipt requested and such certification shall become conclusive 10 days after the date of mailing if no objection has been filed with the Labor Commissioner during that period.

1700.45. Notwithstanding Section 1700.44 of the Labor Code, a provision in a contract providing for the decision by arbitration of any controversy under the contract or as to its existence, validity, construction, performance, nonperformance, breach, operation, continuance, or termination, shall be valid:

(a) If the provision is contained in a contract between an artists' manager and a person for whom such artists' manager under the contract undertakes to endeavor to secure employment,

(b) If the provision is inserted in the contract pursuant to any rule, regulation, or contract of a bona fide labor union regulating the relations of its members to an artists' manager,

(c) If the contract provides for reasonable notice to the Labor Commissioner of the time and place of all arbitration hearings, and

(d) If the contract provides that the Labor Commissioner or his authorized representative has the right to attend all arbitration hearings.

Except as otherwise provided in this section, any such arbitration shall be governed by the provisions of Title 9 (commencing with Section 1280) of Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If there is such an arbitration provision in such a contract, the contract need not provide that the artists' manager agrees to refer any controversy between the applicant and the artists' manager regarding the terms of the contract to the Labor Commissioner for adjustment, and Section 1700.44 shall not apply to controversies pertaining to the contract.

A provision in a contract providing for the decision by arbitration of any controversy arising under this chapter which does not meet the requirements of this section is not made valid by Section 1281 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

PART 7. PUBLIC WORKS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES

CHAPTER 1. PUBLIC WORKS

Article 1. Scope and Operation

1720. As used in this chapter "public works" means:

(a) Construction, alteration, demolition or repair work done under contract and paid for in whole or in part out of public funds, except work done directly by any public utility company pursuant to order of the Public Utilities Commission or other public authority.

(b) Work done for irrigation, utility, reclamation and improvement districts, and other districts of this type. "Public work" shall not include the operation of the irrigation or drainage system of any irrigation or reclamation district, except as used in Section 1778 relating to retaining wages.

(c) Street, sewer or other improvement work done under the direction and supervision or by the authority of any officer or public body of the state, or of any political subdivision or district thereof, whether such political subdivision or district operates under a freeholder's charter or not.

(d) The laying of carpet done under a building lease-maintenance contract and paid for out of public funds.

(e) The laying of carpet in a public building done under contract and paid for in whole or part out of public funds.

(Amended by Stats. 1973, Ch. 77.)

1720.2. For the limited purposes of Article 2 (commencing with Section 1770) of this chapter, "public works" also means any construction work done under private contract when all of the following conditions exist:

(a) The construction contract is between private persons.

(b) The property subject to the construction contract is privately owned, but, upon completion of the construction work, more than 50 percent of the assignable square feet of the property is leased to the state or a political subdivision for its use.

(c) The lease agreement between the lessor and the state or political subdivision, as lessee, was entered into prior to the construction contract.

(Added by Stats. 1974, Ch. 1027.)

1721. "Political subdivision" includes any county, city, district, township, public housing authority, or public agency of the State, and assessment or improvement districts.

(Amended by Stats. 1953, Ch. 1283.)

1722. "Awarding body" or "body awarding the contract" means department, board, authority, officer or agent awarding a contract for public work.

1723. "Workman" includes laborer, workman, or mechanic.

1724. "Locality in which public work is performed" means the county in which the public work is done in cases in which the contract is awarded by the State, and means the limits of the political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is awarded in other cases.

1725. "Alien" means any person who is not a born or fully naturalized citizen of the United States.

1726. The body awarding the contract for public work shall take cognizance of violations of the provisions of this chapter committed in the course of the execution of the contract.

1727. Before making payments to the contractor of money due under a contract for public work, the awarding body shall withhold and retain therefrom all amounts which have been forfeited pursuant to any stipulation in a contract for public work, and the terms of this chapter. But no sum shall be withheld, retained or forfeited, except from the final payment, without a full investigation by either the Division of Labor Law Enforcement or by the awarding body.

1728. In cases of contracts with assessment or improvement districts where full payment is made in the form of a single warrant, or other evidence of full payment, after completion and acceptance of the work, the awarding body shall accept from the contractor in cash a sum equal to, and in lieu of, any amount required to be withheld, retained, or forfeited under the provisions of this section, and said awarding body shall then release the final warrant or payment in full.

1729. It shall be lawful for any contractor to withhold from any subcontractor under him sufficient sums to cover any penalties withheld from him by the awarding body on account of the subcontractor's failure to comply with the terms of this chapter, and if payment has already been made to the subcontractor the contractor may recover from him the amount of the penalty or forfeiture in a suit at law.

1730. Every awarding body that withholds any penalty or forfeiture from any contract payment, for failure of a contractor or subcontractor to comply with any provision of this chapter or any of the labor laws on public works, or with any provision of a contract based on such labor laws, shall at the expiration of 90 days after the completion of the contract and the formal acceptance of the job, transfer all penalties and forfeitures, whether withheld from a progress payment or final payment, to the State Treasurer to become a part of the general fund.

1731. If suit is brought against the awarding body within the 90-day period and formal notice thereof is given to the awarding body within the 90-day period either by service of summons or by registered mail which is received within the 90-day period, the penalties and forfeitures shall be retained by the awarding body pending the outcome of the suit, and be forwarded to the State Treasurer only in the event of a final court judgment against the contractor or his assignee. Otherwise the penalties and forfeitures are subject to any final judgment which is obtained by the contractor or his assignee.

1732. The time for action by the contractor or his assignee for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures is limited to the 90-day period and such suit on the contract for alleged breach thereof in not making the payment is the exclusive remedy of the contractor or his assignees with reference to such penalties or forfeitures.

1733. Suit may be brought by the contractor or his assignee without permission from the State or other authority and is limited to the recovery of the penalties or forfeitures without prejudice to the contractor's or assignee's rights in regard to other matters affecting the contract. No other issues shall be presented to the court in such case and the burden shall be on the plaintiff to establish his right to the penalties or forfeitures withheld. In case the action is not commenced and actual notice thereof received by the awarding body within the 90-day period, the action shall be dismissed on motion of the awarding body.

The Division of Labor Law Enforcement may, upon written request of any awarding body, assist in the defense of such action.
(Amended by Stats. 1957, Ch. 398.)

1734. Any court collecting any fines or penalties under the criminal provisions of this chapter or any of the labor laws pertaining to public works shall as soon as practicable after the receipt thereof deposit same with the county treasurer of the county in whi ich court is situated. Amounts so deposited shall b aid at least once a month by warrant of the county auditor drawn upon requisition of the judge or clerk of said court, to the State Treasurer for deposit in the General Fund.

(Amended by Stats. 1953, Ch. 523.)

1735. No discrimination shall be made in the employment of persons upon public works because of the race, color, national origin or ancestry, or religion of such persons and every contractor for public works violating this section is subject to all the penalties imposed for a violation of this chapter.
(Amended by Stats. 1965, Ch. 283.)

1740. Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter or any other law of this State, except limitations imposed by the Constitution, the legislative body of a political subdivision which has received or is to receive a loan or grant of funds from the Federal Government or a federal department or agency for public works of that political subdivision, may provide in its call for bids in connection with such public works that all bid specifications and contracts and other procedures in connection with bids or contracts shall be subject to modification to comply with revisions in federal minimum wage schedules without the necessity of republication or duplication of other formal statutory requirements.
(Added by Stats. 1957, Ch. 1992.)

Article 2. Wages

1770. The body awarding the contract or authorizing the public work shall determine the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in accordance with the standards set forth in Section 1773, and its determination in the matter shall be final except as provided in Sections 1773.4 and 1773.6. Nothing in this article, however, shall prohibit the payment of more than the general prevailing rate of wages to any workman employed on public work. Nothing in this act shall permit any overtime work in violation of Article 3 of this chapter.
(Amended by Stats. 1953, Ch. 1706.)

1771. Not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the public work is performed, and not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for holiday and overtime work fixed as provided in this chapter, shall be paid to all workmen employed on public works.

This section is applicable only to work performed under contract, and is not applicable to work carried out by a public agency with its own forces. This section is applicable to contracts let for maintenance work.

1772. Workmen employed by contractors or subcontractors in the execution of any contract for public work are deemed to be employed upon public work.

1773. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for holiday and overtime work in the locality in which the public work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract. The holidays upon which such rates shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body, but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workman employed on the project.

In determining such rates, the awarding body shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and such tes as may have been determined for federal public works, within the loc id in the nearest labor arket area. Where such rates do not constitute the r.

actually prevailing in the locality, the awarding body shall obtain and consider further data from the labor organizations and employers or employer associations concerned, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. The rate fixed for each craft, classification or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in such craft, classification or type of work.

If the awarding body determines that the rate of prevailing wage for any craft, classification or type of workman is the rate established by a collective bargaining agreement, the awarding body may adopt such rate by reference as provided for in such agreement and such determination shall be effective for the life of such agreement or until the awarding body determines that another rate should be adopted.

1773.1. Per diem wages shall be deemed to include employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship or other training programs authorized by Section 3093, and similar purposes, when the term "per diem wages" is used in this chapter or in any other statute applicable to public works.

For the purpose of determining such per diem wages for contracts entered into with the state, the representative of any craft, classification or type of workmen needed to execute the contracts entered into with the state shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of the collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. Such agreements shall be filed within 10 days after their execution and thereafter may be taken into consideration pursuant to Section 1773 whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids.

1773.2. The body awarding any contract for public work, or otherwise undertaking any public work, shall specify in the call for bids for the contract, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, what the general rate of per diem wages is for each craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contract.

In lieu of specifying the rate of wages in the call for bids, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body may refer to copies thereof on file at its principal office, which shall be made available to any interested party on request. In the event that the awarding body chooses to refer to a copy of the prevailing rate of per diem wages on file at its principal office, in lieu of specifying them in each call for bids, and in the bid specifications and in the contract itself, the awarding body shall publish its determination of the prevailing rate of wages at least one time in a newspaper of general circulation during each year, and in such event, the awarding body shall cause a copy thereof to be posted at each jobsite.

Note: Stats. 1974, Ch. 876, also contains the following provisions:

SEC. 2. The amendment of this section made by the 1973–74 Regular Session of the Legislature does not constitute a change in, but is declaratory of, existing law.

1773.3. The awarding body of each city, county and city and county shall file, annually, with the Director of Industrial Relations its determination, pursuant to Section 1773 of this code, of general prevailing rates of per diem wages in the locality in which the public work is to be performed. If during any annual period the awarding body determines that there has been a change in any prevailing rate of per diem wages in such locality it shall notify the Director of Industrial Relations within 10 days thereof.

Where the body awarding or authorizing the public work is a state agency, except as provided in Section 1773.6, it shall file, annually, with the Director of Industrial Relations its determination of general prevailing rates of per diem wages for those localities in which public work is to be performed. If during any annual period the state agency determines that there has been a change in any prevailing rate of per diem wages in any locality it shall notify the Director of Industrial Relations within 10 days thereof.

1773.4. Any prospective bidder or his representative, any representative of any craft, classification or type of workman involved, or the awarding body may, within 20 days after commencement of advertising of the call for bids by the awarding body, file with the Director of Industrial Relations a verified petition to review the determination of any such rate or rates upon the ground that they have not been determined in accordance with the provision of Section 1773 of this code. Within two days thereafter, a copy of such petition shall be filed with the awarding body. The petition shall set forth the facts upon which it is based. The Director of Industrial Relations or his authorized representative shall, upon notice to the petitioner, the awarding body and such other persons as he deems proper, including the recognized collective bargaining representatives for the particular crafts, classifications or types of work involved, institute an investigation or hold a hearing. Within 20 days after the filing of such petition, or within such longer period as agreed upon by the director, the awarding body, and all the interested parties, he shall make a determination and transmit the same in writing to the awarding body and to the interested parties.

Such determination shall be final and shall be the determination of the awarding body. Upon receipt by it of the notice of the filing of such petition the body awarding the contract or authorizing the public work shall extend the closing date for the submission of bids or the starting of work until five days after the determination of the general prevailing rates of per diem wages pursuant to this section.

Upon the filing of any such petition, notice thereof shall be set forth in the next and all subsequent publications by the awarding body of the call for bids. No other notice need be given to bidders by the awarding body by publication or otherwise. The determination of the director shall be included in the contract.

(Amended by Stats. 1969, Ch. 301.)

1773.5. The Director of Industrial Relations may establish rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying out the prevailing wage provisions of this article.

(Added by Stats. 1953, Ch. 1706.)

1773.6. Where the body awarding the contract or authorizing the public work is the State Department of Public Works, the Department of General Services, or the State Department of Water Resources or any division thereof, it shall file, quarterly, its determination of general prevailing rates of per diem wages for those localities in which public work is to be performed, in the office of the Director of Industrial Relations, commencing not later than January 10, 1954. Such determination shall be final except as hereinafter provided. If during any quarterly period the Director of Industrial Relations shall determine that there has been a change in any prevailing rate of per diem wages in any locality he shall immediately notify the awarding body of such change and his determination shall be final. Such determination by the Director of Industrial Relations shall not be effective as to any contract for which the notice to bidders has been published.

5—88533

1773.7. The provisions of Sections 1773.4 and 1773.5 shall not apply to the State Department of Public Works, the Department of General Services, or the State Department of Water Resources or any division thereof.
(Amended by Stats. 1963, Ch. 1786.)

1773.8. The body awarding any contract for public work shall include in the specifications for the contract a requirement requiring the payment of travel and subsistence payments to each workman needed to execute the work, as such travel and subsistence payments are defined in the applicable collective bargaining agreements filed in accordance with this section.

To establish such travel and subsistence payments for contracts entered into with the state, each city, county and city and county, the representative of any craft, classification or type of workman needed to execute the contracts shall file with the Department of Industrial Relations fully executed copies of collective bargaining agreements for the particular craft, classification or type of work involved. Such agreements shall be filed within 10 days after their execution and thereafter shall establish such travel and subsistence payments whenever filed 30 days prior to the call for bids.

1774. The contractor to whom the contract is awarded, and any subcontractor under him, shall pay not less than the specified prevailing rates of wages to all workmen employed in the execution of the contract.

1775. The contractor shall, as a penalty to the State or political subdivision on whose behalf the contract is made or awarded, forfeit twenty-five dollars ($25) for each calendar day, or portion thereof, for each workmen paid less than the stipulated prevailing rates for such work or craft in which such workman is employed for any public work done under the contract by him or by any subcontractor under him. The difference between such stipulated prevailing wage rates and the amount paid to each workman for each calendar day or portion thereof for which each workman was paid less than the stipulated prevailing wage rate shall be paid to each workman by the contractor, and the body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation that the provisions of this section will be complied with.

To the extent that there is insufficient money due a contractor to cover all penalties forfeited and amounts due in accordance with this section, or in accordance with Section 1813 of this chapter, and in all cases where the contract does not provide for a money payment by the awarding body to the contractor, the awarding body shall notify, provided that in the case of a workman claiming the difference between the prevailing wage rate and the amount paid him the awarding body has first been given the notice mentioned in Section 1190.1 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Division of Labor Law Enforcement of such violation and the Division of Labor Law Enforcement, if necessary with the assistance of the awarding body, may maintain an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the penalties and the amounts due provided for herein. Such action shall be commenced not later than 90 days after the filing of a valid notice of completion in the office of the county recorder in each county in which the public work or some part thereof was performed, or not later than 90 days after acceptance of such public work, whichever last occurs. No issue other than that of the liability of the contractor for the penalties allegedly forfeited and amounts due shall be determined in such action, and the burden shall be upon the contractor to establish that the penalties and amounts demanded in such action are not due.

Out of any money withheld or recovered or both there shall first be paid the amount due each workman and if insufficient funds are withheld or recovered or both to pay each workman in full the money shall be prorated among all such workmen.
(Amended by Stats. 1963, Ch. 467.)

1776. Every contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate record showing the name, occupation, and the actual per diem wages paid to each workman employed by him in connection with the public work. The record shall be kept open at all reasonable hours to the inspection of the body awarding the contract and to the Division of Labor Law Enforcement.
(Amended by Stats. 1949, Ch. 127.)

1777. Any officer, agent, or representative of the State or of any political subdivision who wilfully violates any provision of this article, and any contractor, or subcontractor, or agent or respresentative thereof, doing public work who neglects to comply with any provision of Section 1776 is guilty of a misdemeanor.

1777.5. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the employment of properly indentured apprentices upon public works.

Every such apprentice shall be paid the standard wage paid to apprentices under the regulations of the craft or trade at which he is employed, and shall be employed only at the work of the craft or trade to which he is indentured.

Only apprentices, as defined in Section 3077, who are in training under apprenticeship standards and written apprentice agreements under Chapter 4 (commencing at Section 3070), Division 3, of the Labor Code, are eligible to be employed on public works. The employment and training of each apprentice shall be in accordance with the provisions of the apprenticeship standards and apprentice agreements under which he is training.

When the contractor to whom the contract is awarded by the state or any political subdivision, or any subcontractor under him, in performing any of the work under the contract or subcontract, employs workmen in any apprenticeable craft or trade, the contractor and subcontractor shall apply to the joint apprenticeship committee administering the apprenticeship standards of the craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work for a certificate approving the contractor or subcontractor under the apprenticeship standards for the employment and training of apprentices in the area of the site of the public work. Contractors or subcontractors shall not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards. The ratio of apprentices to journeymen who shall be employed in the craft or trade on the public work may be the ratio stipulated in the apprenticeship standards under which the joint apprenticeship committee operates, but in no case shall the ratio be less than one apprentice for each five journeymen, except as otherwise provided in this section.

The contractor or subcontractor, if he is covered by this section, shall, upon the issuance of the approval certificate, or if he has been previously approved in such craft or trade, shall, employ the number of apprentices or the ratio of apprentices to journeymen stipulated in the apprenticeship standards. Upon proper showing by the contractor that he employs apprentices in such craft or trade in the state on all of his contracts on an annual average of not less than one apprentice to each eight journeymen, the Division of Apprenticeship Standards shall grant a certificate exempting the contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio as set forth in this section. This section shall not apply to prime contracts involving less than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) or 20 working days or to contracts of subcontra not bidding for work t gh a general or prime contractor, involving less t two thousand dollars ($2,000) or fewer than five working days.

"Apprenticeable craft or trade," as used in this section, shall mean a craft or trade determined as an apprenticeable occupation in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council. The joint apprenticeship committee shall have the discretion to grant a certificate exempting a contractor from the 1-to-5 ratio set forth in this section when it finds that any one of the following conditions is met:

(a) In the event unemployment for the previous three-month period in such area exceeds an average of 15 percent, or

(b) In the event the number of apprentices in training in such area exceeds a ratio of 1 to 5, or

(c) If there is a showing that the apprenticeable craft or trade is replacing at least one-thirtieth of its journeymen annually through apprenticeship training, either (1) on a statewide basis, or (2) on a local basis.

(d) If assignment of an apprentice to any work performed under a public works contract would create a condition which would jeopardize his life or the life, safety, or property of fellow employees or the public at large or if the specific task to which the apprentice is to be assigned is of such a nature that training cannot be provided by a journeyman.

When such exemptions are granted to an organization which represents contractors in a specific trade from the 1-to-5 ratio on a local or statewide basis the member contractors will not be required to submit individual applications for approval to local joint apprenticeship committees, provided they are already covered by the local apprenticeship standards.

A contractor to whom the contract is awarded, or any subcontractor under him, who, in performing any of the work under the contract, employs journeymen or apprentices in any apprenticeable craft or trade and who is not contributing to a fund or funds to administer and conduct the apprenticeship program in any such craft or trade in the area of the site of the public work, to which fund or funds other contractors in the area of the site of the public work are contributing, shall contribute to the fund or funds in each craft or trade in which he employs journeymen or apprentices on the public work in the same amount or upon the same basis and in the same manner as the other contractors do, but where the trust fund administrators are unable to accept such funds, contractors not signatory to the trust agreement shall pay a like amount to the California Apprenticeship Council. The contractor or subcontractor may add the amount of such contributions in computing his bid for the contract. The Division of Labor Law Enforcement is authorized to enforce the payment of such contributions to the fund or funds as set forth in Section 227.

The body awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract stipulations to effectuate this section. Such stipulations shall fix the responsibility of compliance with this section for all apprenticeable occupations with the prime contractor.

In the event a contractor willfully fails to comply with this section, such contractor shall be denied the right to bid on a public works contract for a period of six months from the date the determination is made.

The interpretation and enforcement of this section shall be in accordance with the rules and procedures prescribed by the Apprenticeship Council.

All decisions of the joint apprenticeship committee under this section are subject to the provisions of Section 3081.

(Amended by Stats. 1974, Ch. 965.)

1777.6. It shall be unlawful for an employer or a labor union to refuse to accept otherwise qualified employees as indentured apprentices on any public works, solely on the ground of the race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, or sex of such employee.

1778. Every person, who individually or as a representative of an awarding or public body or officer, or as a contractor or subcontractor doing public work, or agent or officer thereof, who takes, receives, or conspires with another to take or receive, for his own use or the use of any other person any portion of the wages of any workman or working subcontractor, in connection with services rendered upon any public work is guilty of a felony.

1779. Any person or agent or officer thereof who charges, collects, or attempts to charge or collect, directly or indirectly, a fee or valuable consideration for registering any person for public work, or for giving information as to where such employment may be procured, or for placing, assisting in placing, or attempting to place, any person in public work, whether the person is to work directly for the State, or any political subdivision or for a contractor or subcontractor doing public work is guilty of a misdemeanor.

1780. Any person acting on behalf of the State or any political subdivision, or any contractor or subcontractor or agent or representative thereof, doing any public work who places any order for the employment of a workman on public work where the filling of the order for employment involves the charging of a fee, or the receiving of a valuable consideration from any applicant for employment is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Article 3. Working Hours

1810. Eight hours labor constitutes a legal day's work in all cases where the same is performed under the authority of any law of this State, or under the direction, or control, or by the authority of any officer of this State acting in his official capacity, or under the direction, or control or by the authority of any municipal corporation, or of any officer thereof. A stipulation to that effect shall be made a part of all contracts to which the State or any municipal corporation therein is a party.

1811. The time of service of any workman employed upon public work is limited and restricted to 8 hours during any one calendar day, and 40 hours during any one calendar week, except as hereinafter provided for under Section 1815.

(Amended by Stats. 1963, Ch. 964.)

1812. Every contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate record showing the name of and actual hours worked each calendar day and each calendar week by each workman employed by him in connection with the public work. The record shall be kept open at all reasonable hours to the inspection of the awarding body and to the Division of Labor Law Enforcement.

1813. The holidays upon which such rates shall be paid need not be specified by the awarding body, but shall be all holidays recognized in the collective bargaining agreement applicable to the particular craft, classification or type of workman employed on the project.

In determining such rates, the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations shall ascertain and consider the applicable wage rates established by collective bargaining agreements and such rates as may have been predetermined for federal public works, within the locality and in the nearest labor market area. The rate fixed for each craft, classification or type of work shall be not less than the prevailing rate paid in such craft, classification or type of work.
